ATTACK THE WRONG MAN

MASKED MEN CALL THE REV. C. FENWICK REED FROM HIS HOME AND ATTEMPT TO ASSAULT HIM BUT ARE FRUSTRATED.

NOW BELIEVED TO BE STUDENTS

Statement is Made That Four Sophomores Have Confessed to Having Made the Attack Through Mistake.

A mistake in identity has accounted for what was at first thought to be a deliberately planned plot to injure the Rev. C. Fenwick Reed, a noted evangelist, living on East Washington Street. Last Saturday night at about 11:30 o'clock four masked men called the well known minister to the door of his home saying that the Western Union messenger had a telegram for him. Suspecting nothing he answered the call but was seized by the men, who were thought to be men who sought revenge, but who later turned out to be sophomore students in the university who were looking for a freshman named Hugh Reed, and who had mistaken the Evangelist Reed for the student Reed.

Although the police worked on the case all day yesterday and plain clothes detectives were to have been called in today, the entire attempt to prosecute was dropped last night when the particulars were learned and the evangelist discovered that he had been the victim of "students out on a lark." He was, however, greatly frightened at first because of the fact that on several other occasions he had been threatened because of his violent attacks upon the saloon element. Attempts at violence were made against him at San Francisco and at Terre Haute after campaigns against the saloons. During the earlier part of the summer the temperance element in Greencastle was considering the plan of raising a tent and holding services under the supervision of Rev. Reed but shortly after he left on an extended lecture tour in England and has been in this city scarcely a week. He at first thought the men attacking him were "thugs" who did not propose to see the meeting progress.

He was greatly concerned because of the fact that he is away the greater portion of the time, he being in this city only one week out of seven and during that time his wife is alone with the children. He said yesterday before the students implicated in the affair confessed, that he proposed to run down the intruders if it cost him $1,000. At the same time he said that if the deed had been perpetrated by students and they should confess to it he would let the whole matter drop and would

WHERE DOES IT COME FROM?

PLAN TO HEAR BRYAN

Reports From all Over This and Neighboring Counties Tell of Preparations to be in Greencastle Tomorrow.

HE HAS TIME TO SAY MUCH

Reports received today from all over the county seem to point to a record-breaking crowd tomorrow to hear Bryan. A number of men who did not come to hear him on previous visits to Greencastle will be here tomorrow, as they desire to see the man who has such excellent chances of being president of the United States.

Not only are they coming from Putnam County but report has it that there will be many pilgrims from other counties not on the line of march tomorrow. The speech comes at an opportune hour so that many may come in by rail and interurban, hear the speaker and return home before dark, and this is undoubtedly the program of many persons. If the weather continues fine there will, according to all prognostications, be a record-breaking crowd here tomorrow.

MRS. ALEXANDER MARTIN

Caroline Hursey, wife of the late Alexander Martin, for fourteen years president of DePauw University, was born February 21, 1831, at Clarksburg, Virginia. She was married to Alexander Martin June 3, 1853. She was of Quaker ancestry, which was manifest in her temperance in all her life. She was very quiet in disposition, claiming that her first duties were to her family. While she carefully avoided anything like publicity in her work, she was very valuable to the church and to her many friends. For many years she was a teacher in the Locust Street Sunday School, and for a long period served as treasurer of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of her church. Her modest reserve never allowed her voice to be heard in public services, still she was a constant attendant upon the means of grace, and her pastor and all church people always thought that her presence and quiet assistance was of very great value.

During the time President Martin was in charge of the University Mrs. Martin was a most valuable helpmeet to him. In the beginning of his administration the customs of the times led many students, on arriving in Greencastle, to go directly to the home of the president. Mrs. Martin always gave them very kind welcome and many a time extended to them hospitalities over night and at her table until they were comfortably settled in their boarding places. Members of the faculty and students always felt that they were heartily welcome to the president's house and the reception tendered to the senior class and other students of the university were occasions cherished with the most grateful remembrances. The large number of graduates who went out from the university during the long period of President Martin's administration and his subsequent service as professor of Philosophy will remember Mrs. Martin with great esteem.

In a very especial sense it can be said of her that her children rise up to call her blessed. Her devotion to her family was wise and beautiful, and bore precious fruit in the noble characters for which all of her children were distinguished.

Mrs. Martin has two brothers living: John A. Hursey, Clarksburg, W. Va., and Lloyd Hursey, Shinnston, W. Va. Also a sister, Mrs. Hattie H. Brown, Vanatta, Ohio. Her children are: Professor James V., and the late Judge John E. Martin, and Mrs. Anna Whitte. These have preceded her to the immortal life. Her surviving children are Charles A. Martin, Greencastle, and Edwin L. Martin, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The decease occurred at 11 p. m. Saturday and was without pain and consciousness. The funeral services will take place at 1 p. m. on Monday at the family residence on Anderson Street. Services by Rev. J. M. Walker and Mrs. Switzer and Gobin.

IS INJURED IN FOOTBALL

Howard Dean of Roachdale Gets Hard Fall in Saturday's Game With Greencastle High School at McKeen Field.

HE HAS RECOVERED, HOWEVER

In the football game between the high school teams of Greencastle and Roachdale played here on last Saturday, Howard Dean, one of the Roachdale players, received injuries that were at first supposed to be serious. In one of the scrimmages Dean received a blow on the back of the neck that stunned him for a time and rendered him delirious. He was taken to Dr. Preston's office, where he received medical attention. He seemed to be suffering great pain, and was frequently attacked by muscular contractions that rendered him for the time being, almost uncontrollable. It was feared, at the time, that he was seriously hurt.

He recovered sufficiently, however, to go to the train with the team. This morning it is reported that he has quite recovered. In fact we learn that he was able to be about the streets Saturday night.

POLICE COURT NOTES

George Vaughn and Joe Friend were before the Mayor this morning on the charge of intoxication. Both received the usual sentence.

