THE PARTY IS IMMORTAL

The Democratic Party is the Champion of the People's Rights and Stands for the Greatest Good to The Greatest Number, Says William Jennings Bryan.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR FUTURE

Declaring the Democratic party can not die and has accomplished more out of office in the last twelve years than the Republican party has in office, W. J. Bryan bids his supporters not despair. In the current issue of the Commoner he speaks of the election results and discusses the future. He says:

"The election of 1908 is over and the returns disclose a signal victory for our opponents, but the principles for which our party contends, these are not dead.

"Does any one believe the American people will permanently permit secrecy as to campaign contributions? Does any one believe the American people will permanently permit the will of the voters to be thwarted, as it is now, by the election of senators through legislatures? Does any one believe the trusts will be permitted permanently to exploit the masses? Does any one believe the consumer will permanently permit the tariff to be written by the beneficiaries of that tariff? Does any one believe the public will permanently tolerate an estrangement between labor and capital? Does any one believe 15,000,000 of depositors will forever permit their savings to be jeopardized as at present? Does any one believe the extravagance of government will go on forever unchecked? Does any one believe our Republic will permanently consent to a colonial policy with its humiliations and its financial burdens?

"During the last twelve years the Democratic party has accomplished more out of office than the Republican party has accomplished in office, and this is a sufficient reward for those who fight for the righteous cause. It would have been pleasant to have been able to reward worthy Democrats with official positions. They are looking for good government, and they labor unselfishly for the promotion of good government.

"As for myself, let no one worry about my future. The holding of office is a mere incident in the life of those who are devoted to reforms. The reform is the essential thing. If one can advance reforms by holding office, then holding office is justifiable; if one can best advance reforms as a private citizen, then holding of office is undesirable.

"The world owes me nothing. I have been abundantly compensated for what I have been able to do. My life will not be long enough to repay the people for their support and for the confidence they have expressed.

"With an abiding faith in the triumph of truth and an unflinching confidence in the righteousness of our cause, I speak this word of encouragement to those who call themselves friends. I shall keep step with them and march on. If we are right, as I believe we are, it will vindicate us; if we contribute, as I believe we are contributing, to a cause that is founded on justice our efforts will weigh in final victory."

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS

List of the Honored Dead Revised by A. O. Lockridge and T. C. Grooms.

The list of names of Revolutionary soldiers buried in Putnam County, recently published by the Herald, has been carefully revised by T. C. Grooms and A. O. Lockridge. The committee desires to close this matter up by December first of this year, and if there are no corrections or additions to the following list it will then be reported to the Society of the Sons of the Revolution at Indianapolis, which has charge of the preparation of the tablet to be placed in our court house.

HE LEFT HIS "GRIPS"

But Was Overtaken by the Thirst for Booze and Landed in the Lockup Instead of Returning for his Property.

COULD NOT PAY THIS MORNING

Thursday morning a rather good-looking man of past middle age stepped into the M. D. Ricketts jewelry store and asked if he might leave his suit cases there for a time. Receiving permission he deposited them in a corner and took himself off. He did not appear again during the day, and when the store was closed at night the man had not appeared to claim his property.

This morning the reason for the absence was explained by Marshal Reeves who appeared at the store to take the "grips" to the hotel. The marshal stated that the owner had become intoxicated yesterday, and last night was placed under arrest. At the jail he developed a decided fighting spirit and it was with difficulty that he was persuaded to go to bed. This morning he was before the mayor on a charge of intoxication. He was found guilty and fined $1 and costs of $10. He had but $5 with him and went back to the jail in default of the other six.

The man gave his name as Edward Russell, and stated that he is agent for a patent window wash.

14 ON JOINT BALLOT

There are the Figures of the Democratic Majority in the Indiana State Legislature, as the Outcome Of the Recent Election, And We Have No Kick Coming.

The final and complete returns from the legislative districts show that the Democrats will have a majority of fourteen on joint ballot in the coming general assembly. The Republicans elected ten members of the senate and the Democrats elected sixteen. The Republicans had seventeen holdover senators and the Democrats seven. The senate, therefore stands twenty-seven Republicans and twenty-three Democrats, or, in other words, the Republicans have a majority of four in the senate. The Republicans elected forty-one members of the house of representatives and the Democrats elected fifty-nine. This gives the Democrats a majority of eighteen in the house. Deducting the Republican majority of four in the senate from the Democratic majority of eighteen in the house leaves the Democrats a majority on joint ballot of fourteen.

"The Devil."

The DePew-Burdette Stock Company was at its best last night in "The Devil" which proved to be one of the strongest plays as yet presented by this clever company. The story was interesting from start to finish and held the quiet attention of the large audience throughout the entire play. Mr. Brower as Dr. Miller gave a finished portrayal of "The Devil." The "Olga Hoffman" of Miss May Boyce was a good piece of acting, in fact the entire company deserve special mention.

Oliver Twist is the play announced for tonight. Mr. DePew will appear in the great character of Fagin which is one of his strongest parts. All lovers of Charles Dickens' works should not fail to see this great play.

BUILT OUR COURT HOUSE

But Their Experiences in Building The New Arkansas State House, at Little Rock, Have Been Less Pleasing and Much Slower Than In This City.

