

ARE THE CHOICE OF THE PEOPLE

DEMOCRATS OF PUTNAM COUNTY NOMINATE A STERLING BUNCH OF CANDIDATES FOR POSITIONS OF TRUST IN THE AFFAIRS OF THE COUNTY IN PRIMARY ELECTIONS ON LAST FRIDAY.

CLOSE RACE FOR EVERYONE

No Candidate Could Count on His Election Till the Last Precinct Was Heard from, and the Last Addition Was Performed by the Clerk. Excitement Friday Night Was Intense Till All Votes Were Counted.

The primary election in Putnam county by the Democratic party is a thing of the past. The nominations have been made. The excitement is over.

Thus, in a few words one might tell of the happenings of last Friday. But it would be a faint picture of what took place. Not for many years has there been such a close race throughout the entire ticket. By noon on Friday the wise ones were all guessing. No one had any idea where any candidate stood. All had hope that the final count would reveal his name at the top as the choice of the party.

It was half past five o'clock when the first returns were telephoned in to the waiting secretary of the County Committee. Mr. Hughes, the secretary, had made preparations for getting the vote in early. He had turned his office into a receiving room, had selected Deputy Auditor Curtis to assist him, and when the call came, was mounted on a high stool by the telephone, ready to take the returns from the precincts.

By six o'clock the room was well filled. Returns began to come in thick and fast, each precinct making a change in the standing of some of the many candidates, so close was the race. Excited men leaned over the shoulder of the recording clerk to watch the figures as they went down. A dozen men, pencil and pad in hand footed the totals. Now and then the friends of some candidate, unable to repress their excitement at some unlooked for vote, would break out into conversation, only to be stopped by Secretary Hughes that he might hear the reports from the phone.

By eight o'clock it was fairly certain that Miller had won the race for treasurer. All the other places were still in doubt. By nine o'clock the nomination for Representative was conceded to be Hostetter's. The other candidates were in doubt till the final report came in from Roachdale about nine fifteen.

According to these unofficial returns Hostetter had won the race Representative; Jasper Miller had the nomination for treasurer; Frank Stroube was the prospective Sheriff; R. J. Gillispie had beaten E. B. Lynch ten votes for Coroner; and Ed. Houek was the man for Commissioner from the 3d District. Although it was recognized that this was unofficial, yet it was looked upon as practically settling the contest.

That most remarkable feature of the evening was the good feeling that prevailed. There is not a defeated candidate but is ready to take off his coat and aid in the election of his onetime rival for the nomination. The Democratic party never nominated a stronger ticket, nor was ever more unanimous in the intent to roll up a large vote for these men in the elections next fall.

"THE HEART OF CHRISTIANITY."
Dr. Hoagland will discuss the above theme Sunday morning in the College Avenue church. He will try to show what is really vital in the Christian religion. He extends a special invitation to all men who are bothered about creeds, theologies and the like, to hear the sermon.

ALEC LANE IS CHAIRMAN

Democratic Central Committee Met at One O'Clock This Afternoon and Chose Leader for the County Organization—Only One Ballot Taken.

HIS ELECTION WAS UNANIMOUS

Alec Lane was elected county chairman by the Democratic Central committee this afternoon. The committee met at the court house at one o'clock. Only one ballot was necessary for an election.

The ballot was taken without any

ALEC LANE.
Newly Elected Democratic County Chairman.

Nominations being made for the office. Each member of the committee voted for the man of his choice. W. L. Denman and Charles Kelly were the other men voted for. Mr. Lane, however, had a majority and was elected. The election was made unanimous.

WAS VISITED BY BURGLARS

Another daring robbery was committed at the Alpha Chi House Thursday night. For some reason the sorority house is a favorite place for burglars as the place was twice entered during the fall term.

The young ladies are entirely in the dark concerning the last robbery, but think it must have taken place during the supper hour. Some one was in the house all day and this seems the most likely time, although some of the girls were on the second floor even at this time. The intruders had to enter the front door, all the others being locked, and after reaching the second floor it is thought that they were frightened, this causing them to make for the third floor.

On the third floor they searched the rooms of Misses Pauline Thomas and Harriett Lessig. They carried off a large purse of Miss Thomas, containing fifteen dollars in bills and a small pocket book belonging to Miss Lessig in which was ten dollars. The robbery was not discovered until after ten o'clock and nothing was left to give even a faint suggestion as to the clue.

The members of the sorority are sure that the thieves are familiar with the house and the hours when they are the most likely to be undisturbed. A close watch will be kept and every effort made to discover the intruders.

