REPUBLICAN PARTY FACES DEFEAT

ALL SIGNS BOTH NATIONAL AND LOCAL POINT TO GREAT DEMOCRATIC VICTORY—INDIANA SEEMS SURE FOR BRYAN, KERN AND MARSHALL AND THERE WOULD BE NO SURPRISE IF LANDSLIDE DEVELOPED ON ELECTION DAY.

INCREASED MAJORITY IN PUTNAM

All Things Seem Propitious for Local Democrats to Poll the Largest Vote Since 1876.

The Republican party, with only a few days left to fight, is facing defeat both nationally and locally. They are struggling against the tide and they know it. Long ago they would have lost heart, but for the remembrance of the former large majorities in their favor which must be overcome. All the trend, they acknowledge, is for Bryan. In 1896, the wise ones tell us, Bryan polled more votes than McKinley, though they did not count in securing electors. Now all things look so much better than in 1896, with a solid Democracy behind him and a weakened Republican party before him, with new recruits to his ranks from all parties, that victory seems sure.

The latest cheering news is from New York where Bryan has been spending a few days. On Monday night he spoke in Madison Square Garden, the largest building obtainable there. Every nook and corner was occupied, and thousands on thousands were turned away. When Bryan appeared the cheering began and lasted for a quarter of an hour, the greatest ovation given any candidate since the nominations. Conservative estimates now give New York to Bryan.

Not only has Bryan's own presence helped the cause there, but Roosevelt's letters have made many votes for the Democratic candidate. Thousands of men have become disgusted with the Republican campaign, conducted as it is from the White House, and will vote against the party which allows such personal domination.

In Indiana the trend is continually toward Bryan and Marshall. The fight that has been made against Marshall by the Anti-Saloon League is beginning to react. The fact that the League has united with the Republican party, and is allowing personal letters to be sent out from Republican headquarters as campaign material has led many to see the partisanship behind the whole movement. The character of Marshall, the honest, straight-forward man, without hypocrisy, paying his own expenses that he might be free from all pledges and open to do what is right, has won hearts and votes on all sides. The position of his opponent, willing to promise anything, willing to say one thing in private and another thing in public, has sent many thinking men to Marshall. The lies circulated in the campaign by Hanly and Watson and Bingham have but made Marshall more popular, and Indiana is now his.

In Putnam County all things point to a largely increased majority. Mr. Hostetter will be elected by a larger majority than four years ago, unless the signs fail, and the rest of the ticket will make gains. The unjust attack upon Mr. Hostetter has reacted, as all unjust attacks do. Men are remembering what he is, and that he has always reserved the right to vote as he thinks right, and refused to allow any dictation. He is "safe and sane" and will get the votes.

THAT ALL DAY MEETING

Widely Advertised by the Republican Party of Putnam County Proves A Very Cold and Frosty Affair Even From Republican Point of View.

FEW HEAR MORNING SPEAKER

The Republicans of Greencastle and Putnam County can get little satisfaction from the meeting today. They had advertised it widely as an all-day meeting. They had made strenuous efforts to arouse enthusiasm and to get out a crowd. Friday, while the big Democratic meetings were in progress, Chairman Zeis and Harry Smith were laboring over the long distance telephone to get Spooner to keep his engagement here. They promised him a good crowd and every inducement. But Spooner had a case of cold feet and it required much persuasion to bring him here.

And then the promise in regard to a crowd was not kept. A band was brought in this morning, and began playing shortly before ten o'clock. Then the crowd, or what passed for a crowd, lost itself in the assembly room. Seeing only half a room full of people the party leaders resorted to many expedients to kill time, hoping that more would come in. O. H. Smith gave the history of his political experiences, old soldiers were called to the platform, but all availed nothing. The crowd did not come, and Samuel Spooner, Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, was called to the task of talking to half a room full of people. After he had been speaking some fifteen minutes a count of those in the room showed 156. And this was the morning meeting of the much-talked of "all-day speaking."

Mr. Spooner's speech was a repetition of the matter heard here from Griffiths and others. There was the attack on Bryan, the attack upon the bank guarantee, the speakers doubtless forgetting that their hearers could read and that Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Gage, and other eminent Republicans were for the guarantee. He gave the usual unreliable statements as to panics and prosperity. Really it is no wonder that hearers do not crowd to hear speakers declare things that the Republican press daily contradicts.

FLOWERS DRAWS CROWDS

The Afternoon Meeting Was Much Better Attended Than That of the Morning and Crowd Hears College Oration.

At two o'clock the afternoon part of the "all-day speaking" began. The session was held in the court room and was much better attended than the morning attempt under the management of Spooner. The speaker of the afternoon was Montville Flowers, the impersonator who has several times appeared upon the platform of Meharry Hall. The fact that many citizens had paid to hear him before made the chance to hear him today free of cost seem very attractive.

It was an excellent illustration of the impression of having studied well his part. It was a speech given for oratorical effect, without conviction behind it. The periods rolled well. The splendid voice of the speaker rose and fell in excellent cadences, but behind it all was no earnestness of conviction. He spoke as he has spoken here before, to entertain, not with the truth as his goal. It was a splendid address from the side of rhetoric, gesture and voice. It lacked conviction.

Mr. Flowers stated that he had no interest in the campaign. Of course he forgot to mention the large salary per speech that he receives from the Republican campaign committee. He purposed to speak from the standpoint of a citizen who would lose or gain nothing by the defeat of Bryan.

ALL ARE INVITED.

Here was the pith of the whole speech. He was hired to do this thing, and hence the studied, stereotyped quality of the effort, hence the lack of earnestness.

Listened to as an oratorical effort the speech was a success,—provided one liked over-inflation and an exceedingly staid manner. But as a political utterance it lacked weight.