MAY THROW UP THE JOB

A special says that Caldwell & Drake, who built the Putnam County Court House may never finish the State House at Little Rock, Ark., a structure on which work has been stopped for a year or more. The Governor of Arkansas has been antagonistic to this firm ever since the contract was awarded, and it is charged that he was instrumental in having the contractors stop work when the building was about half finished. The contract was awarded Caldwell & Drake for a sum not much below $1,000,000. After the side walls were up and the floors in, in fact, after everything was ready for the roof and the inside finish, it was found the money appropriated to carry on the work had lapsed and that no more could be paid out until a new appropriation was made. A special session of the Legislature was called, but influences were brought to bear by which the session adjourned abruptly, and no money to continue the State House work was appropriated. So the building has stood idle for several months, and the money put in the structure is still tied up.

The Auditor of Arkansas admits that the State owes Caldwell & Drake $89,800 and the contractors claim practically as much more in extras, but not a cent of the money due can be paid because the amounts to be used within the appropriations have lapsed. The Legislature does not meet until January and owing to the muddled condition of things at Little Rock, it is said, Caldwell & Drake will simply try and collect the amount of money now due and then throw up the contract or else turn it over to some other contractor.

Caldwell & Drake built a ten-story office building at Little Rock while waiting for the Legislature to do something in the State House matter, and the firm has about $250,000 invested in that structure. It contains 300 suites of rooms and practically all of them are rented, bringing the local firm a monthly income of about $6,000.

The information comes from Little Rock that the bribery charges preferred against George W. Caldwell as a result of investigations made in the State House deal will be dismissed as soon as court convenes there.

AN EMPEROR IS DEAD

His Most Serene Highness, the Emperor of China Conveyed to the Death Chamber.

ONE TO BE MADE TWO

That is the Latest Move on Foot in Judicial Circuit Matters—Proposed to Make Separate Circuits of Putnam and Clay Counties.

WILL COME UP IN LEGISLATURE

The Brazil Democrat is responsible for the following story in regard to this Judicial Circuit:

Owing to the excitement of the election, there has been but little litigation disposed of at this term of court which will come to an end Saturday. There has been but two jury trials during the entire term and both of these were small cases. There has been considerable court business transacted such as defaults and minor details in many actions, but the big damage suits which are pending on the docket were continued for various reasons.

The accumulation of litigation has again caused the attorneys to revive the demand for a separate circuit for Clay County and it is likely that the matter will be taken before the next General Assembly when it convenes next January.

By creating a new circuit the business of the court could be handled much more rapidly and cases would not have to lie on the docket from term to term as at present. If a new circuit is created Judge Rawley will continue to serve as judge of the Clay Circuit Court and the Governor would appoint a new judge for Putnam County. Prosecutor Hughes would serve as the prosecuting attorney of Putnam County and a new prosecutor would be appointed for Clay County.

PUTNAM TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

The Teachers of the County Will Meet for Their Regular Fall Session of Instruction on the 27th and 28th of November.

Miss Anna Stone, president of the Putnam County Teachers' Association has announced the speakers for the coming meeting of the association which will be held on the 27 and 28 of November. The speakers will be Mrs. E. E. Olcott, of the Danville Normal. She will speak on primary methods, and is a most interesting instructor. Prof. T. E. Moran, of Purdue University, will speak on history. Mr. Moran is the author of the book on history now being used in the Teachers' Reading Circle work. The coming meeting will undoubtedly be one of the best of recent years.

WILSON CASE IS COMPROMISED

Suit Involving the Division of the Estate of John H. Wilson Has Been Settled Outside the Courts by The Parties Concerned.

It is stated this morning that the case of John C. Wilson, Executor of the Estate of John H. Wilson against George D. Goff and Earl Goff has been compromised. The case will, therefore not come to trial. The basis of the compromise has not been made public.

It is understood that several other suits now upon the docket are about to be compromised, and the docket thus materially shortened.

WILL FEED THE CHILDREN

While the city authorities of Chicago have been looking up the law for precedents, while learned lawyers have been doubting and consulting ponderous tomes, what to do with the 15,000 half starving or badly fed children in the public schools in that city, five warm-hearted young women have made the first actual step toward their relief, and solved the problem by simply feeding them.

Five chorus girls of "A Girl at the Helm" Company, the new musical comedy by Robert B. Smith and Raymond Hubbell, now playing at the La Salle Theatre, under the direction of Mort H. Singer, a few days ago went out on a rescue expedition and furnished nourishment to 200 poor children who had come breakfastless to the Jones public school, at Plymouth Place and Harrison Street, of that city. The five pretty young women, in their Paris hats and their fashionable gowns, descended from a big auto like ministering angels and gave sandwiches, fruit and coffee to the children at the school, receiving the thanks of the children and of all the teachers.

STRONG MEN WIN IN LIFE

"I glory in your athletics," said Dr. C. W. Drees, for thirty-four years a missionary among Spanish people, at chapel yesterday morning. "I glory in your athletics because it takes strong men, with vigorous bodies, to be successful in life's activities."

Dr. Drees is a man of charming personality, a long sojourn among Spanish people giving a foreign grace and air. He has been in Greencastle the guest of Dr. Swahlen and yesterday morning led chapel exercises. He has been very active in missionary work for a third of a century and has an international reputation.

