NEAR DEATH FROM BURNS

James Humphries, of Cloverdale, Falls Into a Kettle of Boiling Water While Butchering Hogs on Friday.

CONDITION VERY SERIOUS STILL

James Humphries, of Cloverdale, met with a serious and painful accident on Friday afternoon. Mr. Humphries was engaged, with several others, in butchering hogs. A large kettle of water had been heated for the purpose, and Humphries, in some manner stumbled and fell into the kettle. It overturned upon the unfortunate man, making the burns even worse. As it is his leg and side are terribly injured, and his condition is considered very serious. At ten o'clock this morning he had improved but little, and was suffering intensely.

LEG BROKEN IN BAD FALL

Superintendent of Bridge Construction Breaks Leg in Fall From New Structure in Floyd Township Friday Afternoon.

Mr. Moore, superintendent of bridge construction for the Paris Bridge Company, of Paris, Ill., fell from the bridge that is being built by that company in Floyd Township, on Friday afternoon, and broke his leg. The fracture was a very bad one. Dr. O'Brien, of Ellettsville, was called and reduced it.

The company for which Moore works, it is understood, has sent a man to care for the injured superintendent till he can be moved.

To the most conservative manager, will say, that I take pleasure in recommending "The Widow McCarty Co." as being clean cut, full of action and will please any audience of ordinary intelligence. I find Manager Cranes a gentleman and a Prince to do business with. I will be greatly pleased to give him time in any all of my several houses at any time that he brings a company into my territory. Wishing him and his company the very best of success which they so justly deserve, I am

Yours very truly,

THAT DITCH CASE AGAIN

Editor Herald:

The Banner has mentioned on two occasions that the Ditch case has been badly managed but fails to show in what way. Is there not a little county politics in it? Would he have referred to it in that way if the officials had been Republicans? Not much, he would have been as dumb as an oyster. The County Board has at all times in this matter, acted under the advice of Hon. T. T. Moore, who is regarded as a safe man and one who gives close attention to all matters submitted to him. Also Hon. John H. James, and James P. Hughes, both regarded as good and careful men who have given the matter close attention ever since the suit was commenced. Several other attorneys have been consulted and agreed with those who had charge of the matter, but the higher court held the law, as they construed it, to be otherwise. Why don't the Banner jump on the law makers and abuse them? They are responsible, if any one. If the law is a bad one, repeal it.

FAIR PLAY.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Charles Barnaby and Mrs. Florence Dunbar entertained some two score of their friends Friday afternoon from two till five. Cards were used as a source of pleasure and conversation, and ten tables gave place for forty guests at the game of five hundred.

The beautiful home of Mrs. Barnaby, which needs no decoration, was even more beautiful than usual yesterday with the addition of flowers of which yellow chrysanthemums were given the place of honor. Elaborate refreshments were served, and the hostesses were congratulated at the close of the afternoon upon having given one of the most pleasant and delightful of the season's affairs.

COATS LaVogue SUITS

LaVogue Coats Will Fit You

Not all coats that fit are desirable, but the coat you'll really want to wear is one that combines perfect styling with harmonious coloring.

LA VOGUE coats are the result of a generous amount of brain effort on the part of expert designers. The materials are carefully selected to appear to best advantage in the style they are to be made—the trimmings, linings, etc., are all selected with the question of harmony always uppermost.

The array we have ready for your view will surprise you—a complete and authoritative showing of the seasons newest styles.

GAVE THE COLLEGE YELL

At Hotel Astor, in New York City And Other Stunts in "Praise of Old DePauw" And the Hoosier State, Did the Daughters of Indiana Club, Made up of Native Indians.

MRS. W. W. PENFIELD PRESIDED

New York, Nov. 19.—The Society of the Daughters of Indiana in New York, which had its first social meeting of the fourth season at the Hotel Astor, Monday afternoon, is novel among the clubs of New York. Its programs are always filled by those either born or bred in the home State. The talk during the hour tea is served is not of New York, but of Indiana. As the woman said of Philadelphia: "It is a sentiment!" No doubt the other State societies are just as loyal, but they don't stick to their text so faithfully and persistently.