THE GREENCASTLE SCHOOLS

The city's schools have made four months of history this school-year. The attendance has been good—very good. This means that the interest has been first rate and the progress excellent. The great majority of the pupils are exceedingly regular in attendance. The per cent. for the four months averages 97.15. The bulk of the absence has been made by a very few pupils. By omitting from the count the records of one in twenty of the worst pupils for irregularity, the per cent. of attendance would be above 99. The record for the fourth month, a month divided by the holidays—is up close to the average, 97.

The following table contains by schools the per cent. of attendance, the per cent. absolutely punctual, and the tardy list:

School	Attend.	Punct.	Tardies.
All the Schools	97.1	64.2	35-43
High School	97.1	64.4	0-0
4th Year	96.4	62.5	0-0
3rd Year	97.0	57.1	0-0
2nd Year	98.0	70.2	0-0
1st Year	96.7	61.9	0-0
Dist. No. 1	97.5	65.5	7-8
Grades 8 & 7	98.3	72.2	0-0
Grades 6 & 5	96.9	61.0	2-2
Grades 4 & 3	97.7	66.7	3-3
Grades 2 & 1	97.3	63.8	2-2
Dist. No. 2	96.8	66.5	9-10
Grades 8 & 7	97.5	64.1	2-2
Grades 6 & 5	97.0	76.7	3-3
Grades 4 & 3	94.9	63.4	0-0
Grades 2 & 1	97.0	61.5	4-5
Dist. No. 3	97.2	64.2	19-25
Grades 8 & 7	99.0	70.6	3-4
Grades 6 & 5	97.5	54.0	4-4
Grades 4 & 3	96.1	64.6	6-7
Grades 2 & 1	96.8	56.5	6-10

The highest per cent. of attendance by any school is 99 made by the 7's & 8's of District No. 3. The picture goes to this school for the fifth month. The 7's did most in securing it; their per cent. is 99.3. Miss Stone's First Graders, 30 in number made a fine showing as to attendance—per cent 99.

THE TICKET IS RATIFIED

ENTHUSIASTIC MASS MEETING OF DEMOCRATS AT THE COURT HOUSE THIS MORNING AT WHICH THE OFFICIAL RESULT OF THE PRIMARY ELECTION WAS ANNOUNCED.

SPEECHES BY THE CANDIDATES

Assembly Room Crowded to Capacity—Defeated Men Declare Themselves as Heartily in Favor of the Ticket and Harmony and Good Feeling Prevails.

Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning Acting County Chairman William B. Vestal called to order the Democratic Mass meeting in the assembly room of the court house. The object of the meeting was to receive the official vote of the primary election of Friday.

Immediately after calling the meeting to order a roll call of the different townships was called and the vote for each township read aloud. This was recorded by Dr. Jerome King and Benton S. Curtis, clerks. After the roll call and during the time it took the clerks to figure up the exact vote and get the exact majority several of the different candidates were called upon for talks.

D. B. Hostetter, nominated for Representative, was the first called for. Mr. Hostetter spoke briefly. He assured the people that he would act in their best interests, as far as he knew how, when elected to the office for which he is now candidate. D. C. Brackney and Theodore Crawley his opponents in the race for the nomination, also spoke. They assured the Democracy that they would work for Mr. Hostetter in the coming election and aid Democracy in every way possible.

Jasper Miller, nominated for Treasurer, and one of his opponents, James Hurst, then spoke. Both thanked the people for their support and Mr. Miller, who spoke first complimented his opponents upon the fair manner in which they had conducted their campaigns. When Mr. Hurst arose he stated that he had arranged a speech for the occasion but that Mr. Miller got to use it. He said that although defeated he greatly appreciated the support of his friends and that now that the primary was over he was for Jasper Miller and the entire ticket.

Frank Strohe, nominated for Sheriff, Ed. Houek, nominated for Commissioner, Dave Skelton, Theodore Boes, Alcaney Farmer and Edward Eltelborg also made good "harmonious" talks. The latter announced that he would be a candidate for sheriff at the next Democratic Primary. After this the official vote as tabulated in another column of this paper was read and Chairman Vestal declared the winners in each race the Democratic nominee candidate for the November election. The best feeling prevailed during the entire meeting and every one seemed satisfied.

WILL GIVE CONCERT HERE

Although it was at first thought that the concert would be given next week, it was officially announced last night that definite arrangements had been made whereby the DePauw Glee Club would appear in Meharry Hall, Wednesday, January 22.