In speaking further Dr. Drees spoke of the hundreds of open doors calling for missionaries but that these never could be entered, no matter how much money was supplied, unless men were willing to go, and no men could go without a vigorous constitution. He also said he believed a new era in missionary work had begun. His few remarks were well received.

JOINT INSTITUTE TO-MORROW

Townships of Monroe, Greencastle and Warren Will Meet in the Court House for Institute Work.

Tomorrow the townships of Monroe, Warren and Greencastle will meet in the office of the County Superintendent of Instruction for joint institute. The work will occupy both the forenoon and the afternoon. The teachers themselves will do the work as it has been planned in the reading circle program.

AS WAS EXPECTED.

Already the committee of the House which is gathering facts and figures upon which a revision of the tariff is to be based, are taking evidence. The witnesses are testifying upon the question of "a reasonable profit," as brought forward by the recent Republican platform. Thus far a considerable number of industries have been before the committee, and in no case has it been found that the tariff could be lowered. In many cases it has been found that it should be raised. The manufacturers have been able to show that they are not making "a reasonable profit," and that the schedule should stay as it is or be pushed higher. It is noticeable, also, that the consumer has no representation before this commission. The consumer will pay the tax, but he has absolutely nothing to say as to the rate of taxation. Thus, as has been pointed out by the Indianapolis News, in order to protect a half dozen camphor growers in Florida it is proposed to place a tax upon that commodity that will be a burden upon all the people of the United States. The consumer has not been asked whether he is willing. He is simply asked to pay. It appears to us that we have here some of the most unfair and radical of class legislation, the benefiting of the very few at the cost of the whole people. We wonder how long we will tolerate this condition.

SENATORS FROM THE PEOPLE.

During the campaign just past one of the points that received considerable attention, though not, perhaps, as much as it deserved, was the selection of the United States Senators by the people. Since the election the need of such a provision has been made very plain. In New York the selection of the man to take the place of Platt has practically been taken out of the hands, not only of the people, but of the legislature as well. Washington dispatches tell us that President Roosevelt and his cabinet are considering the matter of the proper man for senator from New York, Ohio and Connecticut. It is not a matter of the man the people desire, or that the party in the state desire, but of the man that is satisfactory to the Roosevelt administration. In Indiana we have an appeal, from one of the candidates, for the decision of the people. He asks that the people express themselves and that the state senators and representatives listen to that expression. We believe the people are taking great interest in the election of senators because the senate of the United States, during the past few years, has been a menace to the people. It has been the stronghold of plutocracy, and legislation has been wrung from it only at tremendous expense of time, energy and money. This must cease to be, and the people will watch closely and resent ardently any attempt to foist a man they do not like upon them for six years as their representative.

This morning the Indianapolis Star, roaring gently as the cooling loam, indulges in considerable self-eulogy, and after praising its position of rectitude and truth, ends by wishing the Greencastle Herald "a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." We reciprocate with all our heart. We are glad the Star is alive and may the Star live long to enjoy that happiness. Let peace prevail—and also truth.

How is Your Digestion.

Mrs. Mary Downing of No. 228 8th Ave., San Francisco, recommends a remedy for stomach trouble. She says: "Gratitude for the wonderful effect of Electric Bitters in a case of acute indigestion, prompts this testimonial. I am fully convinced that for stomach and liver troubles Electric Bitters is the best remedy on the market today." This great tonic and alternative medicine invigorates the system, purifies the blood and is especially helpful in all forms of feeble weakness. 50c at the Owl drug store.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

Thoughts from men of affairs upon questions of the Day.

The Tariff Curse Again.

The following from the Indianapolis News is worth reading and pondering over. Rarely has the tariff and its working been more clearly illustrated:

It was pointed out in the News of last night that the possibility of establishing the camphor industry in the United States would probably result in removing camphor from the free list. Thus it appears that the discovery of a new process, the development of a new natural resource or the creating of a new industry, is, or may be, an actual curse to the people. We are getting all the camphor we can use now, and at reasonable prices. But the moment it appears that more camphor is available we propose to increase its price and to make it as dear as it would be were it supply diminished. The more of a thing you have the more you must pay for it. So it is that the people would be better off without the new discovery or process. Thus the blessings of nature are taken from us. The natural man, unaffected by the protectionist logic, would rejoice at the opening up of a new natural resource because it would mean a larger supply of a commodity at a lower price. But this is not the way it works.

The new resource and the larger supply do not mean more of the commodity at lower prices, but less of it at higher prices. This may prove to be the case with camphor. In other words, we have adopted the theory that scarcity is a blessing, that high taxes are good things in themselves, and are quite convinced that it is proper for the Government to stand between the people and the gratification of their desires. We are wise then the Almighty, who created a varied earth with various climates, with the idea that the different aptitudes and capacities of different peoples might supplement each other. We, on the contrary, nullify all these advantages by seeking to make all the world alike by imposing taxes, by "equalizing," as we say, conditions. We seek to make what we can do least well as profitable as what we can do best, and deliberately rob ourselves of the advantage of enjoying the services of those who can serve us best. Doubtless camphor will go on the taxed list, with the result that we shall get less camphor for more money.

wished that something would occur to break the connection. After dinner he lighted a cigar, but soon threw it away. Noticing an evening paper on a table beside him, he took it up. On the first page there were headlines in large print announcing an automobile accident. Two persons, a man and a woman, were killed.

Strange that he experienced a welcome relief.