There were so many former DePauw students at the "College day" meeting Monday, that they sang in praise of "Old DePauw" and gave the college yell. The newly-elected president of DePauw, Dr. Francis McConnell, pastor of the New York Avenue church, in Brooklyn, was present and said in a charming talk that it would not be the first time he had lived in Indiana, and spoke of many interesting incidents and people he had known.

Mrs. W. W. Penfield, formerly Miss Jean Nelson of Greencastle, who won the interstate oratorical contest in her college days, was chairman of the day. An interesting fact stated was that in "Who is Who" in America, the credit of having graduated more successful men than any other college of its size was given DePauw. Mrs. Martha Tarbell spoke for the State University at Bloomington where the present American system of education was first born in 1816. Mrs. C. Kightlinger, formerly of Valparaiso, told of its university, whose attendance is second only to Columbia. Mrs. H. H. Cuppy gave news of Franklin, and Mrs. Joseph Froggatt, formerly Miss Bance, of Richmond, spoke for Earlham.

Mrs. Ralph Gwynn talked of her work in the Y. W. C. A. in Indiana colleges. Guy Morrison Walker, on "Co-Education in the Middle West," said that three generations in his family had found their wives in an Indiana college, as he hoped his son, who enters there this year, would do. Two granddaughters of the first graduate at Bloomington—the Miss Goodwin—and two granddaughters of the first president were present. Mrs. W. Rogers Wheeler, formerly Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, of Crawfordsville, sang delightfully, and Mrs. Edwin C. Martin, the writer, once of Richmond, gave Indiana current events. Mr. Hamilton of Greensburg head worker at the University Settlement, talked informally.

The January meeting will be "Philanthropic day," and at the December meeting the election of officers will take place. In February a luncheon with special Indiana guests of honor will be given. The annual entertainment has been in the nature of a dinner in other years, except the first, when a large reception was given for Mrs. C. W. Fairbanks.

Among the many prominent Hoosiers who have spoken to the society as guests have been ex-Governor Durbin, Dr. Harvey Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry; William Chase, the noted artist; Robert Underwood Johnson, assistant editor of the Century and author of many beautiful poems; Dr. William Bagard Hale, author of "A Week with President Roosevelt." and the interview with Emperor William in the Century, which he recalled after it was ready for issue, and R. J. Traaswell, Controller of the Treasury.

Associate members must have lived at least five years in Indiana or be the wife or daughter of a native of Indiana. They have all the privileges, except that of holding office. Any Indiana woman in New York, temporarily or permanently, is invited to make herself known to the society. While the object of the society is to perpetuate the history and tradition of the State, and promote friendly, social relations among the members, it has assisted the federation at times in such charitable objects as furnishing pure milk to sick babies.

The first meeting to found the society was called by Miss Ruby Rees and Mrs. Charles Mooney. The club pin was designed by Miss Ketcham, and at the general federation meeting last summer in Boston was so much admired by Indiana delegates that the State federation has asked if it may adopt the same. Consent has been given provided the shape and color be changed.

REPUBLICANS CANVAS VOTE

Committee of G. O. P. Go Over the Putnam County Returns in Search Of Errors Made by the Election Commission.

MISTAKE OF FIVE IN CLINTON

Putnam County's vote in the late election was canvassed again last night, this time by a committee of Republicans. The committee was composed of Charles Zeis, of the Republican County Committee, C. T. Peck, Thomas T. Moore and James Denny. The committee was looking for errors to lay before the candidates of the house and senate in case the contests talked of such actually occur.

They found but one error, amounting to five votes. In the south precinct of Clinton Township it was discovered that the polling clerks had certified to 81 votes for the whole number of Democratic candidates, while the tally sheet shows but 76 tally marks. Whether the total or the individual tally is correct no one knows, but it is certain that a slight mistake has been made in that precinct. The rest of the vote of Putnam County was found to be correct.

LOCAL MASONS AT ROACHDALE

Forty Members of the Greencastle Lodge Attend an Initiation and Banquet at the North County Town Friday Night.