Special preparations are being made for this engagement and the home concert will no doubt be the best of the club's rendition. Professor Rufus V. vonKleinsmid who has the young men in charge expects to have them in perfect condition for this concert. The management is making arrangements to have the club appear at Indianapolis, Danville, Ind., and Brazil this term so as to keep the club in shape for the spring trip. Already a number of applications for the club have been received and the ten days' trip through Northern Indiana from March 15 to 25 will no doubt be a successful one.

The personnel of the club this year is as follows:
Prof. Rufus Bernhard vonKleinsmid, Director and Accompanist, Mr. Earl Rudolph Hunt, Violinist, Mr. Leonard Gustavo Nattemper, Reader, Mr. Paul Peter Willis, Cartoonist, Mr. Jay Vincent Carpenter, Cornetist First Tenor, Mr. Paul S. Hender-

BOTH NEGROES IN THE HOSPITAL

Whisky and jealousy caused a tragedy in the rear of Mrs. Allen's boarding house at 1205 Park avenue last night, and Marion Jones, a negro, and Ida Ernst, a colored servant girl, the latter employed by Mrs. Allen, are both in the City Hospital with bullet wounds in their breasts inflicted by Jones. Both are in a critical condition, and their deaths are expected.

Jones was formerly employed as a servant about the boarding-house and was discharged some time ago. While there he met the colored woman and began paying attentions to her. Recently the woman would not have any thing to do with Jones. When the negro got drunk yesterday he began to brood over his grievances and by nightfall was in a mental condition favorable to murder.

He got a revolver of his brother-in-law, in Arch street. He declared he intended to kill Ida Ernst and he made his way to the Park-avenue house.

The servant girl was in a small house used for servants' quarters in the rear of the boarding-house and Jones met her at the door.

"I've got to kill you, Ida," cause yuh done threw me down," was the negro's remark as he leveled the weapon and pulled the trigger. When the woman fell in the doorway, Jones placed the weapon at his own breast and again pulled the trigger. The negroes were taken away in the City Dispensary ambulance.—Indianapolis News.

Ida Ernst is a daughter of Berry Ernst of this city. She has been in Indianapolis for several years and has been mixed up in several shooting scrapes before.

THE MONEY QUESTION.

An Inquisitive Youngster and an Ingenious Father.

"Papa," began Gunston junior, "when the government of the United States began to coin gold and silver money it was necessary to buy the gold and silver, wasn't it?"

"Yes, my son," replied Gunston senior rather cautiously.

"Of course, papa," resumed the youngster, "you'll be able to tell me where the government got the money to buy the gold and silver."

"Why—er—of course," stammered Gunston senior as he put down the paper and gazed thoughtfully at the boy. "Now, let me understand you. The government wanted to coin money, and in order to do so it was necessary to purchase gold and silver. You want to know where the government got the money to buy the gold and silver?"

"That's right," chuckled Gunston junior gleefully, and a great joy filled his being as he thought of his all important sire struggling with the simple question.

"Why, sonny, the government simply issued dollar bills and bought gold and silver with them. Anything else?"

"Yes," said Gunston junior. "Where did the government get money to buy paper for the dollar bills?"—Harper's Weekly.

THE HORSE WON.

Beat the First Locomotive on the B. and O. Road.

The first locomotive on the Baltimore and Ohio had sails attached. So did the cars. These sails were hoisted when the wind was in the right direction so as to help the locomotive.

The rivalry between the railroads using locomotives and those using horses was very bitter. In August, 1830, an actual trial of speed was held between a horse and one of the pioneer locomotives, which did not result in favor of the locomotive. The race was on the Baltimore and Ohio, the locomotive being one built by Peter Cooper, who also acted as engineer.

The horse, a gallant gray, was in the habit of pulling a car on a track parallel to that used by the locomotive. At first the gray had the better of the race, but when he was a quarter of a mile ahead Mr. Cooper succeeded in getting up enough steam to pass the horse amid terrific applause.

At that moment a band slipped from a pulley, and "though Mr. Cooper lacerated his hands trying to replace it, the engine stopped and the horse passed it and came in the winner."—Van Norden Magazine.

They Don't Like Funerals.

"If you want to know just how sensitive some Washington folks are, listen to the reasons some of our tenants give for canceling their leases," said a renting agent. "Here are the complaints from five families who want to move because they live on 'funeral streets.' A lot of people, it seems, are sensitive about that. There are certain streets in town—those near churches where many funerals are held and those leading to the various cemeteries—which are usually traveled by funeral parties. Houses in those streets are becoming a poor investment. There is more moving from those houses than from any others we have anything to do with, and generally the movers give as the reason for their dissatisfaction the fact that the sight of so many hearsees gets on their nerves."—Washington Star.

The Saragossans.