He did not read what followed. He had long lived in dread of something terrible—he knew not what—and did not doubt that this horror was what he had feared, or if he doubted he did not dare read on, fearing a confirmation of what he believed. Conscience makes cowards of us all, and this man, who had robbed a husband of his wife and a child of his mother, shrank from the dreadful end of what he had done. He sat motionless, his face covered with his hands. A servant lighted the lights, but he did not hear. An hour passed, during which no sound aroused him, till at last he heard an automobile stop before the house. Starting up, he hurried to the door. A chauffeur, one he had never seen, met him there.

"I was told, sir, to bring this machine here."

The few words told a new story. She was not dead. She had left him.

A carriage stopped at the door of the house where the brief dialogue which opened the story took place. Clarence La Mont, his eyes big with expectancy, went to the door. He saw his father hand out a lady. She raised a veil. With a wild cry the boy sprang into the arms of his mother.

Whoever heard of a man disguising himself as a chauffeur and running away with his own wife?

An Indian Summer Romance.

By MARGARET FOX.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

It had not been an eventful summer for Marion Leigh. She knew it would not be when she saw it looming up in all its inevitability—an invalid aunt, an isolated mountain retreat and herself in the dual role of nurse and companion.

But she was wise enough to recognize the time old truth that "beggars cannot be choosers" and to accept it graciously. As a dependent orphan she had little voice in the ordering of her own career.

But now as she watched the leaves falling silently, somberly, and thought over the long, tedious days she had lived through and the longer and more tedious ones to come her bright courage seemed all at once to leave her.

The proverbial melancholy of the season controlled her mood, and she became introspective.

There had been just one bit of brightness that stood out as a relief against the dreary background of that monotonous summer, and whether she was glad or sorry for it Marion herself hardly knew.

She had welcomed Bruce Wolcott's coming with spontaneous delight, not because it had any special significance for her, but because he stood for all that she had known of youth and freedom and joy, of which there was so little now in her surroundings, so much still in her natural makeup.

But Wolcott had proved more than merely young and care free and jolly as she remembered him; he was alert, sympathetic and unflinching generous.

In recalling the many thoughtful, sweet things he had done for her Marion refused to blame herself for misinterpreting them as acts significant of deeper purpose.

The change had come almost in a day, it seemed to her now. It was not that his generosity ceased, but the personal note that had come so near transforming kindness into love had suddenly dropped out of it.

The comparatively cold courtesy that was left chilled Marion's heart. Her pride nevertheless forced her to accept it as if she noticed no difference.

Her lips trembled now as she felt again the bitterness of the disappointment and the resignation, but she knew that she must not give way utterly. For that, for surrender to unhappiness and despair, there was no time or place allotted in her life's schedule. She must be always ready, always cheerful, always self-effaced.

With characteristic determination she attempted to turn her thoughts into other channels, but after reading a few pages in the book she had brought with her out under the trees she closed it with emphatic disapproval.

"I could write a better story myself," was her mental comment. And she was soon deeply engrossed in the experiment.

Some three or four hours later in the day, on his customary way to inquire after Marion's invalid aunt, Wolcott came upon the book and the loose sheets of paper carelessly slipped into it, or, rather, slipping out of it, for the wind was fluttering the leaves energetically.

A chance phrase or two caught his attention. He read on without stopping to think of the breach of etiquette that he was committing, and then, having read through to the last, he turned back to the beginning.

It was an idle little fancy. "In childhood he had been her playmate," Wolcott read. "Whenever she skipped over the green of the fields it was with her hand tight clasped in his. If she slipped on the smooth cross stones in the brook he pulled her up with a jerk, and they both laughed at her dripping little figure. The other children didn't hear him laugh, to be sure. In fact, they didn't know him, because they never saw him. The little girl kept him all to herself, afraid to let any one else suspect his existence."

"They often wondered—the poor, blind, unimaginative other children—why she liked to play so much by herself. Of course he always walked by her side when they went to school—at first adorably shy, just tugging on behind; later, growing bolder and encouraged by the little girl, he carried her books with a swaggering air of possession that delighted her heart."

"But for some inexplicable reason as the boy's shyness gradually evolved into an attitude of debonaire coquetry the girl lost all her darning and assertiveness. She no longer took the lead. In fact, in no time at all she found herself following his lead, sometimes with a meekness of which she was wholly unconscious and again with a strange mingling of fear and tumultuous happiness that proclaimed him master of her heart."

"But the boy because his power had come to him so easily was careless of it. Besides, there were so many other things that were more worth while. He told the girl about some of them boastfully, expecting her to share his enthusiasm. And because she seemed to him indifferent and no longer a comrade interested in the same things of life he sought her less and less frequently, and at length they drifted quite apart."

"But the girl never forgot. She followed his career from afar and was proud of all his successes. Yet, much as she admired and revered the man, in her heart it was the boy whose image she treasured. She still imagined him with her, sharing her keen delight in every bit of beauty that she chanced upon, holding her hand tight whenever the turbulent waters came near sweeping her on with them."

"If the man ever remembered"—

And here the fine spun fancy came to a full stop owing probably to some sudden interruption.