Pre-Hallowe'en Party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Allen, Jr., entertained a number of their friends last night at a delightfully informal party, given in honor of Mrs. Emory Lease of New York. After the pleasures of the evening refreshments were served, that smacked strongly of Hallowe'en. The piece de resistance of the evening was pumpkin pie and milk—pumpkin pie that tasted like more and milk so rich that some who were not used to such diet felt rather hilarious after the feast. It was a most enjoyable pre-Hallowe'en affair.

Has Returned From Club Meeting.

Mrs. Nellie T. Anderson has returned from Indianapolis where she attended the meeting of the Indiana State Federation of Clubs. Mrs. Anderson who is a member of the Century and Over the Teacups clubs of this city was chosen as recording secretary of the Federation.

PUTNAM MAN IS KILLED

FRANK BARNETT, WHO LIVES NEAR REELSVILLE, MEETS DEATH WHILE WALKING TO DELMAR YESTERDAY AFTERNOON—HIT BY A PASSENGER TRAIN AND DEATH PROBABLY WAS INSTANTANEOUS.

WAS GOING TO BUY TIMBER

Victim Had Been Here in Greencastle To Attend Rally and Pay Taxes—Tax Receipt Was Means of Identification—Head Crushed and Arms And Legs Broken.

Frank Barnett, aged 40 years, was killed yesterday afternoon between this town and Delmar by Big Four passenger train No. 16. The train which is due here at 1:30 o'clock was running about two hours late. The train stopped and took the body to Delmar and Coroner Ed Lynch was notified and went after the body.

A tax receipt given by county treasurer Walls yesterday, which the victim carried in his pocket was the means of the identification of the body.

Mr. Barnett, who deals in timber, had come to Greencastle yesterday to attend the Democratic Rally and pay his taxes. Yesterday afternoon he started to walk to Delmar to buy some timber. As he was walking along the tracks he was struck and killed. The tracks are double between here and Delmar and it is believed that Mr. Barnett, at the approach of the train, became confused and stepped upon the wrong track and was struck.

The victim leaves a widow and seven children. Two daughters are married and live with their parents. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barnett also live at Reelsville.

The body was taken from the Lynch Undertaking rooms to Reelsville this afternoon. The funeral will be Sunday. Interment will be in the Wesley chapel cemetery.

DEMOCRATS AT CLOVERDALE

Charles H. Jones, of Crawfordsville Speaks to a Large and Enthusiastic Audience in the South Putnam Stronghold of Democracy.

The Democrats of Cloverdale and vicinity turned out in force to hear Charles H. Jones, of Crawfordsville, who spoke there Friday night. The meeting was held in the opera house and the building was filled. The audience is estimated at from five to six hundred, about three times the number that heard Mr. Spooner, Republican, here this morning.

Mr. Jones discussed the issues of the campaign in an able and skillful manner. His audience was interested, and enthusiasm ran high. It was a fine meeting.

For 25 Years

We have been doing business in your community; we went through the panic of 1893 and 1907 and paid every depositor that called for his money on demand; and we expect to continue to do so; we have laid aside one hundred thousand dollars to make good any losses we might have, which with our capital stock and conservative management ought to commend us to the people of Putnam County. We want your business.

The names of contributors, and the amount given will be forwarded to the State Committee, which will mail a receipt to each person signed by the chairman.

MR. BEVERIDGE AND TRUTH.

This campaign bids fair to destroy all the ideals the American people have set up. First we have Roosevelt, elected, or at least given his great majority by Democratic votes, stooping from the high place as leader of the people to the low ground of partisan. We have the spectacle of this man renouncing all the things upon which our idolization of him was based, renouncing the "square deal," renouncing his opposition to "malefactors of great wealth," renouncing truth, stooping to misrepresentation and the tactics of a ward politician, using his high office and reputation for square dealing to deceive the people and further the most selfish and personal ends.

Now we have the spectacle of Mr. Beveridge, a man whom Indiana, regardless of party, has chosen to honor, stooping from his high position to become a common distorter of truth and broadcaster of campaign misstatement. Recently we called attention to the fact that Mr. Beveridge, as quoted by the Indianapolis Star, had declared that Standard Oil and Harriman were not for Taft. Yesterday's papers contained the statement from Rockefeller that Taft must be elected, and Harriman belongs to the Rockefeller camp. Wednesday, Mr. Beveridge, in discussing the tariff attempted to show that under Cleveland the price of farm products had been abnormally low. He stated that oats had sold for ten cents a bushel, corn for twenty and wheat for fifty, and fat hogs for $2.50. Now, as a matter of fact, not a single statement made is within any near approach to correctness. The United States Year Book of Agriculture, in quoting the average farm price of crops for the years 1890 to 1900 gives the lowest price for oats in that period as 18 cents in Indiana, corn 26 cents, wheat 56 cents and fat hogs not lower than $3.75. Now these prices have existed under Republican administration and under high tariff. In 1888 and 1889 the average farm price of oats was 19 cents, corn 27 cents, and fat hogs $3.50. In 1892 the Year Book shows us again that wheat was down to 62 and 64 cents in Indiana and Illinois. Now the farm price is several cents lower than the lowest quoted market price in the Year Book and the records of the Chicago markets for those years show a uniform price of from five to six cents above the farm price quoted. Evidently Mr. Beveridge's statements were not only wide of the truth but deliberately calculated to deceive, as he mentioned only the prices several cents under the real price under Cleveland and the highest prices since, and failed utterly to mention the low prices under Harrison and Roosevelt. If we can not trust Roosevelt nor believe Beveridge, who, among the Republicans may we trust and believe? Certainly not Taft, for whom these men stultify themselves.