Charley Schull was brought before the Mayor on a charge of assault and battery filed by his wife. She alleged that this morning he had beaten her and threatened to kill her. In defense Schull alleged that his wife was of a violent temper and was throwing things about and he had simply caught her and held her to prevent such throwing. The court, however, was not convinced and assessed a fine of $1 and costs of $10. The case was appealed to the circuit court.

Later Schull appeared and stayed his fine, withdrawing his appeal.

The Children's Missionary Society of the College Avenue Church known as the "Kings Heralds" met with Mrs. Donner this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Donner is the superintendent of this organization.

THE SIGMA CHI CELEBRATE

Corner Stone of the New Local Chapter House Laid This Afternoon—Will Cost $25,000 When Finished.

WAS PRESENTED BY THE ALUMNI

The laying of the corner stone of the new Sigma Chi house this afternoon opens a new epoch in the history of DePauw university for the new building will be the first house in Greencastle built and dedicated to the exclusive use of a Greek Letter Fraternity. The program was carried out this afternoon at 2:30 in the presence of the local chapter and their many friends. The address was given by the Rev. W. R. Halstead, class of '71 of Terre Haute. This was followed by the laying of the corner stone by S. A. Hays, class of '72. In the cornerstone were placed copies of the fraternity publications, roll of the local chapter, an alumni directory, a copy of the Bible, a DePauw Daily and a picture of John Cording in whose memory his father gave a large part of the donation.

The house is given to the chapter by the Sigma Chi Chapter Home Association of DePauw, which is composed entirely of alumni, assisted by Mr. Cording. This association will own and control the building absolutely.

The house will cost $25,000 when finished and will accommodate 18 men. The contract calls for the completion of the house by the first of March, 1909, so that the chapter may occupy it the third term, but the contractor expects to have his part finished by February.

LARGE CROWD FOR GOMPERS

"The Grand Old Man of Labor" Arrives in Greencastle Saturday Night Over Two Hours Late, But Is Given a Great and Enthusiastic Reception—Spoke But a Few Minutes.

DENOUNCES WATSON AND TAFT

Samuel Gompers, "The Grand Old Man of Labor," addressed a large gathering of citizens and students at the interurban station Saturday night. Mr. Gompers' car was over two hours late, being scheduled to arrive here at 5:20, and on account of the other speeches he was to make the same evening, his special car did not tarry long in Greencastle.

When the car pulled into the station cheers were sent up for the "Grand Old Man." The reception committee representing Greencastle and the reception committee from Brazil climbed aboard and greeted the speaker. Mr. Gompers was introduced to the people by Lincoln Snyder, and when the speaker stepped before the crowd, on the back platform of his car, the cheering could be heard for squares.

Mr. Gompers spoke but briefly. The lateness of the hour and the condition of his voice, which was very weak, compelled him to make his remarks short. He said that Watson should be defeated at the polls because of his utter uselessness, as a Congressman, to the people. He declared that Marshall was the friend of the workingmen, and all the people, and that he should be the one to elect. Of the national ticket Mr. Gompers said, that "Injunction Taft" should be turned down by the people. As for Mr. Bryan, the speaker appealed to all laboring men, as he said that class he represented, to vote for this champion of the laboring man and the American people.

Mr. Gompers' car pulled out, amid the loud cheering of the large crowd, for his appointments at Brazil and Terre Haute, where he was scheduled to speak the same evening. If Greencastle's demonstration, where organized labor does not exist, counts for anything, Mr. Gompers must have had large crowds at Brazil and Terre Haute, at which places all trades and crafts are highly organized.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Delegates From the Various Schools of the County Meet in All-Day Session at the Court House on Sunday.

JUDGE RAWLEY GIVES ADDRESS

Sunday the delegates from the various Sabbath Schools of the County held a convention at the court house in this city. It was an all-day session, including a program for both forenoon and afternoon. It also included an excellent dinner served to the delegates at the Palace Restaurant at noon. The large dining room on the second floor was given over to the Sunday School workers, and a most enjoyable time was had there.

The morning session was called to order at 10:30 o'clock and the devotional exercises were conducted by A. O. Lockridge. The rest of the session was given over to reports of officers and committees. After dinner addresses were delivered by Dr. Hoagland, Dr. VanDyke and Judge Rawley. Dr. VanDyke spoke on the subject of the "Study of the Bible in the Home." Dr. Hoagland discussed the "Relation of the Church to the School." Judge Rawley spoke on "The Largest Sunday School in the West." He gave some of his experiences as a Judge of the Juvenile Court, and stated that it was his opinion that the carelessness of parents in regard to the doings of their children between the ages of eight and fifteen was largely responsible for many of the children before the Juvenile Court.

The convention was an immense success, and O. L. Jones, county president, Minnie Bowen, county secretary, T. C. Grooms and A. O. Lockridge of this city are deserving of the thanks of all present for their untiring efforts to make the success possible.

DIPHTHERIA IN FLOYD TOWNSHIP

Case Near Center School House May Make Necessary the Closing of the Township Schools for a Little Time

Dr. King, County Health Officer, this morning announced that a case of diphtheria had been diagnosed at the home of Ott Herrod, near Center School House in Floyd Township. Dr. King states that it may be possible that it will be necessary to close the school there till it is definitely known whether other of the pupils have been exposed. As yet this is the only case known to exist in the township.

THE GOMPERS SPEECH.

