NEXT SUNDAY Men's Day

June 13 is "Everybody's Day." A big program will be given at that time.

OLD AND NEW GRADS MINGLED

entirely gotten away from that method, consequently I make this appeal to our guests, the class of 1920:

Why wear out nerves in a busy shop?

Where the whirl of machinery will never stop.

Why keep your eye on the traffic cop?

You are the man who is on top,

Down on the farm.

Why pass your days in a crowded flat?

(It's awful if you are inspired to be fat)

With scarcely room to hang your hat.

There's room for all plus a dog and cat,

Down on the farm

Why expose yourself to the gossipy tongue?

Why take the chance of getting stung?

Why not get out and fill each lung

With the country air, 't will keep you young?

Down on the farm.

Why strive to be a social queen?

And in the limelight always seen?

Why not stroll in the meadows green

Or ride in the farmer's limousine?

Down on the farm.

Why be a lawyer with musty old books?

Why be a chef; there are cooks and cooks?

Why be a poet with queer, dreamy looks?

There's rythm in the running brooks.

Down on the farm.

Why be a musician with drums and fife?

Why be a clerk; it's a hum-drum life.

Girls, why dabble in politics, Oh!

The struggle and strife—

When you might become a farmer's wife?

Down on the farm.

Why seek amusement in a cabaret—

So fond of dancing and music gay?

Then listen to this, for I know what I say—

All nature's a-jazz 'ere the break of day

Down on the farm.

Why long for cold slaw like Tipton Budd?

Why pay so much for the lowly spud?

The old cows never lack for cud

And the overall's the proper "dud"

Down on the farm.

Why be a teacher on a starvation wage?

Why risk your reputation on the movie stage?

Why handle people's money in a cashier's cage?

Why not live to a ripe old age

Down on the farm?

Down on the farm, down on the farm,

So happy, so free, so safe from all harm.

Here's luck to you, pluck to you,

Senior class;

Here's health to you, wealth to you, each lad and lass,

Here's hoping the best of your years you may pass

Down on the farm.

Miss Shedd as toastmaster and the others on the program deserve the very highest commendation, and each toast is worthy of very detailed review but space does not permit it. We are pleased, however, to give the program in full