The special which took the DePauw rosters to the football game at Crawfordsville also carried a number of Greencastle Masons, who visited the game first and then stopped at Roachdale on their way back. Here they were joined by other Greencastle Masons who went up on the evening train. These men to the number of forty were there on invitation of the Roachdale Masonic lodge, and they attended an initiation and banquet given by the Masons of that town.

Part of the initiation was in the hands of the Greencastle team, but all the exercises were taken care of by the Roachdale men. And they did it in a royal manner, too. The Greencastle visitors vote their thanks to the Roachdale lodge for a grand good time in that town.

Faith Healing, Christian Science, Etc. Dr. J. S. Hoagland will begin Sunday evening a series of sermons on "Faith Healing, Christian Science, Mind Cure," and kindred subjects. These addresses will be announced from time to time in the daily press as they are prepared. On Sunday evening the subject will be, "The Fact of Faith Cure." The pastor invites all who are interested in these themes to be present.

NEW THEORY OF LIABILITY

J. P. Hughes Wins Case in Appellate Court and Decision is of Importance to Greencastle and Putnam County.

VANDALIA LOSES CONTENTION

A decision of the Appellate Court yesterday confirming a verdict by a Putnam County jury is of interest because of a new idea of liability on the part of railway companies. The case is that of Eva McMains against the Vandalia Railroad for damages sustained in a runaway caused by the horse becoming frightened by the escaping steam of an engine taking water at the crane near the crossing of Bloomington Street. The case was decided in the Putnam court in favor of the plaintiff, and she was awarded $300 damages. The Vandalia appealed the case.

The railroad contended that it was entirely within its rights at the time of the accident. The engine was taking water and the escaping steam was part of the regular working of the engine and necessary to its operation. The court ruled against this view. The decision was as follows:

A verdict awarding damages for frightening plaintiff's horse and causing an injury is sustained by evidence that steam escaped from the safety valve of defendant's locomotive and frightened the horse, causing the injuries; that it was not necessary to have a full head of steam at the time nor for ten or fifteen minutes afterward, and that there were three methods other than the safety valve by which the steam pressure could have been controlled, since this evidence warranted an inference of negligence.

J. P. Hughes was the attorney for the plaintiff, and wins the case.

WABASH TAKES HARD GAME

After withstanding the terrific line smashes of the Wabash back field during the entire first half, DePauw went to pieces in the middle of the last session and before the Methodists could collect themselves, the Little Giants had clinched the game by rushing Stiers through for two touchdowns. Hargrave kicked both goals and the final score was 12 to 0.

The first half gave DePauw the better end of the dope and at the close of the first session the Wabash stock had dropped. The two teams saw-sawed back and forth across the field, neither being in striking distance of the goal. The oval was booted up and down the field and the exhibition was unusually open. The Methodists fought hard and the Wabash men earned every inch they got. Although they outweighed DePauw at least ten pounds Wabash seemed to be unable to damage the line to any great extent. They did not make consistent gains and no remarkable marches were made by either team.

At one time DePauw recovered the ball in the shadow of the Wabash goal and the oval was not more than three yards from the Wabash goal line. Overman booted it out of danger. The ball was in DePauw's territory during the greater portion of the first half and it was not on Wabash ground more than three or four times.

DePauw broke up their runs almost every time Wabash attempted to clear the ends and the Little Giants did not gain on their trick plays, and their forward passes failed to work. Hargrave made several sensational runs directly across the field but did not gain much ground except at one time when the Methodist headed him off in an attempt to make a forward pass and he got away with an almost open field.

Coach Brown said after the game that his men did the best they knew how and that DePauw's defeat was due to the fact that the Wabash team was the strongest put in any game this season. It was a good deal stronger than the one which went up against Rose Polytechnic. "Their back field was faster and their line was stronger," said the DePauw trainer, "and they hit the line harder. Our interference was about as good as theirs but neither was as good as it should have been. Our defense was good but our interference was not as good as it has been at other times during the season."

Coach Brown said that he believed that Stansel played the best game of any man on the team. He and Lawrence fought for first honors. Both men were in every play and both did exceptionally well in following the ball. Hodler played well at end and several gains were made by Greenstreet. Grady was a ground gainer at times and Denison got through the line several times.