It is probably fair to say that few people who went to hear Samuel Gompers Saturday night expected just the sort of speech he made. They had not looked for such plain, unqualified statements of the unfitness of Watson and Taft for the offices they seek. It came as a surprise in Greencastle because that which is the paramount issue with labor has not been the issue here. There are many in Greencastle that have believed that the temperance issue was claiming the entire attention of all the people of the state. Others have felt that the tariff was an important question of the campaign. To the laboring men both these issues are secondary to certain propositions which they believe will vitally affect labor. The attitude of men who are candidates toward these propositions is, to laboring men, the thing of prime importance. The record of Watson and Taft has not been such as to please labor. And labor is not to be satisfied with political promises. It believes that the leopard can not change its spots. By their record they judge them. The temperance Republicans are willing to take Watson upon his promise, ignoring his past, ignoring his record of broken political pledges. Labor runs no such risk. And Saturday night, in speaking here, Mr. Gompers assumed that he was speaking to an audience of union men, men familiar with the record of every one who has had to do with legislation, and who now seeks re-election. To such men it was only necessary to mention the record of Watson and Taft. The earnestness, the striking personality of the speaker, the directness of his charge of unfitness, the solemnity of his appeal had its effect even upon the comparatively unsympathetic crowd, unsympathetic only because non-union. No wonder with those men who have been accustomed to look upon Mr. Gompers as their leader in battles innumerable, their adviser in times of stress and trouble, his words are a burning call to duty. And labor is hearing the call of Samuel Gompers.

PREPARE FOR THE 'SCARES'

Last Weeks of the Campaign to be Used by the Republicans in Desperate Attempt to Frighten Votes Into That Party's Ranks.

BUSINESS MEN MEET AT NOON

Indianapolis, Oct. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The last two weeks of the campaign are at hand and the time until the election will soon be reckoned by days. And this means the "roorback" period that has been depended on for helpful "scares" etc. by Republican managers in many campaigns. The men in charge of the Republican organization this year are especially desperate. They see defeat staring them in the face and it is believed that they will not hesitate to use any trick or device if it promises a return in the way of votes.

Already immense and flaming "posters" have been put up in many parts of the state, evidently in the hope that temperance Democrats will take the bait and vote the Republican ticket on the county option question. No Democrat should allow himself to be diverted from the vital issues of the campaign by these "posters" or any similar scheme, no matter who is behind it.

It has been learned that a large number of men in the pay of the Republican committees have been sent into all corners of the state—particularly into the labor centers—to distribute Taft and Watson literature and to try to break down the work of the labor organizations. It is said that these men have been supplied by Mulhall, political blackmailer and enemy of labor, and that they work under his direction. The Republican managers at first tried to deny that they had any connection with Mulhall and his underlings are still in the service of the Republican committees and of the Van Cleave "manufacturers" association, and they are still doing their sneaking work in various parts of the state according to reports that reach here.

The tide has set in so strongly for the Democrats that no amount of kind of "roorbacks," political liars or blackmailers, circus "posters" or anything else can prevent a Democratic victory in Indiana for Bryan and Keen and Marshall, Conservative Republicans who have no connection with the machine that is fighting for its life are not backward about conceding the defeat of their party next month. The machine itself knows that it is beaten to a standstill unless it can turn the tide by the use of money or by resorting to other disreputable tactics. But the Democrats, of course, will be on their guard against all forms of crookedness during the closing days. It is generally admitted here by observers in both parties that the estimate of 30,000 plurality in Indiana for Bryan given by Walter Wellman in the Chicago Record-Herald, a Taft paper, is not a bit too high. It will probably be greater.

As an indication of the spirit that exists in Indianapolis among Democrats, it is worth while to speak of the Democratic business men's noon meetings that are to be held until the election. At two downtown places in the city, one on Pennsylvania street and the other on Delaware street, rallying speeches will be made during the noon hour. Business men are thoroughly alive to the importance of Democratic success in this campaign, and the work that will be done at these "ginger shop" gatherings will be immensely valuable.

The New York World has cartoons showing a Standard Oil can taking the place of the dome in a picture of the Capitol at Washington. Good! It is another evidence that the people do not rule at Washington, but that the trusts rule through the agency of the Republican party. As to legislation, Mr. Sherman, candidate for vice-president, said "The Republican party is willing and ready to accept full responsibility." Exactly. And the Standard Oil and other trusts rule through that party. The only way to prevent such rule is to elect Bryan.

I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 50c at the Owl Drug Store.

HOW TO VOTE

All Voters Should Read Carefully the Following Specific Instructions.

Every voter who goes to the polls is interested in making his ballot effective. Instruction in voting, therefore, cannot be too thorough. Not only is this especially true as to first voters, who will have their first experience with the Australian ballot system, but it is true of all others because of the changes that have been made in the law since it was originally passed. At public meetings and privately voters should be given accurate information as to what is required in casting a ballot. The following instructions, therefore, should be studied, as they will be found of value:

The device at the head of the Democratic ticket is a rooster.
The device at the head of the Republican ticket is an eagle.
The Democratic ticket is in the first column, the Republican ticket is in the second column, and so on.

Below is a sample of the heading of the Democratic and Republican Electoral and State tickets, with the respective party devices, in the order in which they will appear on the ballot. The names of the fifteen Presidential Electors come first and are followed by the names of the candidates for state offices.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET
For Presidential Elector-at-Large,
ADAM HEIMBERGER.

REPUBLICAN TICKET
For Presidential Elector-at-Large,
WINFIELD T. DURBIN.

When you go into your voting place you will be handed three ballots:
The State ballot—On red paper, containing the candidates to be voted on for State offices, except for Senator and Representative.
The county ballot—Printed on white paper.
The township ballot—Printed on yellow paper, containing the township candidates.

If you want to vote a straight Democratic ticket, make a cross within the circle containing the rooster at the head of the first column of the ballot.

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS:

First. You must get your ballot and the blue pencil from the Polling Clerks in the election room.

Second. If you desire to vote a straight ticket, then make a cross, thus, X, within the large circle at the head of the ticket containing the device of the party for whose candidates you desire to vote. If you do not desire to vote a straight ticket, you must not make a cross in the large circle containing the device of a party, but must make a cross, thus, X, on the small square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom you desire to vote, on whatever list of candidates it may be. If the large circle at the head of the ticket is marked with a cross or otherwise and the ballot is marked with a cross or otherwise at any other place, it will be void and cannot be counted, unless there be no indication for some office in the list printed under such marked device, in which case you may indicate your choice for such office by making a cross, thus, X, on the square to the left of the name of any candidate for such office on any other list. The cross must be placed within or on the circle or square, or the ballot will be void and can not be counted.