For a few minutes Wolcott sat absorbed in deep thought. So she did love him after all! And what he had overheard her tell her aunt coming suddenly along by her open window one day had been all a part of her daily heroism. Her lips had said: "No, auntie, I do not love him. He is only just a friend. He can never mean anything more to me." But her heart had said—

He reread the last part of the confession and then, taking out his pencil, wrote hurriedly:

"If the man ever remembered," he began, continuing the thread of the story, "it was no wonder what had become of his jolly little playmate and to try to recall what it was that had separated them. He was glad that he had done big things, and, although while he was doing them he did not stop to analyze his motive or his inspiration, he knew afterward that he had done them for her in the hope that she might hear of them and be proud. And after they were done and he had earned a breathing space he knew that he should never do anything more worth while until he should find her again and have her near him always to love and to worship."

"He yearned for a warm clasp of her little hand and the sound of her laughter. What a fool he had been to let such priceless possessions pass when they were his for the taking! Would it be possible to regain them now? Would she forgive him and love him and enshrine him again as master of her heart?"

Suddenly Wolcott heard an embarrassed little laugh behind him.

"Oh, I—I didn't realize you were here," Marion was saying in almost stammering confusion. "I came out to get a book I left here this morning."

"Yes, I found it," Bruce acknowledged awkwardly, the written sheets scattered in telltale fashion about him. "You didn't dare?" began Marion, blushing and turning white and blushing again in a way that kept Wolcott staring at her in fascinated admiration.

"Yes, I did, but I'll play fair," he answered, smiling at her with all his old engaging frankness. "You may read the end of the story—Marion. I took the liberty of finishing it."

He watched her closely while she read it and noticed, with a great bounding of joy in his heart, how her hand trembled as she came to the last words.

"But it isn't finished, is it?" she asked gently after a little pause.

"You are the only one who knows, dear," he answered tenderly. "Am I by any chance the little boy in your heart—the boy you've always loved, Marion?"

He was holding her hand now, and he felt the sudden tightening of her clasp.

"The boy I've always loved," she answered softly, "and—the master of my heart."

A Busy Ten Dollar Bill.

Mr. Brown keeps a boarding house. Around the table sat his wife, Mrs. Brown; the village milliner, Mrs. Andrews; Mr. Black, the baker; Mr. Jordan, a carpenter, and Mr. Hadley, a flour, feed and lumber merchant. Mr. Brown took $10 out of his pocket and handed it to Mrs. Brown with the remark that there was $10 toward the $20 he promised her. Mrs. Brown handed the bill to Mrs. Andrews, the milliner, saying, "That pays for my new bonnet." Mrs. Andrews in turn passed it to Mr. Jordan, remarking that it would pay for the carpenter work he had done for her. Mr. Jordan handed it to Mr. Hadley, requesting his receipt bill for flour, feed and lumber. Mr. Hadley gave the bill back to Mr. Brown, saying, "That pays $10 on my board." Mr. Brown again passed it to his wife, remarking that he had now paid her the $20 he had promised her. She in turn paid Mr. Black to settle her bread and pastry account. Mr. Black handed it to Mr. Hadley, asking credit for the amount on his flour account. Mr. Hadley again passed it to Mr. Brown, with the remark that it settled for that month's board, whereupon Mr. Brown put it back into his pocket, observing that he had not supposed a greenback would go so far—Osceola (La.) Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as well as nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nerve tonic. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeon's knife, which it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends who so kindly gave us their assistance during the sickness and death of our mother. G. D. Fletcher and family

DEPAUW NEWS

PREPS IN POOR CONDITION PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT

THE REGULAR LINE-UP WILL BE DAMAGED BY HOSPITAL LIST.

BRAZIL GAME A HARD ONE

With two of their best men laid off on account of their studies, the academy football team will be in poor condition to play the game here Saturday against the Brazil High School eleven. However, Captain Long has not lost hope of defeating the Southern State championship claimants and is working hard to round his men into fair condition. Tucker who has been playing at quarter, has been changed to an end position, where he bids fair to equal his brother in time and Sherwood will probably pilot the eleven Saturday.

The Brazil team is trying hard for the Southern Indiana championship and so far they have been doing well. In the Brazil-Academy game played there several weeks ago, they defeated the preps 5 to 0 in a fast game and last week they defeated the Bloomington lads thus giving them a clear road if the preps do not turn the tables on them tomorrow.

BAND WILL BE HIRED

STUDENT COUNCIL WILL SECURE "NOISE" FOR THE WABASH GAME.

EACH STUDENT MAY SUBSCRIBE

The Student Council will see that DePauw makes a proper showing at the Wabash game a week from tomorrow. The "D" men have got behind the excursion and made it an assured fact so the Student Council has promised a band.

At the meeting of the Council last night definite arrangements were made for raising the money to pay a band for the hardest game of the season. It was decided to call on each student of the university to contribute 25 cents each. Slips have been printed and will be passed around among the various clubs, fraternities, sororities and at Women's and Florence Halls. Every student will be asked to contribute before the end of this week.

There was some discussion as to what band to hire. The Brazil Band was suggested as was also a band at Newtown. The Newtown musicians were more favorably considered because their expenses would be less.

A report was made of the earnings of Old Gold Day. After all the expenses had been discounted it was found that a little over eight dollars remained in the treasury. This will be used to help pay for the Wabash demonstration.

A list of new songs and yells will be arranged, copies of which will be passed out to the students at the mass meeting which will be held the first part of next week in order to direct the enthusiasm where it will do most good.