The lineup was as follows:
DePauw Position Wabash
Jackson ..... L-E ..... Burns
Stansel, Harmon L-T ..... Hess
Hawthorn, Dewey L-G ..... Hopkins
Lawrence ..... Center ..... Brown

BIG BLACK EAGLE

Killed on the Farm of L. D. Sechman, On Friday Afternoon—Oscar Rector and Cecil Quinlan Bagged this Big Game With a Shot Gun.

On Friday afternoon, on the farm of L. D. Sechman, in Marion township, Messrs. Oscar Rector and Cecil Quinlan shot a black eagle. The bird is a fine specimen of his species; measures seven feet and six inches from tip to tip. The bird was perching in a tree top and was brought down with a shot gun.

It is the intent to have it stuffed and mounted.

IT MAY BE A DARK HORSE

The situation as regards Greencastle's choicest federal appointment, that of postmaster, is a riddle and no one is sufficiently "next" to give the answer. Every man in the race is a sure winner in his own estimation and in the estimation of his friends, and all others are already distanced in the race. This seems to summarize the contest up to date. No pools are in evidence, the "bookies" are not busy, and no "odds" on any candidate are offered.

The indications are that several of the aspirants are "gaunted" to assure speed and endurance.

The race is on between Lem Johns, John Keller, Joe Donohue, Joe Torr, E. L. Harris, A. O. Lockridge, Chas. Zeis, J. G. Dunbar, H. M. Smith, so report has it on the highways and byways of Greencastle; with the possibility that the list named will increase to double the number before the entries are closed.

We gaze from afar off, keep our weather eye cocked and our ears open, endeavoring to catch developments and keep our readers posted.

CAB OFFICE IS CHANGED

Transfer Line Finds Weather Too Cold to Keep Teams Out in the Street at the Palace Restaurant.

Announcement has been made by George Collins, proprietor of the Greencastle Transfer Line, that the office of the line would be changed on Sunday from the Palace restaurant to the Transfer barn on North Indiana Street. The phone at the new office will be No. 59 and all calls should be sent over this phone after Sunday.

The change is made necessary by the coming of the winter season. It would be impossible to keep cars and teams standing in the open when the weather becomes severe. They will be kept in the barn and the business handled directly from the barn office.

Contest in Bible School.

The pastor of the Christian church is offering a banner to the class that makes the largest increase in number of pupils by the first Sunday in the new year. The school is engaged in a contest for new pupils.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL.

Let DePauw take courage and cheer up. Football, though showy, is not the main business of college life, nor the contest most desirable to win. It is valuable to give life to an institution and to stir that peculiar element known as college spirit, and it sometimes serves to advertise an institution with the unthinking, but in itself it is not one of the ends of a university course. After all a university is a place for the training of the head, and for so much training of the body as will aid the head. To make athletics otherwise is to give it over-importance place. Contests in oratory, debate, in essay are far more valuable to the contestants and the institution. We regret to say that at most colleges, and DePauw is no exception, the interest of the student body in these things is rapidly declining. At some of the recent class debates here there was not a college girl present, and but a handful of college men. We are of the opinion that this does not speak well for the intellectual interest of the students. Making grades is not a test of intellectuality. It may be only an overplus of memory. Love of the intellectual, for its own sake, is broader than grades. In the days when DePauw educated the men whom the state and the school now honor, intellectual things took precedence. The older graduates are right in boasting of the days of the DePauw literary societies. The societies themselves were not important, but they symbolized a love for intellectual things, for contests of the mind, that to us, appears much higher than strife for Phi Beta Kappa, or grinding for grades. Students took part because they liked it, not for grades and honors. It is the spirit which leads the editorial force of the DePauw Daily to do unappreciated work upon that publication. It is the love of the intellectual, stripped of hope of reward, that shows the true student. As for football, defeat is not worth worrying about. The game and its results in enthusiasm and exercise bring their own reward. To lose in debate is more serious.

MARSHALL NOT HANLYIZED

The Governor Elect Turns Down a Lecture Bureau's Attempt to Engage His Services in the Lecture Field During His Term as Chief Executive of the State.

