THEY TOOK A BIG TUMBLE

An Automobile Westward Bound Went Over a Cliff Near Reelsville—The Machine Badly Wrecked But the Occupants Escaped Serious Injury.

CORN-SHREDDER FADED BY AUTOS

A thrilling automobile accident occurred yesterday afternoon on the Reelsville Hill, in which the three occupants escaped with their lives by a miracle. The occupants of the machine, a touring car, were J. W. Eades and wife and their niece, Miss Cora Hancock, who live near Franklin, this state. Mr. Eades and party had been visiting relatives in Mechanicsburg, Ills., and were on their way home at the time.

It seems that the machine was climbing the treacherous Reelsville Hill, which has been the scene of many auto accidents, when the trouble occurred. There are varied accounts of the accident, but a telephone message from Reelsville this morning states that Mr. Eades' version of the affair is that he was climbing the hill and two boys were hanging to the back of his machine. His wife wanted him to stop and put the boys off. This detracted the driver's attention, and the machine started to back down the hill. He lost control of it and it shot down the steep decline at great speed. The auto swerved near the foot of the hill and before the bridge was reached, and shot over the embankment, falling almost twenty feet to the stones below. The machine turned entirely over and fell on its side.

Only a miracle saved the lives of the occupants of the car, which was almost demolished. Mrs. Eades was painfully injured, and for a time it was feared that she was seriously hurt. She was taken from the wreckage by her husband, who was not injured, being only badly shaken up. She was taken to the home of Mrs. Frank McCullough, where she was attended by a physician. Her left limb was badly sprained and she was bruised and shaken up. However, she was able to be up and around this morning, and expects to return to her home at once.

Miss Hancock was also painfully injured, but not seriously. The whole party will probably return home today. The car was badly wrecked, but he expects to have it sent to the factory in the hope of saving it.—Brazil Times.

Locust Street W. F. M. S.

The Locust Street Auxiliary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society had an interesting and profitable gathering in the church parlors last evening. It was the occasion of their "anniversary social," and about one hundred members and guests were present. Mrs. C. A. Martin, as chairman of the committee and very efficiently assisted by the Madames Hedden, Black, Abbott, O'Daniel and Denny led their section of the society in the affairs of the evening. "The Standard Bearer" also assisted in serving the company. There was an interesting program in charge of Mrs. Mansfield, the President of the Auxiliary; this included a musical number by Miss Kurtz, devotions conducted by Mrs. Stevens, in the course of which she brought forward much information concerning recent work in India, and a spirited and interesting conversation led by Mrs. Helm on the life and christian activities in the Islands of Japan. Quite a number of persons took part in the conversation and everyone was glad to hear of these things from one who has for years lived among them and been a part of them and who is so well fitted to tell something of what she has seen and knows. Closing the program, ice cream and cake were served and after a time of general social greetings all went their ways, with increased interest in their great work.

Good Preaching.

Elder J. M. Rudy, pastor of the Christian Church at Greencastle will preach at Berea, one mile south of the Brazil water works, Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rudy is a new man in Indiana, having come here from the West. He is a modern religious thinker and one of the most captivating orators in the Indiana pulpit. Go and hear him.—Brazil Times.

HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

Cottage of Mr. and Mrs. John Shoblaski, at Limerdale, is Burned to the Ground at Near Noon Today—Little Was Saved—Loss Partially Covered by Insurance.

FLAMES CAUSED BY A SPARK

The cottage of Mr. and Mrs. John Shoblaski, at Limerdale, was totally destroyed by fire at near noon today. The Shoblaski home was just east of the blacksmith shop. It is believed that the fire started from a spark which fell on the house from the chimney. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Shoblaski were preparing their noonday meal when the fire was discovered on the roof. They had a very hot fire in the stove at that time and believe that a spark from the fire fell upon the shingle roof and started the blaze.

Neighbors ran to the assistance of the people but as they had nothing to fight the flames with the house was soon consumed. A little of the furniture was carried out and saved. Mr. Shoblaski is a cripple. His son is employed in the Limerdale depot. It is said that there was near $1,000 insurance on the property. This will not cover the loss.

A PARTY

Misses LeGrain and Hazel Ayres entertained a party of girl friends at their home on Hanna Street last evening. The girls were entertained with music and games and report a royal good time. The following were present: Misses Ruby and Florence Jones, Gertrude Hammond, Fay Besser, Florence Smallman, Nona Bastin, Mabel Jackson, Mary Huestis, Laura Town, Pauline Roberts, Vera Fisher and Elsie Gelkinson.

Greencastle Post, No. 11, Department of Ind. G. A. R. October 13, 1908

General Orders, No. 8:

Pursuant to the requirements of paragraph 34 of the Grand Army Blue Book, edition of 1906.

Comrade John R. Miller is hereby appointed Patriotic Instructor of the Post, and will perform such duties as may be required of him (vide article 41, G. A. B. B.)

As indicating, in general, the scope of the duties of Patriotic Instructor, attention is invited to report of Department Patriotic Instructor, published on pages 129-130 of the Journal of the Twenty-ninth Annual Session of the Department of Indiana G. A. R. for 1908.