It is said that the queer, composite race of people that dwell upon the waterlogged bulks of the Saragossa sea, in the mid-Atlantic, have a pretty theory about death. They believe that those to whom the messenger comes when the sun is shining brightly are transported straight away to a heaven of warm fresh water only four feet in depth, in which they may wade and transport themselves to all eternity. On the other hand, those who receive the call of death in hours of darkness must needs endure a probationary period before they can enter into the future life. The Saragossans are in addition firm believers in premonitions, omens and foreordinations.

Instincts of a Woman.

A little girl who had for some time wanted a dog was taken very ill. One day when much better she told her mother of her desire and begged her to ask her grandpa to buy her one. The mother answered that grandpa did not like dogs and probably would not be willing to buy one. Then, seeing the little invalid look sadly disappointed, she said, "Well, wait till you get well, my dear, then we will see."

"Oh, no," answered the child, whose few years had taught her some wisdom. "The more sick I am the more likely he will be to buy it for me."—Exchange.

Hoarding.

Hoarding is not only an economic mistake, but an economic crime as well. It is, in fact, a survival of the evil days of maladministration. It comes down to us from the time when nearly all governments were conquerors which considered themselves entitled to plunder their subjects. Thus hoarding is founded upon distrust of the government.—Statesman, Calcutta.

Reverse Action.

The Elder Matron—You shouldn't mind the baby crying a little. It strengthens his lungs. The Younger Matron—Oh, no doubt, but it weakens his father's religion so!—Indianapolis Journal.

If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.—Rogers.

WHEN BEN CAME HOME.

By LESTER ROSE.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

Vesta sank wearily upon a shoe box and gazed forlornly about her. The last of the packing was accomplished. The last nail had been driven home into the shoe box, which contained the books that were to be kept out for the new home. The rest of the beloved library remained in the cases, gaps showing where the selections had been made.

The corner of the lower shelf had been the resting place of the blue and silver "Pilgrim's Progress" ever since Vesta could remember, a book to be taken out Sunday afternoons and carried to the gentle mother, who patiently explained time after time the meaning of the fascinating woodcuts.

There was a very large gap where the encyclopedias had been. She had bought those with the eggs and butter money. As her eyes roamed over the partly filled cases she could fill every gap from memory.

And as it was with the books, so was it with the rest of the household belongings. Here and there a blank corner reminded her of some familiar object now stacked in the wood shed. Very little was to be shipped, for the way was far and freight rates were high. Tomorrow the neighbors would gather and John Berwin would hang out the red flag. By nightfall the house would be emptied and its contents scattered through the farmhouses for miles around.

Tears came unbidden to Vesta's eyes as she looked about. Her earliest memories were of the homely living room with its rag carpet and the comfortable rocking chairs on either side of the stove in winter or standing in front of the north windows in summer, when the double sashes were taken down and the wind blew through the house, softly scented by the blooms from the orchard on the other side of the well kept fence.

It was the only home Vesta had ever known. It seemed to the tired girl that she could never learn to love another half so well.

Until her mother's death Vesta had been shielded from all troubles. After she had come back from the little burial ground on a hill she had found occupation and forgetfulness in her efforts to make her father forget his loss. She had even refused to marry Ben Folsom because she had considered it her duty to stay by her father and comfort him in his sorrow.

Ben had gone west and she was left more than ever alone. Then had come that terrible day, a year and a week after her mother's death, when her father had driven into the yard with Sadie Connors, who had been teaching school over at the corners, and had announced his marriage.

Vesta tried to learn to love this gaunt, bustling woman, whose every trait was the antithesis of the woman whose place she took, but the new Mrs. Brewster had repulsed every advance. She hated young persons. She had married to be rid of them, and she treated the stepdaughter with scant courtesy.

The ways of the household were amended to suit her radical tastes. The old rockers were sent to the attic as too old fashioned and two upholstered monstrosities had taken their places. The other memorials of Vesta's mother quickly followed the rockers to the garret, and the house was completely changed in appearance, as were the occupants in their attitude toward each other.

And now even the old homestead was to be given up. The fertile farm was to be sold and the household goods to be auctioned off. Mrs. Brewster had decided that the northwest offered greater opportunities for her husband, and they were to move to Manitoba and start afresh in the wheat belt.

Mrs. Brewster bustled into the room. "Come and eat some supper," she commanded. "Don't sit there looking as though you were too weak to walk. I've done twice as much as you have today, and I got the supper, too, but I don't look half as tired as you do."

Stop mooning here in the dark, and come out and have a cup of tea."

"I don't feel like eating," answered Vesta, the sobs rising in her throat. To this woman the abandonment of the home meant nothing. She could not understand what it meant to the girl.