Third. Do not mutilate your ballots, nor mark them, either by scratching off a name or writing one upon them, nor in any other way put a mark upon them, except by placing one in the circle or on the squares, as above described. Otherwise the ballot will not be counted. You must not put any mark of any kind upon your ballot except in the manner above described.

Fourth. After you have marked your ballots, and before you leave the election booth, fold them up separately so that the face of each one can not be seen, and so the initial letters of the names of the Polling Clerks on the back thereof can be seen. Then hand your ballots to the inspector, the pencil to the Polling Clerks, and immediately leave the election room.

Fifth. If you are physically unable to mark your ballots, or can not read English, so inform the Polling Clerks, and make an affidavit to that effect. They will then go with you into the election booth, and you can then tell them how you desire to vote, and they will mark your ballot for you. Neither you nor the Polling Clerks must permit any other person to hear or see how your ballot is marked. It is a penal offense to declare you can not read English or can not mark your ballot, if, in fact, you can.

[In no case can the ballots be marked by the Polling Clerks if the voter can read the English language and is physically able to mark his ballot. Nor can they mark it until the voter has made the proper affidavit.]

Sixth. If you should accidentally, or by mistake, deface, mutilate or spoil one of our ballots, return it to the Poll Clerks and get another one of the same kind.

Seventh. You must not accept a ballot from any person outside of the election room. Any ballot outside is fraudulent; and it is a penitentiary offense to have it in your possession, whether you attempt to vote it or not.

Eighth. You must not attempt to hold any conversation in the election room except with members of the Election Board and the Polling Clerks.

Ninth. Use only the blue pencil handed you by the Polling Clerks in marking your ballots. If you mark with any other pencil, your ballot so marked will be void, and will not be counted.

Tenth. You must not put any mark of any kind on your ballot, except as above described.

VOTING BY MACHINE.

If you are unable to vote by machine on account of physical disability or inability to read English, and make an affidavit to that effect, you will be instructed or assisted by the Polling Clerks, as in the case of voting by ballot. If you request it, you will, upon being registered by the Polling Clerks, be instructed by them as to the manner of voting by machine. You cannot remain in the voting machine booth more than one minute; and no person can be in or near the machine when a voter is in the voting machine booth unless it is the Polling Clerks while instructing or assisting the voter.

THE NEW LAW AS TO BUYING AND SELLING VOTES.

3. THE RIGHT RING--AND THE RIGHT WAY

When You Talk to a Mule Use Language He Can Understand.

The following dispatch appeared in the newspapers of Oct. 19:

"Philadelphia, Pa., October 9.—The Sharples Separator company's works, one of the largest plants of its kind in the world, will shut down in the event of the election of W. J. Bryan, according to the statement issued by P. H. Sharples, president of the company. He says: "The possibility of such a dire calamity to us as his (Bryan's) election seems remote, but the hour we are convinced such a thing will occur or has occurred, these works will have closed down."

Under date of Oct. 12 the following letter was sent to the Sharples company by Marbaugh Bros., of Monterey, Ind.:

October 12, 1908.
Sharples Separator Co., Chester, Pa.:
Gentlemen—We notice in the Saturday's paper that you state you intend shutting down your factory after Nov. 3rd, in case Mr. Bryan is elected. We feel so sure that Mr. Bryan will be elected that we would advise you to close down immediately, as we will at least make an effort to let the Democrats know that you are very unfair and unprincipled and that you do not deserve the trade coming from the Democratic business men.

We have handled your separators for a number of years, but never knew until now that one political party would cause the cows to quit giving milk.

We consider this remark very unprincipled and respectfully ask that you confirm or deny this charge, as we do not want to leave this matter unnoticed, and we assure you that this will have full attention at the Hardware Convention, as we consider it an insult to any American citizen who deserves the right to vote according to his political convictions.

We are sending a copy of this letter to your Chicago office and will give this matter full notice in the Associated Press, if not denied.

We are also at this time sending a copy of this letter to the Democratic headquarters at Indianapolis. If you can conscientiously deny this charge we will forward it to the same parties. We respectfully await your prompt reply in this matter.

MARBAUGH BROS.

In order that it may be known what the Sharples concern's silly threat amounts to it is only necessary to call attention to the offer of a Chicago separator manufacturer to give work to all persons who lose employment in the Sharples plant.

In Wheeling there is a branch of the National Tube Company, which is constituent part of the United States Steel Corporation. This mill was closed a year ago when the panic struck the country, and has been closed ever since. The result was that 4,000 men were thrown out of work and have been, most of them, unemployed ever since. Now it is not to be said that the trust is necessarily to blame for this. For it is quite conceivable that it found it possible to produce more cheaply elsewhere. But still there are 4,000 men out of work. Other mills across the river have been closed since November last and as a consequence 2,000 more men, 500 of whom live in Wheeling, have nothing to do.

The other day we were told in an official report that "five thousand children who attend the public schools of Chicago are habitually hungry," and that "ten thousand other children in the city, while not such extreme cases, do not have sufficient food."

Commenting on the above facts the News says:

"Undoubtedly there will be much suffering this winter, and many calls for relief. For the panic and depression have lasted much longer than most people thought possible. There have been few concessions in the matter of prices, so that we have a most unusual combination—namely, hard times and high prices. Probably those people who have about as much as they ever had, and who have not been forced to change their style of living, do not realize how much distress there is, especially in the manufacturing centers.

The notorious political blackmailer, Mulhall, the creature of the Republican committees and VanCleave's anti-labor union association, came into the state originally to work for Watson's nomination. Since his nomination he has solicited brewery support for Watson when his time was not employed with his other schemes.