One of the most valuable adjuncts in connection with this good work, especially in the public schools, is a little book entitled "A Patriotic Primer for the Little Citizen," by Comrade Wallace Foster of Indianapolis.

This book is not only of great historical value, but it is replete with patriotic gems that will reach the heart of every boy and every girl.

By order of Commander Lee, (Signed,) W. B. Vestal, Adju.

MONON COAL ROAD

W. H. McDoel Judge Fields, vice president, and B. E. Taylor, general manager of the Monon line, on Saturday completed a three days' examination of that line, among other things going over the new coal branch. As a passenger road not much was expected, but that line of service is proving more profitable than had been anticipated. The officials speak of the main line and Indianapolis division as doing a very satisfactory business at the present time. There was a time during the summer when business dragged somewhat, but at present it is quite heavy.

MOSS AT RUSSELLVILLE

Large Crowd Greeted Democratic Candidate in Republican Stronghold—Speaker Wins Audience by Clear Speech.

PROVES POINTS FROM ROOSEVELT

Senator Ralph Moss, Democratic candidate for Congress from the Fifth District, spoke in Russellville last night. The Knights of Pythias Hall, in which the meeting was held, was filled to overflowing, a large number of Republicans being out to hear the candidate. He spoke of the issues of the day, dealing considerable time to the tariff and the currency situation. He proved many of the points he made by quotations from one of President Roosevelt's messages. He read a letter from the President of the American Bridge Company of this state in which the writer said that he had been offered structural steel from the same company at $5 a ton less in Canada than in the United States, another illustration of how American manufacturers, protected by the tariff, sell cheaper abroad than at home. The president of this company is a Republican state senator from Indiana but advises all persons to vote for tariff reform.

F. C. Tilden also spoke briefly. The meeting was an excellent one and all were well pleased.

NO OIL IN RUSSELL TP.

Casing is Pulled From the Deep Hole Derrick is Taken Down and All Points to no Find by Drilling Company.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS MOVEMENTS

Whether or not there is oil in Russell Township is a question undecided, so far as the people of the township are concerned. The company that was drilling the well has just finished pulling the casing that had been put down. The derrick has been lowered, and all is in readiness, seemingly, for the whole outfit to be taken away. What the results are no one seemed to know. The leaving of the company and the pulling of the casing would seem to indicate that nothing had been found. Still there are wise ones that hold that the apparent move is only a blind.

One thing is sure, however, and that is that no more work will be done there for some time. Apparently the chance of striking oil in Putnam County is still remote.

Modern Woodmen at Reelsville.

Greencastle Camp No. 3349, Modern Woodmen installed a camp at Reelsville last night. There were twenty candidates given the work and the remainder of twenty will be initiated by the Reelsville team when thoroughly organized. Prospects are very favorable for a strong lodge.

OVER ENTHUSIASM

It happens, now and again, that men, perfectly honest, become so enthusiastic over some particular thing that they lose all sense of perspective, see only one side, and become biased and radical. Such men, in their over-enthusiasm, become not only biased in view, but also exaggerated in statement. Small things become mountains, ordinary acts are distorted into acts of crime and corruption. A story illustrating this attitude has just come to hand. It has to do with a member of the state legislature. Some time ago, when the $1,000 license was up, some of his friends, much interested in temperance, advised him strongly to vote for it. He did not believe it a right measure and refused to do as they requested. Immediately they became over-enthusiastic, declared that he had forfeited his manhood, that he had betrayed his people, that he had wrecked his life, sold out to the saloon interests, and in other exaggerated statements pointed out that they would see to it that his political future was ruined forever. Later, when the county local option fight was on, this man, after careful consideration of the question, came to the conclusion that it was right, and voted for the measure. At once the men who had held that the member's character was nil, his life ruined, his constituency betrayed, forgot their tirade, hailed him as the greatest of living heroes, and declared themselves willing to vote for him for anything from president down. Now the point is that the man had not done anything dishonest in the first instance. The $1,000 license has since been shown to be far other than many at that time thought it, and that the man was honest and clear-sighted in refusing to vote for it. It was over-enthusiasm that led his friends, when he could not see it as they did, to make the abusive and untrue statements regarding him. Now they see their error. But the man and these over-enthusiastic gentlemen can never be friends again. Over-enthusiasm should some times be curbed.

EVADE THE LAW

We have had much, lately, of the Republican attitude on campaign contributions. We have been told that they would abide by the law and accept no money from corporations, and make public the contributions after election. Now we learn, from first-hand material, that this is only a bluff, and that the law is to be evaded, the contributions coming from the corporations in the form of checks made out in the names of individuals instead of bearing the corporate name. Yesterday there fell by mistake into the hands of a Democrat of the city a letter sent out by the Republican National committee asking for money. One clause of that letter is especially interesting in the light of the Republican attitude on the question of contributions. It reads as follows:

"Congress recently passed an act making it unlawful to solicit money for political purposes from corporations. All funds, therefore, for the campaigns must be supplied by individuals. Those connected with your company are asked to bring this matter to the attention of their business associates and ask each to send a check."