The closing days of the campaign show all the "malefactors of great wealth" lined up solidly for Taft. All the men whom Roosevelt has denounced and who denounced him, the men whom Roosevelt declared brought on a panic for the purpose of discrediting his administration, are now for Taft. Roosevelt and Taft are now for them, at least Roosevelt has ceased his tirades against them, and Taft is receiving their money and promising them prosperity. Does this look as if Taft were to enter the high office as a representative of the people or a hired servant of Wall Street? The Republican-Herald lie that Standard Oil was contributing to the Democratic campaign is now nulled. Mr. Taft is revealed in his true colors as a supporter of the "swollen fortunes" and the "soulless corporations."

Do those honest Republicans who believe the Republican party to be the "great moral party" believe also that the corruption of the ballot box as proposed by the Republican party and fully exposed by such independent papers as the Chicago Record-Herald, is right. Partisan Republicans must confess to sanctioning this corruption or deny the evidence of their own party press and the independent papers. The fund is collected and will be used. The moralists are on trial.

The People's Campaign.

The most notable feature of this campaign has been the item of contributions. The platforms of the two great parties both make mention of this issue. The Democratic platform calls for the publication of campaign funds before election. The Republican platform says after election will be soon enough. This one fact alone should prove which is the party of the people. But to go further and give proof will be more convincing. It is said that four years ago the Republican National Committee received contributions from four thousand persons. This was considered a large list of contributors. But the 4000 looks small by the side of the 130,000 or 150,000 people who have contributed to the Democratic campaign this year. This vast army has given, up to date, it is said, nearly $500,000. This fund is spent in a legitimate way. We mean by a legitimate way, that it is spent in paying the expenses of the speakers, who are stamping the country for the Democratic party. The speaker's expense is not the only item in the list. Men must be paid to conduct the correspondence, and the hundred and one other things that must be done. Meetings must be arranged, advertised, halls rented, etc. The postage bill has been one of the important items of the expense list. Although it would seem that because a stamp costs but two cents, this item could not be very high, it is shown, however, that thousands of dollars have been spent in this way alone. But about the contributions. They have come from all parts of the country, and from people of all circumstances. They have come from the rich and the poor alike. From the young and the old. And some have come from women, who desire to see the "Great Commoner" elected. Bryan and Kern Clubs have sent in their contributions and Mr. Bryan's paper, The Commoner, has been paying, for some time, all of its profits to the national treasurer. In fact the contributions have come from everywhere where Bryan sentiment has found its way. But among the list not a single corporation is mentioned. Not a cent has been received from anyone connected with a trust. On the other hand where have the contributions for the Republican campaign come from? That, at present, is a matter of conjecture. They will let us know after election. With these facts before us can anyone mistake which party is for the whole people?

Some People Want to Know—

Who the Republican national chairman is?
 Why Rockefeller is going to vote the Republican ticket?
 What the "after-election" publication of campaign contributions will show?
 Why the Sharples company reduced wages less than a week before the election?
 Who pays Roosevelt's cabinet the people of the United States or the Republican party?

Why the people should want prosperity restored when prosperity is the father of panics?
 Why Hanly doesn't care to have his administration investigated by a Democratic Governor?
 Why Indiana Republicans need $100,000 to conduct the last three days of the campaign?

How the election of Bryan would bring on a panic when there already is a panic in the country?

Why the Indianapolis Star tries to tell the people how to run their business when the Star can't run its own?

Why the Republican national committee sent a letter to a New Albany brewery man asking for campaign funds?

Why Howard Maxwell does not declare himself on the temperance question when Ralph Moss and D. C. Brackney did so several weeks ago?
 Why Republican Greencastle with eight saloons, needs the ten Democratic townships of Putnam County, to have no saloons, to help her get the eight out?

How Jim Watson got on the ticket of the "Great Moral Party" after he had helped to defeat the Littlefield Interstate Commerce Bill prohibiting the shipping of "booze" from wet to dry territories?

THE PARTISAN "BROKER"

Another scheme of the Republicans to which attention has been called is the offer by alleged "brokers" to sell "investment securities" at a fixed price, with a promise of a 3 per cent "rebate" in the event of Bryan's election. Letters have been sent out by one Newton Todd of Indianapolis, making such a proposition. Among the stocks which he offers to sell are shares in the American National Bank of Indianapolis, and the Indianapolis street railway company. It is exceedingly doubtful if these concerns will enjoy having their stock made to serve such a partisan purpose. How many other Republican "brokers" of the Todd stripe are scattering similar "propositions" throughout the state is not known at this time, but it can be assumed that Todd is not the only one who is engaged in this peculiarly disreputable business.

DOUBTLESS ANOTHER FORGERY.

The New York Times—the same paper that printed the forged Cleveland articles some time ago—has now put out a "copy" letter which one of the employees of the Roosevelt administration claims to have received from Mr. Cleveland two years ago. This "copy" of a "letter" criticizes Mr. Bryan. It was doubtless forged for that very purpose, but that did not prevent the New York Times, the Indianapolis Star and other Republican papers from printing it as a part of the Taft campaign literature.

Where Bullets Flew.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done me more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 59c at the Owl Drug Store

Governor Hanly is still persistently, knowingly and wilfully misrepresenting state finances in his desperate effort to cover up the waste of public funds under his administration. Governor Hanly has knowledge of "extravagances"—to use no stronger word—that he dares not disclose, and there are suspicious transactions which only a political change of administration will clear up.

WHO IS BEING "DOUBLE-CROSSED."