Mrs. Brewster turned away. "You'll be hungry by and by," she said sharply. "There'll be some cold things in the pantry, but I'm not going to make any more tea."

She hustled out and left Vesta to herself. Wearily the girl rose from the box and left the house. She could hear her father laughing and joking with her stepmother, and the noise of mirth fell offensively upon her ears.

The dusk was deepening to dark and the air was chill, but Vesta did not feel the need of a shawl. She wandered down the road, past the white gate to the little bridge that spanned the creek.

Here she loved to lean upon the rail and watch the sunset over the fertile fields. The sun had long since dropped below the hills, but the girl's overwrought imagination could conjure up the scenes of the past. She leaned upon the rail and looked out across the fields, now bristling with the frost kissed stubble. She could see again the glories of the waning day. She could almost hear a voice whispering in her ear.

Her hands clutched the rough bark of the wood as in memory she lived over that night when she had sent Ben Folsom away because she thought it her duty to remain with her father and console him for his loss. She thought of the sharp faced woman who was sitting opposite him at the kitchen table discussing their new home in the west, and then she thought of the gentle faced woman who still lived in her daughter's heart, if not in her husband's.

So lost was she in her thoughts that she never heard the quick tread of an approaching pedestrian nor heeded his presence until a brown hand closed over her slender fingers.

"Did I startle you?" demanded Ben as she started back with a cry. "I was on my way to your house. I got in this afternoon and heard the news. Do you want to go to Canada, Vesta?"

"I would rather die," she murmured passionately. "It is like a second burial to go away and leave mother up there on the hill all alone."

"And your father?" he asked gently. "Do you still feel that he needs you more than I do?"

"How much do you need me?" she demanded shyly.

"So much that I have come almost across the continent to ask you again if you will marry me," he declared. "I have done well out west—far better than I anticipated. I can buy the farm. Perhaps we can arrange with your father to buy the furniture, too, and we will make a new home where the old one was. Are you willing, dear?"

"Not for the sake of a home," said Vesta softly, "but because you want me, Ben, and—because I want you, too, dear."

Wooing the Fickle God.

"I have been troubled with insomnia all my life," remarked the nervous man, "and, like most people similarly afflicted, I have tried all the familiar dodges to induce sleep. The results were never particularly satisfactory in the way of producing the desired effect until one night I thought I had actually found a sleep inducer when I chanced to grasp one of the rods at the head of my bed with both hands and practically hung the weight of my body on it. That sent me to sleep, and it did the same thing for a few times, when, to my extreme disappointment, I found it had ceased to work. I was as badly off as ever recently until one night, when I had a bad cough, as well as an attack of sleeplessness, I tried the well known remedy of trying to send myself off into the land of Nod by taking long, deep breaths. What it did to me and has done several times since was not to only send me to sleep, but to stop my cough completely before I lost consciousness. Just why it did so is not of much consequence. That it did so is the thing that concerns me most."—New York Press.

Etiquette of the Flag.

The army regulations of the United States provide that the flag at every post shall be raised at reveille each morning and lowered each evening at sunset, while the soldiers stand at salute and the band plays "The Star Spangled Banner."

The flag is never left out overnight for any reason, except perhaps one. When a fort or military post is actually under fire from the enemy the flag may wave defiantly until hostilities are over. This was poetically exemplified in Key's immortal song, wherein one line has it, "Through the night our flag was still there!"

At all army posts, moreover, there is a special storm flag, half as large as the regular post flag, which is flown in stormy and windy weather.

Another regulation is that on all occasions when the flag is displayed at half mast it shall be lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is hoisted to the top of the staff before it is finally lowered.—Harper's Weekly.

Smoking In Clubs.

The question of smoking was a burning one in the mid-nineteenth century, and it was not until 1845 that White's gave up a room to the users of tobacco, and in all clubs the smokers were relegated to the most dismal apartments. It was King Edward when Prince of Wales who broke through the tradition, and when White's refused to extend the accommodation for smokers started the Marlborough, wherein smoking was permitted in every part of the house but the dining room.—London Chronicle.

LAFADIO HEARN.

The Way the Writer Got Even With the Heartless Editors.

"Lafadio Hearn, that wonderful writer, worked on newspapers in his youth," said a publisher, "and the ruthless way his studies were changed, cut and butchered was a great woe to his heart."

"In after years Hearn took a malicious joy in collecting stories about editors—editors and their superior and omniscient way with manuscript."

"One of his stories was of an editor to whom a subscriber said:

"I enjoyed that poem on the three ages of man in today's paper, Mr. Sheers; I enjoyed it immensely. Do you know, though, I thought that it was originally written the seven ages of man?"