This interesting epistle is signed by J. Wood Wilson, the fat-fryer for the National Committee in Indiana. The corporations are asked to contribute, but as individuals, that no taint may be discerned. It is simply a method of avoiding the law. The money will be on hand, as the chairman of the state Republican committee suggested, "for the last days of the campaign."

Mr. Oscar Lane, candidate for representative on the Republican ticket, writes us that we have been unjust to the Anti-Saloon League. He holds that the League has a right to support him and to turn from Mr. Hostetter. We quite agree. If the League believes Mr. Lane will do all its behests without question, and knows Mr. Hostetter will not, then they are surely right, from the standpoint of politics, to support Mr. Lane. We have never quarreled with this position. Our quarrel was with the statements, direct and implied, that Mr. Hostetter, because he refused, for good and sufficient reasons, to vote for this particular measure, was, therefore, corrupt, a traitor to his pledges, an ally of the saloon interests. This does not follow, and we object to the biased and unfounded statements. The League has a right to support Mr. Lane. It has no right to accuse Mr. Hostetter of dishonesty, or to insinuate that his character has been smeared. This, and this only, we contend.

Where Bullets Flew.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done me more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 50c at the Owl Drug Store

On a very hot Sunday morning James was required to accompany his father to church.

That was contrary to the boy's inclination.

"Father," said the little chap, "why need people go to church when it is so hot?"

"My son," his father replied, "Satan is around as much in hot weather as at any time."

"Oh," said the boy, "but Satan doesn't mind hot weather?"—Public Ledger.

MURRAH FOR GEORGIA!

At the election for governor last week Georgia gave the Democratic candidate a majority of 100,000 over the Republican-Hearst combination. The vote was heavy and Democratic gain is nearly 40,000 over four years ago. There is no stopping the Democratic tidal wave. Every state election so far held shows that it is irresistible.

TRYING TO "EXPLAIN" THEIR EXTRAVAGANCE.

John Billheimer, Republican candidate for state auditor, has taken his turn at the task of trying to explain the enormous increase in the cost of the state government since the Republican party has been in power. Governor Hanly first tried his hand at the job, and then came Candidate Watson. All that these men have been able to do has only emphasized the fact that for twelve years the people of Indiana have been bled by a horde of political cormorants who looked upon the taxes paid by the people as partisan plunder.

Neither Hanly, Watson nor Billheimer, nor any other Republican speaker or newspaper has disputed the fact that the same offices in the state house which cost $431,900 a year under Democratic rule, cost last year, under Republican administration $925,470, as shown by the appropriation acts.

Governor Hanly cannot deny that the annual appropriation for his office is now $58,550, as against $12,020 under Matthews. And Mr. Billheimer cannot deny that the appropriations for the state auditor's office are now $64,620, as against $12,800 under the last Democratic state auditor.

Nor can they or anybody else deny that the appropriations for all of the other state offices have been increased in like proportion until the aggregate of increases amounts to $493,570 a year more than was found necessary by the Democrats.

Hanly, Watson, Billheimer and all the rest of the "explainers" fall back upon the fact that certain state offices prior to 1895 drew fees in addition to their salaries. This is true, but it affected only the individual compensation of the official and bore no other relation to the expense of the office. But these fees were not allowed nor drawn by Democratic officials after the taking effect of the fee and salary law passed by the Democratic legislature of 1891, which exempted persons then in office from its operations.

The Indianapolis Star, Republican state organ, comes to the rescue of the wasters of public money. In an editorial a column long it says that "Mr. Marshall, candidate for governor of Indiana, also raises the cry of extravagance in regard to Republican state administrations, and makes many loose assertions in regard to tax levies and the cost of operating the various state offices and institutions."

Mr. Marshall has, indeed, raised the "cry of extravagance," and he will continue to raise it, but he has not made a single statement which is not in accordance with the facts and susceptible of proof by the official records. He has kept himself strictly within the truth, and it is the bare truth that causes such panic among the tax-eaters. The Republican officials and their organ are only trying to distort the facts and twist the figures, hoping thereby to muddy the water and mislead the voters, but they will not succeed.

"NOT THE CASE AT ALL," SAYS WATSON.

In a speech at Hammond on Oct. 3, Mr. Watson, one of the Republican candidates for governor—Mr. Hanly not being present—had the following to say on the county option bill:

"My fellow citizens, the baby has been born and it is named. Now, some parties are saying that we propose to put all saloons out of business right off. That is not the case at all. The law simply provides that the people of Lake county, if they want to have local option, they can have it; but before they can get it 20 per cent of the entire voting population of the county, which at this time would be more than 5,000 voters, must first sign a petition to the county commissioners asking for a special election."

From the above extract it will be seen that Mr. Watson wanted the people of Hammond to understand just how difficult it is going to be to apply the county option law in their county. He was particularly anxious that the Hammond saloon keepers should know that they were not to be "put out of business." Such a thing, he declared, was "not the case at all." But just listen to Joems in a different locality!