Governor Hanly, who has become the special champion of James E. Watson in temperance communities, declares that he stands for "state wide prohibition" and that the election of Watson will solve the question. But, on the other hand, special champions of Watson in liberal communities are telling the saloon keepers that they "can tie to" Watson and that if they help to elect him they "will never regret it." The following is a copy of a letter sent by the Republican county chairman at Terre Haute to the saloon keepers in that city asking them to come out and hear Watson:

Thatcher A. Parker, chairman; William J. Whitaker, vice-chairman; A. C. Everingham, secretary; John L. Crawford, treasurer.

REPUBLICAN HINTS FOR 1908. "A square deal for everybody." "United we win, divided we fail." Fight Democrats, not Republicans.

Sir—I would like to ask a person's favor of you. Will you attend a meeting at the Aldome at 8 o'clock on the evening of the 14th to hear James E. Watson, Republican candidate for governor tell his side of the present questions? Many things have been said about "Jim" Watson that are not true and I challenge anyone to prove the same. I know him intimately and have known him so for years. He is a man ripe with experience and is of the square. A man that you can tie to. He is not a fanatic, and is one of the great orators of this age. His record on every question that has come up in the house is as clear as a whistle. I want you to see him with your own eyes and hear him with your own ears. If you do this I know you will think towards "Jim" Watson as I do.

I want you to help elect him, and I am sure you will never regret it. Thanking you for the time it has taken to read this letter, and hoping to see you at the meeting, I am, Yours truly,

THATCHER A. PARKER.
 Across this letter in bold blood-red letters were the words, "Get Busy Keep Busy."

SECURING BANK DEPOSITS

Facts For the Consideration of Both Bankers and Depositors.

[From Article in Indianapolis News.] There is one fact about bank deposits that should have special consideration, namely: Every bank that receives deposits from the United States Treasury or from any treasury, under the late depository law recognizes two classes of customers. The above named are preferred creditors, while all others are common and second-class depositors. The former has his deposit guaranteed by a counter-deposit of interest-bearing bonds, while the latter has no security whatever. The bonds to secure him are bought by the common depositors' money, therefore in the event of failure, the preferred creditors are paid first, while the common claimant pays the expenses of receivership and after months or years of delay, takes what is left of the defunct bank. The first party has in effect a gilt-edge first mortgage, while the second has not a scratch of a pen except a certificate of deposit. These are the facts which neither Hughes Taft, Roosevelt, Cannon nor any of their campaigners ever state correctly. They dodge this question, they dare not go against the facts. It is a condition of favoritism in business that is indefensible. Only a few years ago the customers of banks were on the same level. They were all treated alike, yet now it is different, some are insured and some are not.

The great objection urged is that a small tax on banks to meet contingent losses on closed banks would be unjust because "good bankers would be made to pay for losses occasioned by bad bankers and that it would encourage wildcat banking." The objection is absurd; a more pettifogger's plea. If true, then why not abolish fire insurance because some people burn houses for the insurance money? The conditions are exactly the same as in deposit insurance and good people pay the losses incurred by bad people's misfortune or crimes. Why not abolish life insurance because some people commit suicide to get the money? Does Governor Hughes ridicule life insurance because he found good policyholders paying discrepancies made by bad management? Yet life insurance stands as a good business proposition

THE PANAMA STEAL.

On the theory that it was to be paid to common people of France who had put their small savings in the stock of the French Panama Canal Company, there was taken from the United States treasury and put in the bank of J. Pierpont Morgan the great sum of forty million dollars. It is now declared that only three and one-half millions went to France, the balance going into the pockets of American speculators who had the favor of the Roosevelt administration. The account stands:

Paid out of the U. S. Treasury $40,000,000
 Paid to the French stockholders $5,000,000

To be accounted for, $35,000,000
 The men whose names have been used in connection with this transaction are J. Pierpont Morgan, William Nelson Cromwell, Charles P. Taft (brother of W. H. Taft), Douglas Robinson (brother-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt), George R. Sheldon, treasurer of the Republican National Committee.
 Who got the money?

KEEP YOUR EYES ON THE "FIXERS."

There is already evidence that the money which the trusts have contributed to the Republican party in this campaign is to be used corruptly wherever possible. Not being able by legitimate means to stop the stream of votes that is flowing to the Democratic party, it seems to be the intention to get them by crooked counting. According to affidavits that have been made, Republican "slick workers" down in Sullivan county have tried to "fix" election boards. The scheme was to bribe Democratic committee-men, if possible, to put men on the election boards who would, when it came to counting votes, connive at the switching of votes to the Republican candidates. The affidavits state that the Republican "slick workers" offered to pay $200 in one precinct "when the goods were delivered," and they connect several Republican politicians with the alleged attempted purchase of the election boards.

The exposure of the projected rascality in Sullivan county ought to be sufficient to put Democrats on their guard all over the state. Bryan and Kern and Marshall only need an honest count to sweep the state by an overwhelming majority. If the votes are gotten to the polls and are looked after by reliable poll-book holders and challengers, and are then counted by square election boards, it is conceded by all expert political prophets that the Republican national and state tickets will be submerged by the avalanche that is on its way.

UNFIT FOR OFFICE

The office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction during the administration of Fassett A. Cotton, the superintendent, and Lawrence McTurnan, his deputy and present Republican candidate for the office, has been made an adjunct of the Republican party and has used, with Cotton's consent and active assistance, by the discredited Republican state machine. Not only has Cotton attempted to get the teachers in the public schools to work for the Republican party, but his deputy, McTurnan, has sent broadcast among the teachers a silly charge that the election of Thos. R. Marshall "would seriously cripple the school system of Indiana." Surely this man McTurnan is wholly unfit for the place he seeks.

SOLDIER BRYAN VS. OFFICEHOLDER TAFT
 William J. Bryan, as the colonel of a regiment of volunteers, served throughout the Spanish war. William H. Taft stayed at home and drew a big salary as a federal officeholder.
 Drawing salaries as an officeholder—always by appointment—has been the lifelong occupation of William H. Taft.