The Taft campaign headquarters have been transferred to the White House, where government clerks—paid by the people—are being used by Manager Roosevelt without expense to the Republican national committee.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription." The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alternative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhs of these organs. It also cures the chronic or mucous stages of these affections, and is often successful in affecting the cures.

"The Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of the class of diseases—those regular weaknesses, dysmenstruums and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and is especially for weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the breakdown, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formula of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines. The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to take as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

WILLIAM ALSPACH.

The Little Tin Cottages.

By Virginia Blair.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

The sky was blue, and the lake was blue, and there were four blue birds against the silver gray of the birches.
"It's like a chain of sapphires," Peggy said as she and her mother followed the narrow path among the trees.

"Yes," murmured her mother faintly.
Peggy looked back at her.
"Mother," she protested, "you are tired out," and she took the heavy bag that her mother had carried, and, thus weighted with two, she plodded on until she came to an intersection of the path.

"I'm not sure which way to turn to go to our cottage," she said. "Doesn't it sound too good to be true to say our cottage, mother?"

"Yes, it does, and the rent is so cheap," Mrs. Linton said.

"We couldn't have come if it hadn't been cheap," Peggy remarked philosophically.

"No, we couldn't," her mother agreed,
and again they plodded on.

Presently a man appeared among the trees. He wore blue overalls, and he was wheeling a barrow.

"Oh, can you tell us where Miss Brownlee's cottages are?" Peggy called eagerly.

"The tin cottages?" the man inquired.

"The what?" Peggy gasped.

The man grinned. "The tin cottages. Those are the ones Miss Brownlee rents. You go on till you come to a path toward the lake, and you'll find them."

"Mother," Peggy demanded when he had gone on, "what do you suppose he means?"

"I'm sure I don't know, and I don't care," said Mrs. Linton pensively.

"Poor little mother," Peggy worried,
"you're tired out."

Again they went on, and at last they saw before them a row of diminutive houses like inverted bathtubs. They were painted gray, and they were very compact and neat, but to Peggy, who had dreamed of a picturesque rustic bungalow, they were nightmares.

"Oh," she said in dismay, "they are hideous, mother!"

And after one glance Mrs. Linton sat down on the moss and laid her umbrella beside her. "It's the last straw,"
she said dejectedly.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Peggy. And her mother echoed the plaint.

But presently they saw a woman beckoning to them from the porch of a large rustic cottage at the end of a row of tin carriages.

"That must be Miss Brownlee," Peggy said. "I am going to tell her that I think she should have told us that the cottages were made of tin."

But as they came up to the porch
the beaming face of the rather massive lady disarmed criticism.

"I thought you would be here about this time," she said. "I want you to have lunch with me."

"Oh," Peggy demurred, "we don't like to trouble you."

"I'm dead lonesome," Miss Brownlee hastened to explain, "and I like company. That's why I built the cottages."

"Aren't they a little odd?" Peggy asked.

"I think they are beautiful," Miss Brownlee declared radiantly. "After the big fair they were for sale—they had been models, you know—and I bought them cheap, and they are nice and comfortable inside. I have rented the one next to you to a young man, an artist. He comes tomorrow."

"Has he seen them?" Peggy quavered, not daring to look at her mother.

"No, but I told him how nice they were."

"Oh," Peggy murmured, and went on eating hot biscuits.

A half hour later she said to Miss Brownlee, "I have never tasted such a perfectly delicious lunch."

Miss Brownlee laughed. "Well, I am a right good cook," she said. "I always wanted to have an opportunity to learn things, but after mother died
I was too old to take up painting or music, so I just went on cooking. After all, I don't know but it's just as worth while to be a good cook as a bad artist."

"Indeed it is!" said Peggy heartily.
"I paint some myself. But I wish I could make cake like this."

"Oh, do you paint?" cried Miss Brownlee. "Some time I am going to get you to make a picture of the cottage."

In the morning Peggy set her easel up on the bluff, but the magic of the lake eluded her, and when she came in she had nothing to show but a sketch of Sally.

She gave it to Miss Brownlee.
"Well, well," said that delighted lady, "it's just like Sally. I'm going to have it framed. By the way," she added, "it's time for that young man to come. And there he is now." And she hurried to the door.

He was a handsome young fellow, with a gray cap on the back of his head.

"I wanted to ask about my cottage.
Where is it?"

"There," said Miss Brownlee, pointing to the one next to Peggy's.

"That? Oh, by George!" the young man ejaculated, and Peggy laughed to herself.

"It's the one I told you about in my letter," Miss Brownlee went on.

"Yes," he murmured feebly, "you told me."

"This young lady and her mother
have the one next to it," and Miss Brownlee stepped back and showed Peggy behind her—Peggy, whose blue eyes danced wickedly.

The young man looked at her, taking in with appreciation the grace of the slender girlish figure.

"I think I shall like—the cottage," he said slowly, and when they had talked for a few minutes Peggy went back to her mother.

"He is very nice," she remarked,
"and his name is Meredith." And with that she took her portfolio and started for the bluff.

"Look here," said some one over her shoulder two hours later, "you ought not to try that sort of thing."

It was Mr. Meredith. "Why not?"
asked Peggy.

"I saw your sketch of Sally," he told her. "You do it better than water things. Your lake and sky aren't right."

Peggy flushed. "Oh," she said, "I don't want to paint pussy cats! I want to paint the silver water and the silver trees and a silver spirit of the woods."

"Silver tummy?" said the young man. "You ought to do things like the studies your mother showed me just now."

"Pot boilers!" Peggy murmured.

"This is the way water ought to be handled," and he opened his portfolio and handed her a sketch.

"Oh!" Peggy said as she looked at it, and when she had handed it back to him there was real humility in her tone.

"I have never seen anything so wonderful."

"It is no more wonderful than yours," he told her, "but I have studied longer—abroad and all that."

"Oh, have you?" said the eager Peggy, and they sat there and talked until the shadows fell.