HARD SCRIMMAGE PRACTICE

SECOND TEAM IS GIVEN THE BALL AND AGAINST THE VARSITY.

BROWN WILL STRENGTHEN LINE

After a preliminary twenty minutes of punting yesterday afternoon Coach Brown put the squad through an hour of hard scrimmage. In order to give the Varsity line the practice in defense which it needs, the coach gave the ball to the second team, strengthened by the varsity back field, and gave them orders to make a touchdown if they could. Then the silent one spent all of his time in coaching the varsity line, which was shown by last Saturday's game to be rather weak. The Coach will be forced to devote most of his time to this part of the team in order to strengthen the defense as the idea of getting an assistant coach has been dropped. This action was taken by the committee last night as they decided it was too late to secure any man on such short notice good enough to take charge of the line.

Whisler, the right end, who was out for the first time for two weeks is again practicing with the varsity and will be in the Earlham game Saturday. Dewey played at left tackle owing to the absence of Hawthorne who sprained his ankle in Wednesday's scrimmage.

The coach is working hard to remedy the two defects of the team, the weakness of the line and their non-familiarity with the signals. Wednesday night he raced the eleven around in the gymnasium for two hours so that they would know their places in every play and the result of this extra work was easily noticed in the practice yesterday afternoon.

TWO MEN ARE CHOSEN

COACH BROWN PICKS MYERS AND SOMMERVILLE FOR TEAM.

Myers and Somerville have been chosen by Coach Brown and Prof. Barnes to represent DePauw in the cross country run at Notre Dame on November 21. Not daunted at all by the men against whom they are to compete, the two runners are taking cross country runs every afternoon covering from eight to ten miles each time.

"They are going up against a hard run," said the coach yesterday afternoon, "but we can count on them to show the Catholics a good time for Myers is an experienced cross country man, having run and won before."

PLAN PRESENT

Seniors Are Already Thinking About Their Class Gift.

Already the Seniors are discussing the matter of a class present to the university. Several suitable presents have been suggested among which a set of chimes, a new college clock, and an oil portrait of Bishop Hughes have received favorable and enthusiastic mention.

Another plan which has received much favor is the donation of the present fund to refurnish Meharry Hall. An effort will be made to outdo every preceding class and to accomplish this careful consideration will be given to every suggestion.

Whew!

Two friends happened to meet on a stormy winter morning.

"Well, how do you like this weather?" asked one, almost out of breath.

"Oh, horrible!"

"How's your wife?" gasped the other.

"Oh, just about the same!" was the reply as a gust of wind turned his umbrella inside out.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Gaffing Gun.

Richard Jordan Gaffing, the inventor of the gun bearing his name, was a native of Hartford county, N. C., where he was born in 1818. The Gaffing gun was not used to any extent during the war between the states, a dozen or so being employed by Butler on the James river. The invention was not made fairly practical until 1865, when the gun was adopted into the United States service.

Mrs. M. D. Ricketts who has been ill for some days is still confined to the house.

Charles Haspel is moving into the Gibbons property on West Washington Street.

Just think of it—a live baby to be given away at the opera house Saturday night.

Don't miss the amateurs at the opera house Saturday night. Come and see the fun.

Three dollars will be given to the best amateur specialty at the opera house Saturday night.

Mrs. Earl Durham and son have gone to Kansas City, Mo., where they will visit for the coming month.

Mrs. W. A. Sunday is visiting her son and daughter of the university. She will remain over the Sabbath.

Harry Thornburg was before the mayor this morning and was fined the usual amount for intoxication.

Reese Matson, who has been absent from the hotel for several days because of a sore foot is again at his place.

The thermometer was down to 18 degrees above zero this morning, which is rather more than reasonable weather.

The Woman's Club will meet tomorrow afternoon at Ladies' Hall. Mrs. J. G. Dunbar and Mrs. Mary Mathias will read an original short story.

Messrs. R. L. O'Hair, J. L. Randel, W. L. Denman, S. A. Hays and F. A. Arnold attended the banquet of the State Bankers Association, at Indianapolis last night.

Thomas E. Lyon, of Springfield, Ill., has been elected to the state senate of Illinois from the 25th District, on the Republican ticket. Mr. Lyon is a nephew of F. M. Lyon of this city, and is well known here.

The material for the steel stacks of the new DePaw library has arrived and this afternoon was being sorted and placed in the building. It will be assembled as soon as possible, as the authorities have been waiting some time for the stacks.

A considerable number of Greencastle people and DePaw students saw the Burdette Stock Company's presentation of "The Devil" last night. All conceded that it was a good piece of work on the part of the company. The play has been widely discussed today.

Brazil Times: A large number from this city will accompany the high school football team to Greencastle Saturday, where they will play the fast prep team of DePaw University. Misses Cecile Chew and Kyle Smith of Reelsville, who have been visiting here, returned home today, accompanied by Miss Edna Bence.

Charles McLaughlin was down from Roachdale today.

Maxine, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McNally is ill.

George G. Demberger of Indianapolis, was here on business today.

Miss Fannie Walls was a passenger on the 10:17 Interurban this morning.

J. L. Norman of Bloomington was in the city this morning taking some mules and horses to Linden, Ind.

Doe Hodgers has returned from Terre Haute, where he was called by the critical condition of his brother.