During the course of a Republican demonstration a few days ago in a West Virginia town, when a street parade was a part of the program, a small boy was arrested for carrying an empty dinner pail. It appears that the lad had placed the pail upon a long stick which he waved along the line of march. The exhibition so incensed the feelings of the Republicans that they made complaint to the police and had the boy arrested. It appears that the full dinner pail is no longer an issue in the campaign, and that Republicans object to any reference to the empty dinner pail.

The Ride of Nelson's Jim.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Here you, Jim! Harness up and take Phoebe over to Sheldon's!" Seth Nelson smiled sardonically at the whitening face of his farm hand. "Git a move on you, now. Phoebe and Owen are going to town this afternoon to buy wedding trumpery. Owen's too busy to come after her, so do you harness up and take her over."

The farm hand slowly clinched his big, brown hands, while the muscles of his strong neck hardened into rigid cords.

"So you're going to let her marry that—that?" he panted between his teeth, when the older man interrupted him angrily.

"Shut up! It's none of your business. You ain't no kin to her! This sister and brother business ends right here! When I took you out of the 'sylum I took you to help with the work and not as a member of the family. Don't you dare to open your mouth to Phoebe till you git to Sheldon's. She's tickled to death to git him," he added cruelly as he walked away.

Without another word Jim—commonly known as "Nelson's Jim"—walked toward the barn. Presently he drove around to the side entrance of the house where Phoebe Nelson awaited him.

"AND—WELCOME!" HE REPLIED, WITH A

him, shy and fluttering, her delicate cheeks alternately flushing and paling as he helped her into the buggy.

"Goodby, ma," she called in a high treble voice, waving her hand at the dining room window.

Mrs. Nelson's motherly face appeared for an instant, clouded with anxiety.

"Take good care of her, Jim!" she called after them.

Jim turned and nodded grimly at her. And then, lips set in a hard, straight line, as if he would repress the speech that had been forbidden him, he flung out his whip with a stinging lash across the mare's flank.

Phoebe uttered a frightened cry.

"Be careful, Jim! You know Bess won't stand the whip, and I'm afraid!" She turned an appealing glance toward him, but his eyes were fixed straight ahead between the pointed ears of the little black mare.

"What's the matter, Jim? You act so queer! I suppose you're mad about Owen and me, but I couldn't help it—pa just settled everything without asking me, and—and—I hate Owen Sheldon! I don't want to marry a widower!" Her voice broke suddenly, but his stern young face did not relax. Still he made no reply.

"Jim! What's the matter?" she cried again.

No reply.

"Oh, dear!" she was crying softly now under the wide brim of her flower-trimmed hat. "I don't want to go—you know why, and ma knows, Jim—she knows you best—you're awful mean to make me tell it!"

Nelson's Jim turned tender brown eyes upon the young girl, and the hard lines about his mouth softened. His lips parted for an instant and then shut with a little click of his teeth. They had not yet reached Sheldon's farm.

There was a long silence then. The little black mare plodded bravely through the sand of the shore road and emerged into the highway at a point opposite the long lane of locust trees which led to Sheldon's. At this point Jim again pined his whip, and they flashed past the entrance to the lane and whirled away down the hill toward town with a shimmering stream of golden sand pouring from the tires and settling in their wake.

"Oh, Jim," cried Phoebe, with a frightened gasp. "What are you doing? Pa will kill me, so he will! And Owen—he's got a terrible temper!" She clutched his arm frantically.

Then Jim spoke.

"I got a terrible temper myself," he said savagely. "I been holding it in for twelve years because I was waiting to grow up, so's I could meet your father on his own ground. He's twitted me with being a 'sylum boy and having no name. I've found out all about it. I ain't no lost heir, Phoebe, but I've got a name. It's Browning. All my folks are dead—long ago. I've saved money, and I can take care of you. I'm going to the Baptist preacher's now. Is it all right, Phoebe, or shall I take you back to Owen?"

Phoebe hid her blushing face on his shoulder. "I'll go with you, Jim," she whispered, "and I guess I ain't afraid of pa and Owen after all."

Three hours later Nelson's Jim drove through the farm gate with his pale little wife clinging to his arm. Seth Nelson was raging around the yard with a shotgun in one hand, while his wife thrust a frightened face from the kitchen door.

With a quick leap Jim reached the ground and grasped the barrel of the weapon as Nelson raised it to his shoulder.

"It ain't loaded, you old fool!" he shouted as he wrested the gun from the farmer and leaned it against the wood shed. "Now, you listen to me, Seth Nelson. If you open your mouth before I tell you to, I'll knock you down!"

The old man's face worked savagely. He glanced toward the carriage and raised his fist against the shrinking girl. He opened his mouth as if to speak.

"Shut up!" commanded his son-in-law authoritatively. "Now, see here, my name's Browning!"

The farmer stared incredulously.

"My name's Browning," repeated Jim emphatically. "This here lady is my wife! Mrs. Browning is her name—Mrs. James Browning. It's a nice name—eh?"

Seth Nelson scowled sullenly at his farm hand.

"If you want to be a father to her and a father-in-law to me, you can act decent about it! We love each other and we got married. I got $900 in the bank, and I can take care of her. We'll board here, and I'll work for you—hands is scarce—but you've got to remember we won't be bullied!"

"You—you—you!"—stuttered the farmer wildly, but his son-in-law cut him short with a wave of the hand and climbed into the buggy and turned it around. As they drove toward the gate Nelson strode after them. He cast one look around the barnyard, the unfinished chores, then away across the swelling acres waiting for the moving machine, and the anger settled into chagrin.