"So it was, sir; so it was," said Editor Sheers pompously. "Yes, the extract was originally written the seven ages of man, but I had to cut it down for lack of space."

"Another story concerned a weather report. A reporter, discussing the weather, wrote that winter still lingered in the lap of spring."

"The editor as he read over the article called the reporter up to his desk and told him that he would cut out that sentence about winter lingering in spring's lap. He said the idea was good enough and original and all that sort of thing, but it would not do to publish because the high moral tone of the paper had to be maintained in a town full of school girls."

Staring at Royalty.

Royalties are early cured of any shyness of being looked at. They are there to be seen, and both the king and queen when they go to the opera and turn their glasses on the occupants of opposite boxes are openly amused by the disconcerted looks of persons who feel abashed under the inspection. Not a trace of self consciousness is left on the face of an English royalty, with the exception of perhaps a single princess under an artillery of glances. Such attentions are anything but resented. Indeed, the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire used to say that when the butcher boy ceased to turn round after her in the street she would know her reign was over.—London Chronicle.

SLUG AND SNAIL LORE

Queer Old Traditions That Cluster About the Gastropods.

A CURE FOR WARTS AND AGUE

Drastic Remedies That Must Have Proved Speedily Mortal to the Unfortunate Snails—A Telepathic Theory That Was a Dismal Failure.

It is probable, though—bearing in mind the extent and profundity of the learning considered necessary for "every schoolboy," provided he is educated at other people's expense—one does not like to dogmatize, that slugs and snails were among the very earliest natural history subjects we were taught. The teaching, we may remember, was conveyed in the classical form of question and answer. "What," we were asked, "are little boys made of?"
And the querist, almos: always of the nurse or governess persuasion, supplied the answer with unmistakable relish. "Slugs and snails and puppy dogs' tails" were, we were informed, the ingredients which went to the composition of the soaring human boy. It was doubtless the memory of the indignity rather than any righteous zeal against the foes of the flower garden that induced us for some time afterward invariably to squash or otherwise destroy every slug and snail that our youthful eyes lighted on.

As a matter of fact, however, a good deal of interesting old world lore clusters about slugs and snails, though considerably more about the latter than the former. That, however, is of the less importance, inasmuch as naturalists tell us the slug is practically a snail which wears its shell under its skin, though possibly the definition may be taken exception to from a scientific standpoint. It is worth remarking that, whereas everybody knows snails are considered a table luxury in several countries, nobody seems to wax ecstatic over slugs if we except the beche de mer, or sea slug, over which as prepared in the far east some writers have risen to poetical eloquence. The Romans used to fatten their edible snails on bran soaked in wine, and it is said, with a considerable emphasis on the "and," they attained such an abnormal size that the shell of one was reported to have a capacity of ten quarts.

Indirectly snails may be held to add still more largely to our supply of nourishing food, inasmuch as the famous Dartmoor mutton is said to owe its excellence of quality and flavor to the myriads of tiny snails eaten by the sheep as they browse on the short grass. It is a little disconcerting after this to read the old naturalists' diction that the snail is "a worm of slime and always foul and unclean; is a manner snake and is a horned worm."

Moreover, if any one troubled with warts will secure a snail, pierce it as many times as the unsightly excres-cences number and then impale the hapless snail on a thorn tree as the creature dies the warts will disappear.
Equally deserving the attention of the S. P. C. A. is a provincial cure for ague, which consists in putting a live snail into a bag and wearing it around the neck for nine days. It is then to be "thrown into the fire, when it is said to shake like the ague, and after this the patient is never troubled with the tedious complaint." "Stamped and mixed sometimes with cheese, lops and rennet, snails do draw out thorns if they be applied to the place," Lupton assures us, while the horns carried on the person insure the bearer's virtue. It is to be assumed that some at least of these drastic measures prove speedily mortal to the snails, though really some of the stories of their longevity and recuperative powers make one hesitate to dogmatize too positively.

And the snail is not without its quasi mystic attributes. Very widely spread is the childish "charm" by which it is adjured to put out its horns—"Snail, snail, come out of your hole or else I'll beat you as black as a coal." Sometimes a bribe is substituted for the threat, and "bread and barleycorns" are promised as an inducement to "show your horns." In Scotland it is said that the prompt obedience of the snail indicates that fine weather may be expected. In some places to catch a snail by its horns on the 1st of May and throw it over the left shoulder insures good luck.