A CHARGE OF ATTEMPTED BOMBING.

Everyone who knows Luther W. Knisely, a representative in the legislature from Dekalb county, knows that he is an honest, conscientious man, who is respected by his neighbors regardless of party. He is a quiet, unassuming man, who dislikes notoriety. But when he was improperly approached with an offer of appointment to office if he would desert his party and vote for Governor Hanly's county option bill, he thought it his duty to make the fact public.

Within an hour after the dishonorable proposition had been made, Mr. Knisely denounced it on the floor of the house. Later he made an affidavit setting out the facts involving Republican Senator Wickwire and Governor Hanly. Then there was great squirming among the Republican schemers. Doubtless they had not dreamed that a practice, so usual and ordinary among Republican politicians of their class, would cause so much fuss. The trouble was that they had run up against an honorable man and in that had made a "mistake." Everybody knew that Mr. Knisely had told the truth.

The governor, with great apparent indignation, called for a legislative inquiry. This was held and Mr. Knisely reiterated his story. The governor declared that he had only talked to Knisely "on high moral grounds," and Wickwire said he was "misunderstood," etc., etc. The investigating committee expressed confidence in Knisely, gave the governor a neat (but thin) coat of whitewash, but failed to exonerate Wickwire. And then Wickwire declared that the committee had made a "scapecot" out of him. He tried to see Hanly, but the governor was not to be seen. The legislature adjourned, leaving Wickwire in the air, and at last accounts he was still trying to "see Hanly," who was still sturdily refusing to be seen.

SLANDERING TRAVELING MEN.

A large proportion of the traveling men who represent houses doing business in Indiana are supporting Bryan and Kern and Marshall. There are many Republicans among them. They are opposed to Taft and Sherman and Watson and doubtless they make their opposition known wherever they go. No class of men are better informed on public questions, especially those which affect their interests. The Republican organization is trying to break down the influence of these men. James E. Watson's home organ, the Rushville Republican, is particularly slanderous and vicious. On Sept. 17th that paper published an article which the Republican organization is distributing. From this article we take the following:

"For several weeks traveling men have been going up and down the state crying down Watson at every opportunity. The only unfavorable reports heard this fall could be traced to the traveling men. * * * * *

"It has now developed that the so-called traveling men are fakes, pure and simple, nothing more than hirelings of the brewers, who are behind the Democratic state committee in the present campaign. And some of them are the worst type of individuals, such as crooks, bartenders, hangers-on, ex-convicts and the like. * * * Most of their pictures can be found in the rogues' gallery in Indianapolis and other cities. * * * Think of men of this type going about the state spreading malicious reports about a man aspiring for the great office of governor!"

These extracts from the article are sufficient to show its purpose, which is to cast discredit upon every traveling salesman who dares to express opposition to the Republican party and its candidates. It is a disreputable piece of business, but it will not close the mouth of any honest man. The publication and circulation of the story has been denounced by traveling men's clubs as a peculiarly vicious and senseless slander.

"Funny Jim" Sherman and Longworth, Roosevelt's son-in-law, pretend to be desperately afraid that something may happen to the gold standard. The Republicans have declared in two campaigns that they had established the gold standard "firmly," but Funny Jim and the equally funny Nick say that the whole thing can be overturned by "executive order." This is not true, but that fact doesn't keep these two great statesmen from telling it.

The legislature kicked Governor Hanly's "night rider" bill into the ash-heap, but he is going to "throw" himself into the campaign "for all he is worth." It is announced. Two years ago he did the same thing and the Republican party lost 60,000 votes. And now it will lose 60,000 more.

THE PEOPLE'S COLUMN

Mr. Editor: Referring to the secret letter of the Anti-Saloon League against Mr. Hostetter and urging the election of Mr. Lane, as explained in your daily of the 10th, proves one thing, namely: The League having had the united support of all temperance people regardless of party affiliations, (of which Mr. Hostetter was one), sought to betray the Democrats into the Republican party. And they said to Hanly call a special session and we will deliver them to you. For a parallel case read Matt. 26th chap. 14-25, "Then one of the Twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the Chief Priests and said unto them, what will ye give me and I will deliver Him unto you? and they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. And from that time he sought opportunity to betray Him." SUBSCRIBER.

NO WORD RECEIVED AS YET

NO ANSWER TO MESSAGE IS MADE BY CREIGHTON COLLEGE.

THE OMAHA GAME IS DOUBTFUL

Up to late last evening no word had been received from Omaha in regard to the proposed game with Creighton University for October 21. The DePauw athletic authorities answered the proposal of the Nebraska school by demanding a guarantee of expenses in case negotiations were closed and the trip made. As no answer to the proposal has been received the football management is working under difficulties in completing the home schedule.