The mystery box sale at the Vermillion dry goods store this afternoon attracted a goodly number of purchasers.

Attorney George Easley, of Danville, Ind., was here today on legal business connected with some of the Big Four suits venued from Hendricks County to Putnam.

Who will next be appointed postmaster in Greencastle? That question is a burning one in certain spots, and is causing several aspirants to walk the floor when they should be tucked snugly in bed. As a matter of fact some of these aspirants have no show—the push is not for them. By push, we mean the fellows that claim to have "fluency." There is general belief that the place is already promised and it will not be bestowed under the influence nor at the behest of Howard Maxwell.

Iceberg Gardens.

"We passed many icebergs coming home from Europe," said a tourist, "and on one of them a garden bloomed. It was a beautiful sight. The great berg shone like an enormous emerald in the sun, and in one level recess, fenced in by pale green peaks, a yellow garden gleamed. The captain said that iceberg gardens are not uncommon. Moss, it seems, is brought on to the bergs by animals' feet. The moss grows, it decays, it forms a soil for the pollen of buttercups and dandelions that is blown through the air during the brief arctic summer. Soon the incredible spectacle presents itself of a great cold berg adrift in the salt sea with yellow flowers springing from the hard, cold ice."—New York Press.

Chinese Boy's Toothache.

In China fathers and mothers do not know how to care for their children, says a traveler in the orient. If a boy's tooth aches, for example, the doctor sometimes hits it hard to kill the worms which he supposes to be gnawing at the roots or gives a little opium to relieve the pain, thus starting a habit which soon makes the boy a useless man.

Conflicting Rules.

"When we are married," said the girl, "of course you will shave every morning. That's one of the rules of our club. We all agreed not to marry any man who wouldn't shave every morning."

"Well, what about the mornings I don't get home in time?" responded the young man. "I belong to a club too."—St. Louis Republic.

Lost.

A tremendous wall supports the Monte Carlo terrace that overlooks the sea. Last winter some joker put on this wall a placard that said: "Five thousand francs reward—Lost on Jan. 24 the sum of 500,000 francs at the roulette tables of the Monte Carlo casino. The above reward will be paid to the person returning same to the original owner."

St. Vitus' Dance.

St. Vitus was the saint who was supposed to have special power over all nervous and hysterical afflictions; hence when the celebrated "dancing mania" began in Germany, the Low Countries and elsewhere over Europe the strange phenomenon was called "St. Vitus' dance"—that is, it was something coming under the special care of that saint's power.

The little group of bohemians were discussing their absent brothers. "And what has become of Penner, the writer?" asked one reminiscently. "Is he still a free lance?" "No," sighed another, "he is free no longer. The poor chap is married now."—Chicago News.

A Traceless Poison

[Original.]

Having been summoned as an expert in chemistry in the Nolan case, I concluded my testimony with the remark, "A person desiring to kill another would be more likely to use a poison that would leave no trace," whereupon the prosecuting attorney asked me if there was such a poison. I having replied that there was, he asked me to name it. The judge forbade me to do so. The prosecutor insisted, but the judge was immovable. He would not permit me to name publicly a poison that would leave no trace.

Immediately after my testimony was published I was deluged with letters inquiring the name of the poison that left no trace. Most of them doubtless came from idle curiosity, but I was astonished at the number of those which showed plainly, from the pains the writers took to conceal their identity, that they were written for an evil purpose.

One day I received a call from a woman who asked for the secret. She said she had made a bet with her brother, who was a scientist, of $1,000 that there was such a poison, and she desired to prove it to him by trying it on a dog. If I would give her the name or the poison and she won she would give me half the amount.

I questioned her, then, going into another room, returned with a tiny pill, which I gave her, saying that if it killed the dog and left no trace she might refer her brother to me for evidence that she had won the bet. When she left I sent a housemaid to follow her, who brought me her address. Sending for a detective, I directed him to establish some sort of a watch on the house where she lived, to shadow her when she went out and report to me any case of illness that might occur to any one with whom she might be connected.

In a few days my man reported that the lady's husband had died suddenly. It had been given out that he had suffered an apoplectic stroke and had not lived an hour after.

I was thunderstruck. I alone knew the nature of the pill I had given the woman, and of course she would keep the secret. Nevertheless I was very much troubled at the result. I directed the detective to keep her under strict surveillance. Later he reported to me that she had visited the office of a life insurance company. Upon inquiry he had learned that her husband had been insured for $50,000. I hurried to the insurance office, called on the president and advised him before paying the claim to make sure that there was no trickery connected with it. But I would answer no questions.

The next I heard of the case was that upon examination of the body—exhumed for the purpose—it was discovered that it was the remains of the brother of the man insured. The insured himself had disappeared. Payment was refused, and the woman was arrested on a charge of fraud, to which was added a charge of murder.

The body of the deceased was given over to physicians with a view to discovering if the man had died a natural death. One reported apoplexy as the cause, another heart trouble and another kidney disease. Three different experts reported three different poisons found in the body. There was opium, arsenic and one other, the name of which I have forgotten. I was summoned as a witness for the prosecution and produced a sensation by refusing to testify on the ground of self incrimination.

