COUNTY AGRICULTURE NOTES.

Good Seed Wheat.

Sometime ago Mr. John Bill brought in a bunch of Jones' Climax Wheat heads to the County Agent, which were raised by Mr. Bill's son-in-law, Mr. Keen, near Goodland. Tuesday the County Agent had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Keen's home and inspecting the wheat. The wheat shows up fine. It is a long headed, big stiff-strawed variety of wheat. The wheat could be certified as it came from a good seed company and is about 99% per cent pure. Last year the wheat was not fertilized and yielded 22 bushels to the acre. Mr. Keen did not fertilize his wheat this year and the field is yielding a crop that is above the average for this year. Those wishing good seed wheat will find this to be excellent seed.

We are going to try and make this wheat as near as 100 per cent pure as we can by picking out all the mixed heads out of four or five shocks and using this pure seed for a test and seeding plot for next year.

Tractor Demonstration Postponed.

The tractor men feel that the farmers are too busy threshing right now to attend a tractor demonstration, besides bring in their tractor to take part in same. One of the tractors that was going to be put in the demonstration is now pulling a threshing machine and it would be impossible to get it now. So the demonstration is postponed until Saturday afternoon, July 31st, be postponed until a later date. Watch the papers for new date of demonstration.

Poultry Culling Demonstration.

All the ladies should take advantage of the Culling Demonstration to be held on Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1920. One at Mr. Alfred Dugleby's west of Tefft at 9:30 in the forenoon and at Mr. Oscar Huter's in the afternoon at 2:30 two miles south east of Rensselaer.

The following letter was sent to us by the Purdue Poultry Department for the benefit of us all.

"Conditions indicate a profitable year for the hen in Indiana. We hope you obtain your share of the profits.

"May we venture a few suggestions to you? Two or more culling demonstrations will be held in your county by members of our department under the supervision of the county agent. Don't miss the chance to attend one of these because culling the flock can now be done easily, accurately and profitably. You'll save feed, make money, and improve the breeding qualities of your birds.

"Regardless of cost it will be profitable for you to feed your chicks throughout the summer. If hatched in May or later they will mature earlier if fed on meat scraps, tankage or milk along with mill feeds throughout August and September. Keep chicks growing and never starve them, for fall eggs are desirable and profitable.

"Sell all slow growing, undersized males or females now, as broilers. The price will drop faster than will be their gain in weight. Don't plan to breed from slow growing cockerels and later maturing pullets are poor breeders.

"If you are interested in utility judging of poultry, send to us for leaflet on the latest methods and then plan to make an entry in the newly added utility class of the poultry department at the State Fair. Judging hens for past egg production and competition along this line should interest you as farmers.

"Keep up summer egg production by feeding more heavily of mash than you have been doing during the spring. It will retard the molt and keep the hens in good physical condition.

Yours truly,
Purdue Poultry Department."

QUAINT OLD NORWEGIAN CITY

Bergen Known for Many Things Besides Its Proverbial Wetness—Was Home of Ole Bull.

The old Norwegian port of Bergen is known as the rainy city. "Always carry an umbrella in Bergen," is the rule widely followed both by inhabitants and strangers. That the umbrella is an accepted part of the Bergen costume is shown by the extravagant old saying that a man once walked in the streets of Bergen without an umbrella, at which sight the horses were so frightened that they reared and shied and even ran away. In spite of its reputation, Bergen has many beautiful sunny days, when the only reason for wearing an umbrella would be to conform to custom.

Whatever the atmospheric conditions, the fish market of Bergen is the most crowded and noisy place in town. Fishwives are excitedly trying to sell their flapping, wriggling wares to undecided customers, while other buyers and vendors grow heated over the price of herring or trout.

Away from this fascinating scene of confusion, in a quiet little park, is another significant phase of Bergen's interests. Here is a statue of Ole Bull, Norway's great violinist. Ole Bull was born in Bergen, and he now lies in its graveyard. The city's tribute to this genius is this statue of him, standing, as his fellow citizens had so often seen him stand before them, with his violin ready to play, but listening first to the rain and the birds and the talk of men that he might convert them into the language of the violin. This simple statue embodies more truly the spirit of Bergen than its scrambling, money-hoarding markets, or its flippant attitude toward the weather probabilities.

HAVE THEIR OWN LANGUAGE

No Doubt at All That Birds and Beasts Hold Communication With Each Other.