Negotiations are being carried on with Otterbein University, Westerville, Ohio for a game on McKean Field next Saturday. Arrangements are not complete, final decision resting on the answer received from Omaha. If DePauw plays at Omaha the Ohio school will probably clash with the old gold next Saturday but if the DePauw team does not make the western trip Kentucky State University will be brought to Greencastle for a game next week in place of the contest with the Ohio school next Saturday.

WILL ADDRESS STUDENTS

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SPEAKER WILL EXPLAIN THE POLITICAL ISSUES.

DATE IS SET FOR MONDAY, OCT. 19

A new enterprise was formally launched in DePauw yesterday afternoon when the Rev. O. Odell Whiteneck of Terre Haute arranged with Dr. Gobin for the use of Moharrv Hall on Monday evening, October 19. Rev. Whiteneck is District Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League and will endeavor to set before the students on Monday evening the purposes and aims of this society. With the increasing interest caused by the campaign issues which are being put before the public by the various political parties, Rev. Whiteneck claims that none has received so much attention as the fate of the saloon in the United States. In speaking of the address which he would make to the students on Monday evening he explained the difference between the Prohibition party and the Anti-Saloon League. Some confusion has arisen at times in regard to the fact that these organizations have nothing in common and are in no way connected.

In speaking of the local political situation Rev. Whiteneck claimed that the local option bill would be carried by over a thousand votes in this county. Many DePauw students are taking an active part in the present political campaign as the various political clubs will testify.

BOOKS ARE RECEIVED

Bound Periodicals Are Placed in Biological Library.

The Dickey Biological Library has just received from the binders several sets of newly bound periodicals and magazines. The book work on these pages is of excellent workmanship and is a valuable addition to the library.

The binding of these magazines was made possible by a gift of fifty dollars from Alfred E. Dickey who endowed the Biological library. This sum is in addition to the yearly allowance of a hundred dollars which Mr. Dickey makes.

Bees Laxative Syrup always brings quick relief to coughs, colds, hoarseness, whooping-cough and all bronchial and throat trouble. Mothers especially recommend it for children. Pleasant to take, gently laxative. Sold by Badger & Green.

ASSISTANT RESIGNS

Mrs. Williams Leaves Place in Rhetoric Department.

Mrs. Helen M. Williams has offered her resignation to the faculty as assistant in the department of Rhetoric. Mrs. Williams is a graduate of Chicago University and an excellent instructor fully capable of taking charge of an English department. Her work here has been merely as supervisor of themes and she was unwilling to continue the work, so asked to be released. She goes with much good will from the faculty. She will probably go to Boston.

As to whom will fill the vacancy it is not known. Prof. Barnes was in Chicago yesterday looking for a new assistant and will probably be successful in his search.

Assistant is Appointed.

Charles A. Fisher has been appointed by the faculty to assist Dr. Andrew Stephenson in the historical department.

CONSTITUTION IS ADOPTED

LAW CLUB OFFICERS MEET AND FORMULATE A CODE OF REGULATIONS.

ELIGIBILITY IS BEING DISCUSSED

The executive board of the recently organized law club met yesterday afternoon to adopt constitution and to perfect the arrangements for launching the new enterprise in DePauw clubdom. Interest in the new organization has been unusually good and from present indications the club has a long and prosperous future before it. Plans were discussed whereby prominent members of the bar could be brought before the club to address its members and thus add to its popularity. Although nothing was done definitely in regard to this matter it is thought that ways and means will be provided whereby the club may accomplish its aims.

Another matter which received much informal discussion was the desire upon a part of the members to petition for a chapter from some law fraternity. That there would be little difficulty in obtaining one seemed to be the opinion of all concerned.

In regard to the eligibility of students wishing to become members of the club it was suggested that only those who had determined to make law their life vocation would be admitted into the organization. That this was not the case with several of the students was also brought to the attention of the executive board but no action was taken.

DEPAUW NEWS

REPLIES TO CRITICISM

W. G. SEAMAN EXPLAINS THE FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE ATHLETIC BOARD

CAN'T AFFORD OVER 3 GAMES

In reply to an article printed in an Indianapolis paper recently regarding the number of games which are to be played on McKean Field, W. G. Seaman has written the following explanation:
To the Editor of the DePauw Daily:

The current criticisms of the football management seem to assume that there are to be but two games on McKean Field. It has been the purpose from the first to have three games at least, and in due time these will be played. It must not be overlooked that there are rather serious difficulties in the way of our getting just what we should like. In the first place there is the financial difficulty. We have only a limited sum to expend for games. It would be easily possible to schedule an extra game if we had $400 to add to our expenditures. But we haven't the money and will have to be satisfied with three games here. In the second place, some of our rivals think we should play return games on their grounds. Rose Poly early informed us that we must play in Terre Haute if we played them this year. This seems not unfair for it is now several years since our team went there. And yet our manager refused to play there hoping until the last to get them here so our students could see the game. For four years we have had the majority of our games on our grounds. It may be that for two or three years we shall have to be satisfied with three or seven games here. But I am sure our managers will do the best they can.

William G. Seaman.