That night Meredith said to Miss Brownlee, "I think it is beautiful here," and Peggy, watching the moonlight through the small square window of her room, smiled in the darkness as she thought how deliciously Mr. Meredith said "By George!" when he looked at her best work.

The next morning she took his advice and sketched the six curly tailed pigs, Sally over a saucer of milk and Miss Brownlee among her pots and pans.

"That's the best thing you have done yet," Meredith told her as he examined the sketch of Miss Brownlee. "The light of the fire and the sunlight through the window give a chance for values."

"I wish I knew as much as you do about such things," Peggy sighed.

"We will work together for awhile," he said, "and I will teach you all I know."

But he taught her other things than art as their easels stood side by side on the bluff, and the white gulls dived to the sapphire lake, and the wind ruffled the curls on Peggy's forehead.
And one morning as Peggy finished a sketch of silver birches with a bit of lake beyond he looked over her shoulder.

"You are getting on wonderfully," he said, "but you ought to have a year abroad."

"But I can't," Peggy told him.

"You can if you will marry me," was his unexpected proposition.

"And 'Oh!' said poor Peggy.

"And to think," said the radiant Miss Brownlee when they told her, "that I should have a romance right here in my tin cottages!"

"Dear cottages!" murmured Peggy.

And as the lovers went down the path the moonlight touched the little gray houses with magic light and made of each of them a castle of dreams.

THE SECOND EMPIRE.

Two Picturesque Episodes in a Period of Unrest.

Walking about the streets, riding on buses, junketing up and down the river in steamboats, I was profoundly struck by the unrest among the people, their intense hatred of emperor and empress. One day I caught a glimpse of Rochefort, carried aloft on the shoulders of a mob of students thronging the Boulevard Saint Michel.
I never saw a man looking so helplessly frightened as did the founder of the Lanterne, then in its prime.
Whether he feared the police or a fall
I do not know, but his terror was abject.

In the summer time the emperor paid a visit to Beauvais. On the chance of getting material for an article acceptable in London I journeyed thither with North Peat, who went down as representative of the Morning Star. The prince imperial accompanied the emperor, who drove through living lanes of people stretching from the roadway to the open windows of the topmost chamber. They came to see,
but they would not remain to cheer.
The occasion was the presentation of prizes gained at the local Lycee. The head prize was never delivered, the winner, a lad of fourteen, declining to accept it from the hand of the hated emperor—H. W. Lucy in Cornhill Magazine.

ADJUSTED HIS CANE.

Then the Man From Berlin Explained
Why He Did It.

A man stood before a shop window with his cane sticking out from under his arm. A stout, blond gentleman in passing struck the cane smartly with his own, restoring it from its obstructive horizontal position to the proper vertical one.

"Say, what's the matter with you?
You're the freshest guy I ever saw.
Are you looking for trouble?"

Thus said the man whose cane had been tapped. But he who had tapped it, speaking with a German accent, answered gently:

"Why, sir, I did nothing but restore your cane to its right inclination. Absolutely you were holding it under your arm. It was jabbing people in the breast, the back, even the eye, and yet you meant no harm."

"Well, I stopped that nuisance which you were unconsciously committing. In Berlin it is the custom always to stop it so. And no one takes offense. On the contrary, in Berlin the correction is received with a smile and a word of thanks. Isn't it so here?"

"No, it isn't," said the other, "but it should be. I thank you, sir, myself, and I apologize."—New York Press.

John Wesley's Prescription.

"Here is a rare little book," said a Methodist local preacher. "It is John Wesley's 'Primitive Physick.' Wesley dabbled in medicine, setting a fashion that has not yet died out. Did you ever know a Methodist minister who didn't dabble in medicine?"

The full title of the volume was "Primitive Physick; or, An Easy and Natural Method of Curing Most Diseases." The local preacher said that he had paid $40 for the book, but that as a medical work it was not really worth 40 cents. To show the weakness of John Wesley's doctoring he quoted the following consumption cure:

"Every morning cut up a little turf
of fresh earth, and lying down, breathe into the hole for a quarter of an hour.
I have known a deep consumption cured
thus."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Letters He Dictated.

"Well, goodbye, dear," said Mr. True-boy to his beloved spouse. "I must go and dictate those letters—twenty-six of them—so you mustn't expect me home very early."

"All right," was the response. "But I wish you wouldn't work so hard."

Half an hour later Mr. Trueboy entered his club and sat down, with three others, at a card table.

"Just a moment, you fellows, before the first hand is dealt. I've got to keep my word with my wife. One of you just take down what I dictate: 'A b e d e f g h i j k l m n o p q r s t u v w x y z.' There, those letters are off my mind!"

Willie Has Such an Active Brain.

"Was Daniel really such a wise man,
mamma?" asked Willie thoughtfully.

"Yes, dear, as wise almost as Solomon, Willie."

"Well, mother, I bet Solomon would have done better than Daniel did, anyway," continued Willie.

"Why, what do you mean, my son?"

"I'll bet Solomon would have had sense enough to charge admission
when he went into the lions' den!"— Ladies' Home Journal.

Good Family.

"My daughter appears to have married very happily," remarked a lady.
"Her husband has no wealth, it must be admitted, but he has family."

"Yes, I heard he was a widower with six children!" a neighbor sniffed acidly.

Signs.

"Do you believe in signs?"

"Well, I must confess that when I see a man wearing one proclaiming that he is deaf and dumb I get a little shaky."—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE TARDY GUEST.

He Didn't Tell His Hostess the Truth
About the Delay.

Dinner had been ready and waiting twenty minutes. The wife of the tardy guest was very much embarrassed.
Just to think that her husband was so rude as to be late at a dinner engagement and keep all the guests waiting!
After awhile the belated one arrived,
red faced and perspiring.

"So sorry to keep you waiting," he said. "But I was detained at the office with an out of town customer.
Just couldn't get away."

The excuse sounded all right and was accepted by the hostess, but it was a myth.