Possibly one of the queerest ideas that have ever been promulgated about snails was that which gravely proposed to utilize them for the purposes of telegraphy, or, more strictly perhaps, telepathy. Snails, it was alleged, were excessively sympathetic. Two of them were put together for presumably sufficient time to bring them thoroughly in rapport, and the intending operators arranged their code. One of these went to New York with one snail and the other to Paris with the second. When the gentlemen in either capital wished to communicate with their friend, at an hour agreed upon, he put his snail on a dial marked with the characters of the code and moved it from one to the other till his message was spelled out, and the snail in the other capital would, impelled by the mysterious sympathy of its own accord indicate on a corresponding dial the message letter by letter! That was the beautiful theory that was doomed to dismal failure.—

A FAMOUS DUEL.

The Fatal Meeting Between Commodore Barron and Decatur.

On March 22, 1820, was fought one of the most memorable duels in the annals of the United States. Commodore Decatur and Commodore Barron met on the fatal field near Bladensburg that day. Both participants were wounded, Decatur mortally, dying within a few hours after the encounter. The causes which led to the ill feeling between these two naval heroes have never been accurately determined, but it is generally supposed that Decatur's harsh criticism of Barron on account of the latter not returning from abroad to take part in the war brought about the breach. Certain it is that Decatur's words were repeated to Barron, and a correspondence between the two ensued, which probably resulted in the challenge. The impending duel was kept a profound secret. Only a few of the most intimate friends of the respective participants had even an inkling of it. Decatur was the first to arrive upon the scene. He was accompanied by Commodore Rodgers and Porter and several other friends. Barron arrived a few minutes later. The combatants bowed stiffly to each other and stood waiting for their friends to measure off the ground and make the final arrangements.

"I hope, sir," said Barron as they took their places, "that when we meet in another world we shall be better friends than we have been in this."

Decatur is said to have laughingly regarded his adversary a moment and then replied:

"Sir, I have never been your enemy."

A moment later the word was given, and two shots rang out simultaneously.

Barron fell almost immediately, the pistol fell from his grasp, and in a moment he was upon the greensward writhing in agony. He was raised by his friends and carried nearer the road, where Barron was lying.

"I wish I had fallen in the service of my country," Decatur muttered, whereupon Barron looked up.

"Everything has been conducted most honorably," he said.

Then, turning his eyes upon Decatur:

"I am mortally wounded. Commodore Decatur, I forgive you from the bottom of my heart."

As Decatur was being lifted into a carriage Balabridge, whom Decatur had once rescued from a Moorish prison, stooped down and kissed his cheek.

With his head upon Rodgers' shoulder and in company with a physician, Decatur was driven slowly back to the city and carried into his residence on Lafayette square, where he died a few days afterward.

The news of the duel spread like wildfire through the city. The following day John Randolph offered con-sulatory resolutions in congress, which, however, were promptly objected to,
and the press rigorously denounced the practice of dueling.

Barron ultimately recovered from his injury, but it is said the memory of the fatal duel darkened his life ever afterward. He lived until the year 1851 and had charge of several vessels.
At his own request he was court marshaled upon the charges made against him by Decatur and exonerated.—Exchange.

All Help One Another.

What a wonderful order there is in all human labor! While the husband-man furrows his land and prepares for every one his daily bread the town artisan, far away, weaves the stuff in which he is to be clothed, the miner seeks underground the iron for his plow, the soldier defends him against the invader, the judge takes care that the law protects his fields, the tax collector adjusts his private interests with those of the public, the merchant occupies himself in exchanging his products for those of distant countries, the men of science and art add every day a few horses to this ideal team, which draws along the material world as steam impels the gi-gantic trains of our iron roads.

Thus, all unite together, all help one another. The toil of each one benefits himself and all the world. The work has been apportioned among the different members of the whole society by a tacit agreement.

If in this apportionment errors are committed, if certain individuals have not been employed according to their capacities, these defects of detail diminish in the sublime conception of the whole. The poorest man included in this association has his place, his work, his reason for being there. Each is something in the whole.—Emile Sou-vestre.

Old Trinity Churchyard.

There is no more dismal and hideous sight than a new graveyard full of glittering, obtrusive white monuments, square, ponderous and costly. But a burying ground which has attained a ripe age, say, a century or so, is capable of affording a distinct sensation of aesthetic pleasure. Toned and tempered by wind and weather into neutral harmony, the intrusive lettering on the stones half obliterated, there remains no gaudy funeral suggestion, but only a gentle impulse to quote Omar on the evanescence of things.
Such a graveyard is the old Trinity, past which the busy crowds of Broadway and Wall street surge all day. It is a thing of beauty, though perhaps not one in a hundred of those eager faced men hurrying past ever stops to look at it or think of it. If he did, one imagines he would slacken his pace and perhaps take a half holiday. The ancient plot of ground, sown thick with low gray and brown stones and looking like a field of mushrooms, makes that human torrent rushing by seem melancholy and meaningless.—
New York Globe.