Seen With Artistic Eye.
Fall has again tinged the DePauw campus with its coat of many colors and many are the compliments which are passed upon its flaming beauty. In spite of the long drought during the latter part of the summer and the dust-laden appearance of the leaves at the beginning of the school year, it would be hard to find a more pleasing stretch of country than the DePauw campus at the present time.

A SCISSORS ARTIST.

The Wonderful Feats Performed by Joanne Koetren.

More than 200 years ago a little girl was born at Amsterdam, Holland, whose name was Joanne Koetren. She was a peculiar child in that she cared nothing whatever for play and sport, but found her greatest delight in making copies of things about her, imitating in wax every kind of fruit and making on silk with colored dross exact copies of paintings which were thought wonderful.

But after she had become very accomplished in music, spinning and embroidery she abandoned all these for a still more extraordinary art—that of cutting. She executed landscapes, marine views, flowers, animals and portraits of people of such striking resemblance that she was for a time quite the wonder of Europe. She used white papers for her cuttings, placing them over a black surface, so that the minute openings made by her scissors formed the "light and shade."

The czar, Peter the Great, and others of high rank paid her honor. One man high in office vainly offered her 1,000 florins for three small cuttings. The empress of Germany paid her 4,000 florins for a trophy she had cut, bearing the arms of Emperor Leopold, crowned with eagles and surrounded by a garland of flowers. She also cut the emperor's portrait, which can now be seen in the Royal Art gallery in Vienna. A great many people went to see her, and she kept a book in which princes and princesses wrote their names.

After she died, which was when she had lived sixty-five years, her husband, Adriaan Block, erected a monument to her memory and had designed upon it the portraits of these titled visitors. Her cuttings were so correct in effect and so tasteful as to give both dignity and value to her work and constitute her an artist whose exquisite skill with the scissors has never before or since been equaled.

Would Mortgage the Farm.

A farmer on Rural Route 2, Empire, Ga., W. A. Floyd by name, says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured the two worst sores I ever saw; one on my hand and one on my leg. It is worth more than its weight in gold. I would not be without it if I had to mortgage the farm to get it." Only 25c, at the Owl Drug Store.

LIGHTNING AND SHIPS.

Vessels Are Struck More Frequently Than Is Supposed.

In spite of the popular impression to the contrary, ships remote from the land are seldom damaged by lightning, although some of the most awe inspiring displays of atmospheric electricity are frequently witnessed by those on board of them.

Standing rigging and even parts of the running gear are now made of steel wire, and this substitute for the old fashioned hemp serves the purpose of lightning conductor when the ship is not fitted with such an aid to safety. The electric current is conveyed down the wire rigging and reaches the sea through the vessel's metal hull. Damage occurs only if the current be interrupted on its way down. In a comparatively large proportion of instances the fore royal truck is struck by lightning, that of the main less frequently and the mizzen least of the three.

Very serious casualties under this head occurred to warships and merchant vessels in the days of wooden hulls and hempen rigging. In July, 1802, as thirteen sailing vessels of the East India company were trying to round the cape in the vicinity of Algoa bay, homeward bound, two of them, the Britannia and the Bombay Castle, were struck by lightning. The foremast of each was soon enveloped in flames, and the masts had to be cut away in order to save the ships and their combustible cargoes. A heavy gale was blowing, the night was dark, and the other ships of the fleet, which were close to the time, were witnesses of this thrilling incident.

Many vessels are now fitted with lightning conductors of approved types, lest the wire rigging should fail to carry off the electric current. In May, 1806, shortly after a severe thunder storm, accompanied by lightning and rain, in 3 degrees south, 87 degrees east, the P. and O. steamship Victoria had a sudden increase of deviation amounting to 6 degrees in both the standard and the wheelhouse compasses, and later it was discovered that the lightning conductor on the fore had fused. The ship must have been struck by lightning during the storm—Knowledge Magazine.

WALL STREET "TIPS."

Best Place to Plant Them if They Come Your Way.

A seasoned Wall street campaigner condenses a life of practical observation in the remark: "Stock market 'tips' are, as a rule, founded on nothing better than guesswork or pure invention. Although usually without value, openly peddled out to the public and not possible to trace to any reliable source, they come clothed in such a garb of mystery and apparent importance that there are always a lot of ill informed persons who will accept them and act on them as on gospel truth."

"Often these so called 'tips' are but the whispered suggestions of some manipulator who was confident that his mysterious, semi-confidential hint would travel and be used the basis of large buying of some stock he was especially anxious should be largely sold."

"It is told of one great speculative magnate of the past generation that when he was approached by the pastor of a rich and fashionable Fifth avenue church in search of means by which he could become suddenly rich he put his lips close to the clerical ear and whispered: 'Buy Pacific Mail. It's a sure thing. If you lose on it I'll make good your losses.'"

"The pastor departed gleefully. Some two weeks later he called at the office of the manipulator and deplored the great financial losses he had incurred in following the confidential 'tip.' 'How much were they?' asked Mr. G., and on being told he drew his personal check for the amount."

"The minister took it and after expressing his thanks hesitated a moment and then said: 'But how about my parishioners? You placed no ban of secrecy on me, and their losses have been enormous.'"