The truth was: Preoccupied, he had gone home from the office at the usual time and found the house locked, much to his surprise. Where in the mischief were his wife and children? He wondered. Why didn't they tell him they were going away? He went all around the house and tried the doors, but they were locked. Then he found a piece of iron in the back yard and broke open a window and crowded in. He crowded out through the window for the evening paper and crowded back. He read the paper, and still the wife and children didn't return.

At 6:03 o'clock he remembered the dinner engagement. While he dressed and rode twenty blocks the guests waited. But others have made the same blunder.—Kansas City Star.

Pie With Knives.

George Washington, John Adams,
Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Monroe, the first five presidents, each ate pie with his knife. It was not until John Quincy Adams entered the White House that the substitution of the fork for the knife seems to have occurred to any citizen of America. "He contracted the habit while in France," said Mrs. Adams in an apologetic tone to some of her guests, "and he finds it difficult to break himself of it since we returned home." So the first great general of the American army, the sturdy patriot of Massachusetts, the author of the Declaration of Independence, the chief advocate of the federal constitution and the originator of the Monroe doctrine, ate all pie with the knife.—Utica Observer.

A Doctor's Disadvantage.

"In one way," said a collector, "it is easier to get money from a doctor than anybody else who is slow pay. It is more difficult for him to swear that he hasn't been able to make any collections himself since the first of the year.
A doctor's reception room is open to all possible patients. A collector with a grain of ingenuity can find a way to worm out of the men on the waiting list some information as to the terms of payment. After an interview with three or four persons who have paid spot cash for treatment and who have told the collector they paid it takes a mighty nerve on the part of the doctor to insist that he hasn't a dollar to his name."—New York Times.

Lots of Places.

"What's the matter?" asked the police man of the tramp. "Haven't you any place to go?"

"Any place ter go?" was the contentious reply. "I've got the whole United States before me. I've got so many places ter go dat it's worryin' me dizzy makin' up me mind which way ter start."

young man I could name.—Exchange.

Impertinence of Genius.

Dr. Johnson once called upon Mr. Garrick in London and was shown into his study. Unfortunately, a door being open, he strayed into an adjoining room which contained the novels and lighter works which had been presented as tributes to the highly admired actor. Johnson first read a bit from one and then another and threw them down, strewing the floor with the expensive volumes. Garrick was angry at finding Johnson there and said, "This is a private cabinet, and no company is admitted here."

"But," said Johnson, with impertinent coolness, "I was determined to examine your valuables, which I find consist of three sorts—stuff, trash and nonsense."

Mrs. Benham—As the story goes, Rip Van Winkle slept twenty years. Benham—I wonder if his breakfast was ready when he woke up.

H. S. received the first kick-off and within two minutes made a touchdown, but Bittles failed to kick goal. At the end of the first half the score stood 10 to 0 in favor of the locals. In the second half Roachdale held us to two touchdowns and one goal kick, the game ending with the score 21 to 0 in our favor. Bittles, Thomas and Sellers carry the honors for G. H. S. while Dean and Inman did the work for Roachdale. The lineup was:

Claire Bittles quarterback

The Roachdale people turned out to the number of about twelve.

Coincidence.

"Somehow I'm awfully stupid tonight," remarked young Borum languidly the other evening.

"Indeed you are," retorted Miss Cutting, somewhat impulsively.

"Do you really mean that?" asked the young man in surprise.

"I merely indorsed your remarks. Didn't you just now assert that you were stupid?" she queried.

"Yes," he responded, "but I only said so without thinking."

"And up to the time you spoke of it," she replied, "I only thought so without saying it."—Pearson's Weekly.

"Drunk With Thy Beauty."

Charles Dickens once had an argument with a friend about Byron's expression, "Drunk with thy beauty," to which he made great objection. During the discussion the novelist gazed as if enraptured at his host's fair haired daughter, who was in the room.

At last he sprang to his feet, struck a dramatic attitude, clasped his heart with his hands and stalked to the window, where he wrote on the white woodwork:

O maiden of the amber dropping hair,
Would I, Byronically, thy praise might utter!Drunk with thy beauty, would that I might dare
To breathe out paeans, borne upon a shutter!

Voted Twice.

Sir Gavan Duffy, formerly speaker of the legislative assembly of Victoria, was once returned to his seat by a single vote majority. On visiting his constituents subsequently, he was received with a special warmth by an Irish fellow countryman.

"And so," said Sir Gavan Duffy to his friend, "you were one of my supporters."

"No, sir," was the reply. "I was two of them."

The Boss.

"But," exclaimed the man of delicate sensibilities, "will your conscience permit you to do as you suggest?"

"Look here, friend," answered the New York politician, "I am accustomed to be boss even of my own conscience."—Washington Star.

Not Modesty.

"Sometimes," said the press humorist, "I think my jokes are rotten. I suppose that's my modesty."

"No," explained a friend, "that's your common sense."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LONDON GAMING DENS

The Way the Police Descend Upon Them In a Raid.

SKILL, CUNNING AND DARING.

Absolute Secrecy Is Maintained by the Officials, and the Policemen Are Kept In the Dark Until the Last Moment—Getting Into the Club.

The police have recently carried out some sensational raids on big gaming clubs, and it may be interesting to learn how these raids are effected. This is how it is done in London: As soon as the detectives' suspicions have been confirmed they apply to the commissioner of police for a warrant to enter. The warrant authorizes certain officers mentioned by name to enter the club in the name of the king. Ordinary policemen are not permitted to carry out a raid, but the detectives can call upon them for assistance at the critical moment.

Absolute secrecy is enforced right up to the moment of entry. There is no excitement at the station on that day, and the men on duty have no suspicion of what is in the wind. Plans of the house are drawn and carefully studied by the raiding officers, for the doorkeeper of the club is prepared at the slightest alarm to send a warning to his customers, and every vestige of gambling apparatus will mysteriously disappear and the raid fail. A carefully planned ruse, therefore, has to be evolved which will disarm suspicion.