"Say, you, Jim—Browning—you and your wife can board here if you want to," he said reluctantly.

"And—what?" demanded Jim Browning curtly.

Seth Nelson saw the tearful face of his wife in the doorway, and his grim face softened.

"And—welcome!" he replied, with a wry smile.

Grateful Rejected One.

"I am truly sorry to give you pain, Mr. Hankinson," said the young lady, "but please do not allude to this subject again. I can never be your wife."

"That is your final answer, Miss Irene?"

"It is."

"Nothing can induce you to change your decision?"

"My mind is finally and unalterably made up."

"Miss Irene," said the young man, rising and looking about for his hat, "before coming here this evening I made a bet of $5 with Van Perkins that you would say 'No' to my proposal. I have won. It was taking a risk, but I was dead broke. Miss Irene," he continued, his voice quivering with emotion, "you have saved a despairing man from the fate of a suicide and won the lifelong respect and esteem of a grateful heart. Good evening!"—London Answers.

Brilliant Alpine Flora.

Comparisons made by Dr. Dufour show that the superior purity and splendor of floral colors in the Alps are not imaginary or a mere effect of contrast. The reds, blues and yellows of the mountain blossoms are much more intense than those of the same species of flowers grown at ordinary levels. The leaves also have a deeper and richer green, and microscopic examination shows that chlorophyll is more abundant in Alpine plants than in those of the plains. One fact which seems quite natural, yet is very interesting, is that on the mountain plants have relatively small aerial organs and larger subterranean ones. Thus a graceful dower which in the plains is seen nodding at the summit of an aspiring stem will be found high on the mountain slopes hugging the soil, anchored by comparatively heavy roots and beaming up with accentuated beauty from the ground.—Pearson's Weekly.

Sheep or Goat?

Nan's mother heard her crying after she had gone to bed and upon inquiry learned that the child, having heard for the first time the parable of the sheep and the goats, was in terror lest she should be a goat.

Her grandfather, a clergyman, tried to comfort Nan and finally succeeded in convincing her that if she led a "godly, righteous and sober life" she need not fear the objectionable classification. However, the next night Nan was again the victim of her emotions, and her mother insisted that the scene of the previous night must not be repeated.

"But, oh, mamma," sobbed the child, "this is different. Grandfather explained all about me, and I am not afraid for myself now. But, oh, mamma, what if you should be a goat?"—Delineator.

A Possibility.

"Suppose women should vote, what would be the result?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Sirius Barker petulantly. "Perhaps we'd have hand-painted ballots."—Washington Star.

DEPAUW NEWS

DePAUW GETS NOTORIETY STAND WHILE STUDYING

ROLAND MEL LETT, IN INDIANAPOLIS NEWS, WRITES ON ATHLETICS.

ARTICLE IS VERY EXHAUSTIVE

In an article published by the Indianapolis News, Roland Mellett, sporting editor for that paper has the following to say concerning DePauw athletics:

At DePauw University, that ancient and time-honored pillar of Methodism, they believe in athletics and indulge in them liberally. But they believe in their college first. Athletics are not neglected, but they are not promoted to the detriment of the studies. The DePauw principle is to conduct the best possible school and to do the best possible with the athletes who are students.

DePauw athletes must get their lessons if they wish to take part in athletics. This order, rigidly enforced, causes many, athletically inclined, to attain to scholarship heights they otherwise never would reach.

In some instances athletics are used as a whip. Twice a month the faculty reports on the work of all students. Athletes who fail to make the required grades are given two weeks in which to catch up. If they fail in that period their names are taken off the athletic roster. This order is enforced without favor.

The DePauw athletic board is composed of four faculty members, three members of the university student body and one student from the academy or preparatory school. A. M. Brown, athletic and physical director, is one of the faculty members. He directs all the athletic and gymnastic work. Just now he is busily engaged in coaching what appears to be one of the strongest football teams DePauw has had in several years. His squad now numbers thirty, it having lost ten members since the opening of the training season. The athletic board selects the managers of the various teams and their assistants from the student body. The assistants succeed their chiefs. The managers arrange all the schedules which are passed on by the board.

FINISHES THE PREPARATION

BROWN PUTS ON THE TOUCHES

RESULT.

PROBABE LINE-UPS ANNOUNCED

Coach Brown yesterday took his warriors through the last practice before the big Purdue game. The work was a fast signal practice. It is expected Greenstreet will be in the game although his shoulder is still a little off. The team is otherwise in good physical condition.

In regard to the condition of the Purdue team the Purdue Exponent says:

"The men are all in good condition, and have been working hard all week in preparation for this game. Coach Speik realizes that DePauw has a good team and lots of good plays and has prepared accordingly. He has no doubt of the outcome of the game, but knows that Purdue is going to have a fight to win."

The teams will probably line-up as follows:

DePauw	Position	Purdue
Jackson	L-E	Wyant
Harmon	L-T	Eggenman
Whitehair	L-G	Cusselbaum
Lawrence	Center	Lickey
Ward	R-G	McFarland

PROFESSOR GOUGH GIVES ADVICE TO STUDENTS IN DEBATE.

SAYS TO GET LOTS OF FRESH AIR

That it would be far more hygienic for students to stand while studying instead of sitting was the startling theory which Prof. Gough propounded to his class in debate yesterday morning. Continuing upon the same subject the genial professor said:

"Nothing tends more to the physical imperfection of the student than the habitual stoop over his desk while at work. It is absolutely incompatible with right breathing and its baneful effects can be seen upon every hand among the students. The more natural and by far the more healthful way to study is to have your desk so arranged that you are standing upright at all times. It keeps your lungs free and saves your body from becoming cramped."