That phrase, "dumb animals," betrays more ignorance of the life around us than any other ever invented by our race, for though no species save man has an articulate language, no one who has watched and attended to the ways of birds and beasts can doubt that they very thoroughly manage to convey to each other their wishes and intentions. Each, in its own way, communicates with its fellows, and if the language is not our language it at any rate serves their purpose exceedingly well. Certainly the amount of individuality that there is among the different specimens of the same species can only be realized by those who have had much to do with wild creatures. No one mammal or bird is ever in character and behavior the exact duplicate of the next; each differs in some way from its neighbor, so you can never depend on any two animals doing exactly the same thing under the same circumstances—in fact, we find that individuality reigns as supreme throughout Nature as it does throughout man, but then, after all, man is a part of Nature.—Frances Pitt in the National Review (England).

Arctic Terns Love the Cold.

For a long time it was thought that the golden plover bore off the palm for length of flight between summer and winter homes, but now that distinction is awarded to the arctic tern. This bird breeds as far north as it can find anything stable on which to construct its nest; it has been found within seven and a half degrees of the pole. And that nest was found surrounded by a wall of newly fallen snow which the mother bird had carefully scooped out from round her chick.

The tern arrives in the far north about June 15, and leaves again for the south toward the end of August, when the young are able to fly strongly. Two or three months later the birds are found skirting the edge of the antarctic continent, 11,000 miles away. What their track is over that vast space no one yet knows.

Mouse Fights Snake.

Everyone has heard of the remarkable combats of the Indian mongoose with venomous snakes, in which little skittish-tavi comes off victor. The fact that the mongoose invariably survives has led to the suggestion that it is immune to snake poison. Other animals said to be immune are the pig and the hedgehog. The experiments of a British naturalist show that an animal of the dormouse family must be added to the list of immune. This animal is known as the bat and is said to fight fiercely with vipers. Large doses of viper's poison were injected into one bat, from which injection no ill effects followed. On one occasion a bat was badly bitten in the eye by a viper and no signs of poisoning followed.

A Gentleman.

A gentleman is full of consideration for others, a foe to violence of opinion or expression; an enemy at the same time of restraint, suspicion, gloom or resentment. He is merciful, gentle and tender; avoids unseasonable allusions or topics; never makes himself prominent in conversation, and suppresses his own egotism. He makes light of the favors which he does and seems to receive while he confers. He is scrupulous in imputing motives, is never mean or little, never takes unfair advantage and never mistreats personalities or abuses for argument.—Cardinal Newman.

Jasper County Friends of the Salvation Army

"A man may be down, but he's never out"

1920 APPEAL

Once a year, and once a year ONLY does this plea come to us.

You know the great good accomplished by this army; the feeding of the hungry; the clothing of the naked; redeeming the fallen; and ministering unto all classes of people.

You remember the glorious part the Salvation Army played in the World War.

Since then, their work for humanity has been quadrupled.

They are dependent on our generosity for means to carry on their good work.

SHALL WE HELP?

WINTER, SPRING OR SUMMER

you can't beat the Franklin Automobile. No freezing or hard starting, no upknee in comparison to average car, no plumbing or cooling troubles, no rattle-ty-bang over rough spots, slow depreciation and no regrets.

The more we travel the Franklin the louder we want to scream out against these fish-brained, featherless, knocking birds that claim they can duplicate Franklin performance with their water cooled money-burning automobiles.

It's always some error of creation who never rode or drove more than a mile in our car. These birds fly too low for our gun. Makes us dizzy to look down on 'em. You tell 'em, owners, you're wise men. We don't claim to have the only automobile—just the best one.

And, brethren, at this meeting we introduce the newest member of the workin' crew. A pace setter for the human race. Made a good mark because he ran on the level. A man at last who says he doesn't want the earth (not even his allotted six feet), a man who says he's going to work as long as he lives and live as long as he works. He sleeps at night and stays wide awake in the day time (yes, even in church).

One has to prosper to stick 20 years in the same business, and he has to stick 20 years to prosper at some business. Jesse, Grim, is the man who stuck. Stuck to his work, and never "stuck," a customer. He's served his sentence of 20 years at hard labor and we have secured his pardon and will help him enjoy it. As usual, his headquarters will be at the lumber office but from now on his hind quarters will be found in a Franklin front seat.