"The financier smiled grimly as he remarked, 'You see, doctor, those were the fellows I was after.'"

"This story may be true or may not, but it points a moral. If you get a 'tip' on Wall street bury it in the back yard and forget it."—Cleveland Leader.

A Double Headed Bull.

On the occasion of a public reception at Napier, Australia, the school children of the town, after being duly complimented by his excellency from County Tyrone on the hearty manner in which they had rendered the national anthem, were solemnly assured that if they put their shoulders to the wheel they would be sure to reach the top of the tree, upon which a compatriot turned to me and said, "Sure, it was an axletree he meant, bedad!"—London Spectator.

Equally Cutting.

"Your voice," said the commanding officer, "is decidedly rasping."

"Yes, sir," said the subordinate, touching his hat. "I have been out roughing it with a file of soldiers all morning."—Chicago Tribune.

Why He Loved Spain.

Gioacchino Rossini, who was a great jester, was once seen embracing a Spaniard with great effusion. Asked the reason, he replied, "Because without Spain we would be the last nation."

The Motive.

Lawyer—What took you to the scene of the murder? Witness—The cars, sir. Lawyer—No, no! What motive was it? Witness—The locomotive. Lawyer—You may go.—Pathfinder.

Kitty, Sam and the Peacemaker.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

When it has been "Sam" and "Kitty" from babyhood it is rather difficult to pass suddenly to the "Mr. Hastings" and "Miss Norwood" stage. Both Sam and Kitty felt the strain, though each took mental obligation to do nothing that in any way might be construed into an overture of friendship.

It had all started innocently enough. Kitty on her way to the postoffice encountered Jim Saunders. She regarded Saunders as a persistent pest, but she could not very well refuse his suggestion that they stop in at the drug store and have a glass of soda.

Then it happened that they turned into Belding street in animated conversation, and Sam could not know they had met just around the corner.

Of all the summer visitors to Auburnville Sam disliked Saunders the most, and Kitty knew it. It looked to him as though she had deliberately accepted Saunders' attentions to punish him for a trivial quarrel of the night before.

Kitty was just finishing the last tiny lump of ice cream from the bottom of the tall glass when Sam entered the store with Belle Paulding, Kitty's dearest enemy.

He had bowed stiffly in salutation, and Kitty had responded with a "Good morning, Mr. Hastings," emphasizing the name as sweetly and as coldly as the frozen delicacy she had just consumed.

That had been the start of the trouble, but the end had been slow in coming. That afternoon Kitty went motoring with Saunders, though she hated motor cars, and Belle went buggy riding with Sam to punish Saunders for his imagined disloyalty.

Saunders and Miss Paulding had quickly patched their quarrel up, but Kitty was unyielding, and there was a squariness to Sam's chin that did not argue in favor of pliability of personality.

With ceremonious politeness each strove to show the other how little it mattered, but Kitty cried herself to sleep night after night, and Sam swore softly, but fervently, at what he was pleased to term the foolishness of womankind.

So matters stood when the excursion of the Auburnville comet band was announced. The boys needed new uniforms, and Dick Potts had promised to learn the euphonium if they would buy him one.

All public spirited citizens purchased tickets. Sam bought two through force of habit and then viciously tore them up, whereby the band profited another 50 cents, for Sam was determined to go on that excursion if only to show that he could go without Kitty.

He had never gone on an excursion alone save once, when Kitty was spending a week with her aunt over in Cadville, and he had had a miserable time. Now he did not look for enjoyment, but Kitty needn't think he could not go alone if he wanted to.

Much the same sentiment animated Kitty, though she arranged to go with a married sister, and it so happened that they passed over the gangplank together, with the formal greeting that was now customary.

The picnic was held on Paddle Island, out in the lake, a favorite picnic ground. A narrow strip of land connected two rough oval extremities that by an abuse of the imagination might be said to resemble a paddle. Bobby Seaton, who was in the primary class, aptly, if improperly, described it as "a peninsula with an island at each end."

As soon as lunch was disposed of the elders settled themselves near the baskets, while the young folk wandered off to either end of the island, followed by a fusillade of injunctions to hurry back the moment the first whistle sounded.

Sam and Kitty followed suit, but Sam made certain that Kitty was headed for the southern blade of the paddle before he started north. It was dreary work sitting all alone on the point, and presently the fresh air and the soft bed of pine needles combined to bring sleep to the worried brain.

It seemed to Sam that he had enjoyed only a brief nap, but by the time he had hunted up the cabin some of the boys had built for use in the duck season and had borrowed the bathing trunks he found there he was in the cool water a few minutes when the warning whistle blew.

Madly he dashed from the water into the hut to find that in that brief interval some one had "chawed" his clothes. His underwear was as full of knots as a snake that had been lurching off a full set of pool balls, his trousers were tied into a true lover's knot that suggested anything but sentiment, and the laces of his shoes offered a good ten minutes of unpeeling. Sam was still surveying the damage when the second whistle sounded.