That this theory has long been a favorite one with Prof. Gough is a well known fact among his students. It is not only a theory but a reality for the professor has for some years been accustomed to studying in this manner. So pleased is he with the results that he has obtained that he does not hesitate now to advise his students to follow the same plan.

SEND TELEGRAMS.

Faculty and Student Body Congratulate President F. J. McConnell.

Telegrams congratulating the Rev. Francis J. McConnell, D. D., who was yesterday elected to the presidency, were sent by the board of trustees, the faculty and the student body. Hugh Dougherty, president of the board of trustees, wired a brief message to the effect that he had been elected to the presidency and expressed congratulations.

The message sent by the student body was worded as follows: "The students of DePauw University sends greetings and the assurance of heart support. Bully for old DePauw." The faculty sent the following message: "All of the professors, instructors and officers heartily congratulate you on your election by a unanimous election to the presidency of DePauw University. We pledge our hearty co-operation to you as our new president."

MUSIC AND ART

The registry of the Music and Art Schools to date has reached a total of 202. Considerably more than half of these have all of their university work in these two schools.

The holiday next Wednesday will be an "optional" one with the students in the Schools of Music and Art. All who wish to do so can omit their lessons and their practice; but those who prefer to go on with their work will have the privilege of doing so.

Engraved cards at the Herald Office.

A Matrimonial Importation.

By JENNIE LUDLUM LEE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Earle Scott arrived at the pier just as the giant steamship docked. He appeared to be looking for no particular person, but, rather, to search the faces of the crowds about him. Some one tapped him on the arm.

"Are you one of those horrid men?" a rather tired voice inquired.

Scott turned and smiled at the girl beside him.

"Well, I certainly am a man," he acknowledged, "and I guess I'm about as horrid as most of my sex."

"Oh, I didn't mean—I beg your pardon," stammered the girl. "I meant were you a customs officer? You see, I'm—"

He scanned the girl's face closely. Could she be up to the old game of smuggling? More than one official had been tricked by a pair of honest eyes, and Scott had just acknowledged that he was but a mere man. The girl certainly had a fascinating personality. Scott informed her that he was not a customs official, but offered to be of any assistance to her.

"Oh, thank you so much," she exclaimed as she hurriedly glanced about her. "I want a cab to take me to that address," and she handed him a visiting card. "No one has met me, and, oh, I must get away before he comes off the boat."

"I understand," assured Scott, though in reality he did not. "Want to shake some undesirable shipboard acquaintance?"

"It's not exactly that—he's a dear, but—oh, if you will just get me a cab that will solve the whole problem."

A cabman was found who agreed to take the girl to her destination for a nominal fee, and as Scott closed the door upon his mysterious companion she leaned forward through the window.

"Won't you tell me your name and I'll have my uncle write and thank you?" she inquired.

He drew a card from his wallet and presented it to her. Aloud she read the address in trembling voice, "Mr. Earle Cowdrey Scott, Harlequin Club."

"Won't you write instead?" Earle suggested, but the disinterested cabman whipped up his horse and her answer was lost.

Scott now hurriedly returned to the ship and boarded her. He had no difficulty in finding his father, who was always among the last to leave a ship. His son, knowing this, had not hastened to find him. After the first greetings the old gentleman slapped his son affectionately upon the shoulder.

"Well, my boy, I've brought you a fine present this year—a rare prize." Then, glancing about the ship and the crowd below them, he added, "But I think the little mix has slipped off."

That evening as father and son sat chatting over their coffee and cigars the old gentleman announced:

"Well, Earle, I brought a wife home for you—came over in the ship with me."

Earle seemed somewhat startled.

"May I ask, dad, if you have married again, or is this matrimonial importation for me to take unto myself?"

"Oh, for you—for you," said the old man gleefully. "And we're going around there tonight. Here's where she is. Her uncle, old John Banks, is a great friend of mine."

He passed the card over to Earle. The latter had held the mate to it in the morning. Smiling to himself, Earle agreed, thinking that the mysterious girl was well worth knowing better. All day long innumerable pictures of her had flitted through his mind. He would be glad to know the truth.

When father and son were announced, John Banks and his niece entered the room full of hearty greetings, but the young couple gave no outward sign of recognition. Before long the two elder men found that comfort awaited them in the library in the form of duplicate whist and good cigars.

Earle noted that Edith Hamilton was somewhat ill at ease, but made little headway in solving the problem that evening. When he left the house, however, he had to acknowledge to himself that the girl was charming in the extreme. He asked permission to call again.

"And, by the way, Miss Hamilton, I don't have to drag father along every time, do I?" he asked in mock deference.

On the way home that evening the father went into something of an explanation.

"There's an old fashioned girl for you, Earle. Like your mother was as a girl. Nothing deceitful about her—right in the open—everything straight from the shoulder. I talked a lot about you on the trip over and told her she was just the type of girl you were looking for—that we needed her sort to round out our home. She's been in school for years over in France and now has come to keep house for Banks. How did she strike you?"

"As a most deceitful, deep young person," announced Earle, with great emphasis. Yet in his heart he really felt that the apparent deceit only added to her charms.

Earle became a frequent visitor at the Banks household. He had the name of a heartless bachelor among his club mates. Women in general had made little impression on him, but he had to acknowledge to himself that he loved this girl with all his power, and his power was a great one. He wanted her and would leave no stone unturned to win her. And the evening came when he told her of his love and asked her to be his wife.

"Oh, I wish you had not asked me, Mr. Scott. I couldn't, really I couldn't," was her insistent plea. "Just let's go on being friends."

The big man seemed to shiver. He was very much in earnest, but he took her refusal like the man he was.