A Game of Poker.

(Original.)

Ned Bannard, his bride, Tom Pendleton and I sat down one evening at Ned's house to a game of poker. Susie Bannard had never played cards, so we agreed to help her. We couldn't leave her out and only expected her to bet low on the best of hands. The game was penny ante with a two cent limit.

People who think they know things are very hard to teach. Susie hadn't played half a dozen hands before she insisted on playing her own game in her own way. She kept losing steadily, and, although the stake was very small, she was soon minus something like $2.
Since I had won more than half of this I determined to get it back to her.
Having a pair of eights in my hand, when she and I alone were betting, I made a great ado, daring her to bet. I raised her, and she raised me until I saw that there was a dollar in the pot for her, then called her. To my discomfiture she had only a pair of fives.
Instead of losing a dollar I had won another dollar from her.

I proposed that we should play some other game, but Susie could not be induced to give up poker, so we proceeded as we were. Some one opened with a jack pot, and the woman in the case, after studying a long while, asked for one card. When it was given her she looked at it and said, "Oh, phaw!"

It was plain that she had drawn to a flush and had failed to fill. We were all very much disgruntled when she came in. Ned and I were both anxious to bet and didn't want to win her money. Ned told her not to make a goose of herself and to stay out. When she refused he told her that she'd have to stand the loss out of her private fund. She paid no attention to this and raised us both. Ned, very much vexed, raised the pot to top me, and before we knew it we had several dollars on the table. Ned and I showed down, but the lady couldn't be prevailed upon to do so. I had three kings and Ned three aces.

"One pair isn't any good, is it?" asked Susie.

"No," replied her husband, "nor two pairs?"

"But suppose there are two pairs, with another card like one of the pairs?"

Ned and I looked at each other; then he seized his wife's cards and threw them on the table face up. She had a full hand.

Susie was now slightly ahead of the game and quite proud of herself. Ned, foreseeing a plunging on her part that might be embarrassing, proposed to quit, but she had caught the gambling fever and insisted on proceeding with the game. She didn't come in for two or three hands. Then we all knew she'd got something handsome, for she looked happy and said glibly that she was "going to bet." "How many cards?" "Is it any advantage to have the cards run together—four, five, six, for instance?" "Yes, if the whole five run that way." She studied a long while, then said, "Well, you may give me two cards." We all laughed, and the game proceeded.

This time Tom Pendleton either had a big hand or wanted to bluff, for he raised the limit. Ned, convinced that he was bluffing, raised him. I stayed out. "What are you going to do, Susie?" asked Ned. "I don't know. I can't tell whether these cards are any good or not." Ned asked me to look at her hand, but she laid it face down on the table. "You say," she said, turning her pretty eyes on her huge lord, "that the cards must all run up or down, and if there is one that doesn't fit it spoils the hand?" "Yes, and they must all be of the same suit. You couldn't fill a hand like that by drawing two cards once in a hundred times."

She studied her hand till all got tired waiting, and Ned passed cigars.
By the time we had lighted up Susie had come to a decision. "It's an awful risk," she said, "but there are three cards in my hand pretty high. I may win on those." She flipped in, and Ned groaned. Then he whispered to me that he was going to teach her that it's expensive to be stupid. He raised her, and Tom and I both dropped out.
She saw Ned and raised him. Then he raised her again, with the same result, and the raising went on till there was about $12 in the pot. "That'll just buy a bracelet I saw this morning that I want awfully," said Susie.

"Won't it be nice?" Ned looked at me and smiled. "Can't we get it up to $15?" Susie asked. "There's something else for $3 I want too." "Very well," said Ned, "we'll take off the limit for this hand." And they flipped in the required amount. "What you got?" A full o' kings here," said Ned.
He threw down his hand and was raking in the pot when his wife laid down the ace, king and queen of diamonds one after the other. "Are they any good?" she asked, looking at us enorly. We told her they were not. She heaved a deep sigh and carelessly dropped her other two cards. They were the knave and ten of the same suit as the other three.

There were varied exclamations from the men, while Susie was wonderfully looking at each of us for an explanation. Then I told her that she held a royal flush and had won the pot. Ned sank back in his chair and laughed immoderately. Tom and I told Susie that she was the best poker player we had ever met. And she was. There is no better way to deceive an antagonist than not to know yourself what you're doing.