"Blow, darn ye!" he cried savagely as he attacked the knots. "If you can't wait for a fellow I'll swim for it. I'm not going to make my de-bu in this."

He cast a glance of scorn at the infinitesimal swimming trunks and attacked the knots with a haste that verified the old adage as to speed. The boat was a good half mile from shore as he burst through the bushes that grew about the rude landing and shook his fist at the departing steamer.

He was still expressing his opinion of things when there was a rustle in the bushes, and Sam turned to face

Kitty, who walked with a limp and carried a stick in her hand.

"Has the boat gone?" she cried in despair. "I started up so quickly that I wrenched my ankle. I called for help, but no one seemed to hear."

"I was at the other end of the island," explained Sam, who seemed to think that the reproach was directed against him. "I took a nap and didn't realize how long I slept. I took a swim after that, and some kids 'chawed' my clothes. I just got here myself. They'll miss us at the dock and send back for us. Can I fix your ankle?"

"I'm afraid I shall have to ask your assistance, Mr. Hastings," said Kitty, suddenly mindful of the fact that she was speaking to Sam.

He helped her to a rock and carefully cut away the shoe. Then with the sleeves of his shirt he improvised a bandage that brought relief and noted with satisfaction that the sprain seemed to be slight, since there was little swelling.

"That will have to do until we can get to town," he said as he rose to his feet. "Does it feel any easier, Miss Norwood?"

"Very much, thank you, Mr. Hastings."

Sam gritted his teeth and mentally assured himself that when a fellow takes the trouble to bind up a girl's ankle and sacrifices his very newest and handsomest shirt for a bandage the least she might do would be to call him "Sam," as of old. He moved stiffly away and took a seat on a bowlder behind her. If she was lonesome she could call him.

But Kitty, though she was dreadfully lonesome and a little bit afraid, was too proud to call. Even the faint scent of tobacco that now and then drifted past her on some vagrant breeze was comforting, since it was an indication of Sam's presence, but she would not speak.

Sam gloomily regarded her eloquent shoulders and longed to take her in his arms and comfort her, but he assured himself that it was her place to make the overture. It looked as though the deadlock would continue unbroken when the serpent entered this lonesome Eden.

It was only a tiny gartersnake scarcely twelve inches long, and it was hurrying away from the human intruders as rapidly as possible when Sam spied it. With a long switch he turned its course and headed it past the rock where Kitty was sitting.

The rustling in the grass caught her attention, and, looking down, she spied the wriggling length of green.

With a shrill scream of "Sam!" she struggled to her feet and the next instant was sobbing in her terror, with her arms about his neck.

With cruel ingratitude Sam dispatched his benefactor and lifted the girl in his arms.

"We'll go sit on the dock, Kitty," he suggested. "There are no snakes there. Pretty soon, if help doesn't come, I'll swim over to shore and get a small boat somewhere."

"Some one will come, Sam," she declared. "Anyhow, it's nice here—for awhile."

"You bet it is, Kitty," assented Sam as the girl crept close to the protecting circle of his arm.

Then in a torrent of words they had their explanation. It cleared the air wonderfully, and presently Kitty patted the hand that clasped her waist.

"You say you didn't like to take Belle riding," she whispered, "just as though you had all the trouble. I bet you wouldn't like it any better to let Mr. Saunders pretend to make love to you."

"No, I wouldn't," assented Sam honestly as he bent his head to claim another kiss. "Kitty, I'm sorry I killed that snake."

"But it was a snake," explained Kitty, as though that were sufficient reason, even though it was very nice—for a snake.

Didn't Lose Any Sleep.

Jenner, the famous English physician, was essentially a strong and self reliant man. He attended the prince consort through his fatal illness, he was the Prince of Wales' doctor when the heir to the British throne had so narrow an escape in 1872, and he also went to Darmstadt and remained in attendance upon the Princess Alice till she died. To practice medicine in "the fierce light that beats upon a throne" is not calculated to lessen the physician's anxieties, and one who knew Jenner well once questioned him on this point and hinted that his responsibilities must sometimes be sufficient to render sleep or rest impossible.

"Sleep," replied Jenner in his characteristic way. "I don't think that anxiety about a patient ever kept me awake five minutes in my life. I go to a bedside. I do my best. What more can I do? Why should I not sleep?"

Hamlet's Bowl of Gruel.

George Melville, an old English actor, was fond of telling a funny story at his own expense. He was acting Hamlet in Bristol. It was the actor's rule to take a bowl of gruel in the course of the evening, and his landlady sent over the usual refreshment from the lodgings in Queen square. She happened to have a "new" servant girl, who was explicitly directed to get to the stage door by the entrance from Bank street and then carry the gruel into the greenroom. She arrived at a moment when Mr. Melville was "on." Being unused to the ways of the theater, she asked a man at the wings where Mr. Melville was. "There," said the super, pointing to the stage.

The actor was in the middle of the soliloquy "To be or not to be" when the girl advanced toward him, bearing the bowl and said, "If you please, Mr. Melville, sir, here is your gruel."