As he sat at his desk the next morning idly dreaming of dreams gone wrong his telephone bell rang. It was Edith Hamilton at the other end of the wire. She asked him in most unsteady voice to come over that evening—that she had some sort of an explanation to make. Sharply at 8 o'clock Scott was in the drawing room. As she entered the room her face bore a sad expression, yet withal she was radiantly beautiful to Earle.

"Little girl!" Scott almost whispered as she came toward him. She seemed a saintly being, far beyond his reach. "I love you—you know that, don't you?"

"Yes, Earle, I believe you do," she uttered as she sank into a chair near him. "That is why I sent for you. Something seemed to tell it to me after you left. I want to tell you something. The day I met you on the pier I wanted to escape your father before he came on shore. We had joked about my marrying his son, and when the time came when I must actually face you I hurried away to escape the meeting."

"And I thought you were running away from the customs officials," laughed Scott.

"Well, in part I was. You see, I brought over a lot of real lace and smuggled it in. I had sewed yards and yards of it on a cheap petticoat which I had on at the time."

For a moment they both laughed heartily, then again the serious expression came back into Edith's face.

"It was all started in a joke," she continued. "But when I had actually met you and—here her voice dropped almost to a whisper—"and loved you, I was so afraid that you were asking me just to please your father."

"Do I look like such a mollycoddle?" asked Earle as he drew closer to her.

"Well, that was why I said 'No!' last night. Then I couldn't sleep for the very joy of thinking that perhaps—perhaps you really did love me for myself alone. Do you, Earle?"

For answer Earle took her in his arms.

"You're a deceitful little wretch," he teased, "but I love you and for yourself alone—better than life itself—and you must know it."

"Oh, dear, I'm so happy," she murmured as she nestled closer to him. "And, Earle, it's early, and Uncle John has gone over to play whist with your father. Let's run over and surprise them. I'm sure Uncle John will be so glad to be rid of me—and your father—well—"

"Will be so happy to find that his matrimonial importation has proved acceptable," finished Earle.

What Matter Really Is.

Throughout the greater part of space we find simple unmodified ether, elastic and massive, squirming and quivering with energy, but stationary as a whole. Here and there, however, we find specks of electrified ether, isolated, yet connected together by fields of force and a state of violent locomotion. These "specks" are what in the form of prodigious aggregates we know as "matter," and the greater number of sensible phenomena, such as viscosity, heat, sound, electric conduction, absorption and emission of light, belong to these differentiated or individualized and dissociated or electrified specks, which are either flying alone or are restoring with orbital motion in groups. The "matter" so constituted—built up of these well separated particles, with interstices enormous in proportion to the size of the specks—must be an excessively porous or gossamer-like structure, like a cobweb, a milky way or a comet's tail, and the inertia of matter—that is, the combined inertia of a group of electrified ether particles—must be a mere residual fraction of the mass of the main bulk of undifferentiated continuous fluid occupying the same space, of which fluid the particles are hypothetically composed and in which they freely move.—Sir Oliver Lodge in "Modern Views of Electricity."

By Inheritance.

When a strange woman came for the soiled clothes, says a writer in the Baltimore News, the mistress of the house came to the conclusion that her own landlady had simply employed a new messenger and made no comment on the circumstance. But when two weeks had gone by and still the old landlady—known as Susan—did not appear the mistress of the house felt that she would be lacking in her duty if she did not make some inquiry about her.

"Where is Susan?" she asked the tall, bony woman who came for the clothes.

"She has gone to Pennsylvania to live, yessum," returned the woman with composure. "She went to Pennsylvania some time ago, an' she lef' goodbye for yuh, but s' long yuh didn't seem tuh notice I didn't say nuffin'."

"But why didn't she come and tell me and allow me to make some arrangements about my laundry?"

"Well, she lef' yo' clothes tuh meh. She made a will an' lef' dem clothes tuh meh. We'se allus been good friends, an' so w'en she lef' she say I may wash yo' clothes long ez I wish tuh an' dere was no use worryin' yuh 'bout hit, now was dere?"

To this moderate and sensible question the mistress of the house found no ready response.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SOCIAL

A pretty Sunday School social was given last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. VanArsdel by the girls of Mr. Gough's Sunday School class of College Avenue. A small admittance fee was charged to enable the girls to purchase a rug for their Sunday School room. Ten dollars or more was cleared. A very interesting program of song and recitations and music was rendered. In addition to this the girls gave a miniature reception or pink tea which proved amusing and entertaining. Miss Mary VanArsdel acted the hostess gracefully and the ladies in the receiving line were as gracious and hospitable as their elders could have been. These were as follows: Misses Grace Sellers, Julia Matson, Lillian Hays, Frances McGregor, Etta Williams, Genevieve Moore, Dorothy Arnold, Blanche McAllister and Jessie Gobin.

Asbestos Mining.

Asbestos, popularly known as "mineral wool," is a compound of silica, lime, magnesia and oxide of iron and is probably the most curious natural product in existence. Being composed of fine fibers, it can be spun and woven into cloth, indestructible by fire, which renders it invaluable in many of the arts.

Mining is carried on by cutting down the hills of asbestos bearing serpentine, much as a farmer cuts down a stack of hay or straw, or by open quarrying on the level.

The rock is blasted out, and the asbestos, separated from the containing rock, is "colbed"—that is, separated by hammering from inferior foreign matter. The colbing is comparatively easy in the case of the finer quality, as it usually separates readily from the other minerals which the ore contains, but in the lower grades much difficulty is experienced in separating the fibrous matter from the nonfibrous.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Jessie.

It is related that when the young man who afterward became General Fremont ran away with and married Jessie, Tom Benton, the great senator, made terrible threats of what he would do to the young man. He would give him roasts and bullets, and so on. To all of which Mrs. Benton quietly remarked, "You had better give him Jessie, my dear."