Afterward I consented to give my evidence. I informed the court of the woman's visit to me, of her request for a poison that would leave no trace and the use she proposed to make of it. Then I told them that I had given her the pill. At this point a technical objection was interposed by the defendant's counsel, and the judge sustained him. I was forbidden to tell what was in the pill, the reason being that it had not been proved that the pill had been used. This left me in a very unfortunate position.

After a long trial the woman was acquitted of the charge of murder, and the charge of fraud was never pressed. The prosecution had failed to prove she knew that the man who was buried was her husband's brother or that she had poisoned him. Her counsel contrived to throw all the blame on her husband, who had disappeared.

After her acquittal the woman came to see me. She was curious to know if I had been deceived by her story about the bet and if I had really given her a traceless pill. Before replying I asked her to explain the case to me, and, after a solemn promise on my part to keep her secret, she did so.

Her husband's life was largely insured, and since they were an ill married couple she resolved to poison him. Just as she was about to give him the pill I had furnished her her husband's brother came to the house for a visit. His health had been broken down by excesses, especially drugs that he had taken in large quantities. While at their house he suddenly died, probably of heart failure. The woman proposed to her husband that he disappear and his brother, who resembled him closely, be buried in his stead. This was done.

I told her she would find an explanation of my part in the matter in the paper the next morning. My explanation recited my experiences as to a traceless poison and my desire to make a test case. The whole filled two columns, at the end of which I gave the contents of the pill I had given the woman.

It was made of bread.

HAROLD OTIS.

THE GREEK-GOVERNMENT MINE.

[Original.]

There is no definite connection today between a college education and money making, the higher education having become only essential to the professions. It is nothing unusual to find a "graduate" punching cattle or strumming a piano in a western dance house or even dealing faro. As to the girls, a college education makes them more self reliant, more daring, and they are beginning on leaving college to take their chances with the men in novel enterprises.

Everett Avery on being graduated delivered an oration. The senior class from a neighboring women's college attended the exercises, and while Avery was speaking his attention was attracted to a dark haired and eyed girl with a strongly marked face who was listening to him. A few days later he attended the commencement exercises of the women's college referred to and sat looking up with interest at the girl who had favored him with her attention.

Avery proved to be one of the men who find that a higher education doesn't always bring success. After trying a number of occupations and finding that his education had inspired him with a contempt for all of them he made up his mind that success is a gamble and he would as lief gamble with his pick as a prospector for mines as in any other way. Five years after orating on the influences of Greek civilization on modern university life he was twenty feet down in a hole in Colorado hunting for gold.

Rather, he was hunting for gold. He had struck a vein that promised something and was following it up. It opened well as he went down, but the widening seemed rather to lead to the western side of his claim. After following it to his line he knocked off and went away to put in a claim for the adjoining property. He was too late. The land had long ago been taken up. After having been away from his mine for some time he returned to it to find a hole on the claim he had been after. A good deal of dirt had been taken out, but not enough to show that the claim was being worked by more than one person.

Avery went to work again, following his "lead" down, since he had reached his limit to the west. One day he distinctly heard the sound of a pick in that direction. His neighbor had evidently struck the vein he had discovered. Suddenly something gave way, and the whole west side of the mine slid down, a mass of loose dirt. There stood his neighbor. To Avery's astonishment the miner was a woman, though she wore high top boots and a skirt to her knees. The two stood staring at each other by the dim light of their lanterns.

"Your face is familiar to me," was the first remark. Avery made it. "I remember you perfectly," replied the neighbor. "Where have we met?"

"You were speaking of the influence of Greek civilization on—"

"Blasphemous! If they had never existed perhaps I wouldn't be here. I might have spent the time learning something practical. By the way, your own oration impressed me. You were dilating on the future of woman in our government, I believe."

"It doesn't look as if I am to govern anybody down here, does it?"

"Not unless you govern me. But, tell me, how in the world did you ever happen to come here?"

"After graduation I became a stenographer and typewriter. Father came out here and entered several claims. He died, and I came out to look over what he had. I was advised to have this claim examined. That meant if there was anything in it I would be cheated out of it. I concluded to do it myself."

"Hail! You've run into my claim." "You mean you've run into mine." "Hail! You've got back east and follow up the points made in your graduating speech—go into politics—and leave this thing to me to handle for both of us?"

"I like that! You might go abroad and study up on the ancient Greeks' influence on modern university life. Your college might give you a professorship on that."

"Or some other subject of no practical use. Thanks, no. I'd rather dig dirt. In that I feel I'm doing something."

"I'd rather govern the country, I admit, but even woman suffrage doesn't seem to make quick headway, and I'm afraid I'll be an old woman before I'll be eligible to a governing office."

"And even then you'd be defeated by a younger one."

"Right you are."

"Well, let's come to an understanding. Five years in the world have knocked the nonsense out of both of us. These two mines must be united. I'll sell to you if you want to buy."

"No funds. I'll sell to you."

"What shall we do?"

"We might unite our interests by uniting ourselves. I can handle a pick better than you, and you can cook, I fancy. Now, suppose we set up a cabin in together. You take care of it while I follow this lead. I'm dead sure there's a lot in it."

"Shall I confess something?"

"Yes. What is it?"

"When I listened to your oration I said to myself, 'That's the man for me.'"

"Did you? Same here. Shake."

Nobody understood the name of the Greek-Government mine but the owners. Their first find was a nine pound boy. After that gold came and made them rich. BEATRICE TUCKER.