During the day a body of "reserve" policemen will receive a communication from the station that they will be required to parade at a certain hour, and they meet with no idea of what is expected of them. They are drawn up in line, and after names have been called over they are dismissed from the station one by one, with the injunction to be in the immediate neighborhood of a certain street in a couple of hours and not to get near the spot before the prearranged moment.

The first officer to appear on the scene is the one in charge of the raid. He is always disguised and usually looks like a well dressed man about town. He passes the club carelessly, but it is sufficient for him to learn from a confederate inside that gaming has commenced. A policeman then saunters to the corner of the street and stays there as though he were on "point" duty. Then, not till then, is the information of the precise club to be raided secretly conveyed to the attacking force in their hiding places, while the club, unconscious of its impending fate, pursues its gambling.

The first difficulty to surmount is to get past the burly doorkeeper. If this is not successfully done the raid will end in failure. Presently the sound of a drunken song is heard in the distance, and two apparently rough looking men come staggering along. As they near the entrance to the club they begin disputing and soon come to blows. The doorkeeper peeps through the wicket and orders the men away. One of the men rushes at the wicket and challenges the doorkeeper to "come outside like a man" and at the same time shouts out something about the character of the house. The combatants continue fighting, and the officer at the corner comes along and orders them away. The men return, however, to "have it out with the doorkeeper."

The noise increases, attracting homeward bound gentlemen in evening dress, who gather round and urge the men on.

The doorkeeper by this time becomes alarmed, for the rowdy crowd will frighten away his clients. Perhaps just at this moment a member of the club arrives and seeks admission. The door is opened with the utmost caution to admit him. Before he has time to fasten it the two officers hastily secure the member and rush upstairs. The two combatants were disguised policemen and the onlookers detectives.

As soon as an entrance into the club has been effected the constable at the corner sounds his whistle, and before the sound has died away the whole neighborhood is alive with police. If the house boasts of a trapdoor on the roof, the flash of lanterns will be seen up there, the men having been concealed among the chimney pots since it was dark. The front door is secured, and the police form a guard around the house, so that escape is impossible. Meantime the scene upstairs is one of the wildest excitement. The gamblers, intent on business, had not noticed the scuffle in the passage, and the first intimation they get of the state of affairs is when the door is thrown open and the officer in charge calls on them to regard themselves as prisoners. Then they realize their position. The tables are overturned, and card counters and money roll all over the floor as the members endeavor to escape. They make for the street door, but balked in this direction, hurry to all parts of the house to hide.

The crestfallen members of the club are conveyed to the station, each in the custody of two officers. Then the house is searched for the gaming apparatus. Every inch of the place is examined, for gamblers have remarkable contrivances whereby they can hide their apparatus in the event of being raided. Tops of tables are knocked off, flooring taken up and walls searched for secret cupboards. Yards of chalked string are regarded as prizes, and with these and more apparent proofs the case is ready for the magistrate. The evidence is laid before him, and the proprietor and members are charged and the sentence passed or a heavy fine imposed on the prisoners.—London Tit-Bits.

ASSERTED HERSELF.

The Young Woman Also Had a Few Questions to Ask.

The young woman was being interviewed by her prospective employer. The man lit off his words and hurried them at her in a way to frighten an ordinary girl out of her wits.

"Chew gum?" he asked.

"No, sir."

"Talk slang?"

"No, sir."

"Know how to spell correctly?"

"Yes, sir."

"Use the telephone every other minute?"

"No, sir."

"Usually tell the office force how much the firm owes and all the rest of the private business you learn?"

"No, sir."

He was thinking of something else to ask her when she took a hand in the matter and put a few questions.

"Smoke cigars when you're dictating?"

"Why—er—no," he gasped in astonishment.

"Slam things around when business is bad?"

"No."

"Lay for your employees when they get caught in a block some morning?"

"No, indeed."

"Think you know enough about grammar and punctuation to appreciate a good stenographer when you get one?"

"I think so."

"Want me to go to work, or is your time worth so little that?"

He interrupted her enthusiastically:

"Kindly hang up your things and let's get at these letters."—Judge.

WOOD LOTS OF JAPAN.

Example Furnished of Tree Growing on Small Plots.

In these times of great drains on the timber supplies, caused by the heavy demand for forest products of all kinds, Americans may see in Japan an example of what can be done in growing wood on small plots.

That country contains 21,000,000 wood lots, about three-fourths of which belong to private persons and one-fourth to communes. The average size of the plot is less than nine-tenths of an acre. They usually occupy the steepest, roughest, poorest ground. In this way land is put to use which would otherwise go to waste and if unwooded would lose its soil by the wash of the dashing rains.

From Japan's wood lots the yearly yield of lumber is about eighty-eight feet, board measure, an acre and three-fourths of a cord of firewood. In many cases the yield is much higher. More than 500,000,000 trees are planted yearly to make up what is cut for lumber and fuel.

With all the care in cutting and the industry in replanting it is by no means certain that Japan's forests are holding their own. If the preservation of the forests is doubtful there, it is evident that depletion must be alarmingly rapid in other countries which cut unsparingly and plant very little. On the other hand, it is encouraging to see what can be done with rough, steep and poor land. The United States has enough of that kind to grow billions of feet of lumber.—Pathfinder.

Eyes and Other Eyes.

Birds' sight is probably no keener than man's, in spite of the tradition to the contrary, writes Dr. Edward A. Ayers in Harper's Magazine. The simple fact is that birds flying aloft are in clearer air, and their eyes change focus much more rapidly. As for the eyes of fish, those in clear water can focus farthest, and all fish can see nearly everything but their dorsal fins. The baby flounder has a special trick with his eyes, which is to lift a submerged eye as he turns over to the upper side, twisting his whole skull in the doing. The eyes of a goose are bigger than its brain. As for man, he has one eye function pertaining exclusively to himself, which is to weep.