NEXT 4 YEARS BELONG TO STATE

Thomas R. Marshall will devote the four years of his term as governor to the people of Indiana. He will not make the governorship a side issue to a lecture tour.

On November 19, Mr. Marshall received a proposition from the Chicago Lyceum Lecture Bureau to fill the engagements made by that bureau for the late Senator Carmack, who was one of the most brilliant orators of the south. Mr. Marshall declined to go further into the matter, informing the bureau that he intended giving his time to the people of the state who had chosen him as their chief executive.

The letter from the bureau follows:
 Chicago Lyceum Bureau Chicago.
 Co-operative Lyceum Bureau Omaha.
 Columbian Lyceum Bureau St. Paul.
 Coit Lyceum Bureau Cleveland.
 Catholic Lyceum Bureau Chicago.
 Chas. W. Ferguson, President.
 Chas. E. Bentley, General manager.

Suite 705 Orchestra Building Chicago.
 Nov. 10, 1908.
 Hon. Thos. R. Marshall,
 Indianapolis, Ind.
 Dear Sir:

We have been very much interested in your recent and successful campaign in the state of Indiana, and we have a large Chautauqua clientele who are anxious to arrange with the leading political men of the day, especially those interested in reforms, and we write to know if you would be willing to make a limited number of engagements with our assemblies next summer under our auspices.

Doubtless you noticed in the morning paper today the account of Former Senator E. W. Carmack, of Tennessee. Senator Carmack was one of the leading attractions of our list, and we had a number of Chautauqua engagements for him next summer, as well as a number of engagements under the direction of the Chicago Lyceum Bureau for him for this fall. If you would be in position to fill these engagements, we believe that most of our committees would be very glad to arrange with you.

If you would be interested in this, the writer would be glad to run down and see you within the next few days, at such time as would suit your convenience.

Congratulating you upon your tremendous success in Indiana, and hoping to hear from you favorably, we remain, Yours respectfully,
 Chicago Lyceum Bureau,
 Chas. W. Ferguson, President.
 Mr. Marshall's reply was as follows:

Columbia City, Ind., Nov. 16, 1908.
 Charles W. Ferguson,
 Chicago, Ills.

My Dear Sir:—
 It may be that my views are entirely unwarranted, but I am impressed with the idea that except as such time as I may need for rest and recreation the next four years of my life belong to the people of Indiana. I have therefore concluded to accept no Chautauqua engagements and will only be driven to accept them in the event that I cannot live upon my salary.
 Very respectfully yours,
 THOS. R. MARSHALL.

Watched Fifteen Years.

"For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure any sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved us many a doctor bill," says A. P. Hardy, of East Wilton, Maine. 25c at the Owl drug store.

A LINGUISTIC ESCAPEDE.

When Henry W. Longfellow Shocked Intellectual Boston.

In the original impression of Longfellow's poem of "Hiawatha" there were found in the seventh book the three lines following:

Straight into the river Kwasind
 Plunged as if he were an otter,
 Dove as if he were a beaver.

How this offending preterit passed the proofreader without protest is one of those mysteries which have never been revealed. But the form certainly made its appearance and can still be found in copies of the poem which were regularly published and sold. Boston never received such a shock since the days when Fenimore Cooper insisted that it was only in the middle states that the English language was spoken in its purity. But that attack came from an outsider. Here the offender was of her own household, was, in fact, her favorite son. What means of suppression were resorted to will probably never be disclosed. A mysterious reticence has always been preserved in regard to this linguistic escapade. The biographers of Longfellow appear to be silent upon the subject. Measures of some sort must, however, have been taken at once. "Dove" was expunged, and the deorous "dived" assumed its place, and the whole transaction was so completely hushed up that no public scandal was created. Let him who possesses a copy of that first impression continue to cherish it. Whatever may be its worth now, the time will come when it will reach the value of the virtuous woman of Scripture, and its price will be far above rubies.—Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

THE PALACE WAITED.

A Suggestion That Changed the Plans of a Pope.

At a time when there was great suffering among the people from lack of food and when famine in its worst form was threatening Pope Alexander VI. had made arrangements for the erection of a magnificent palace. The best architects had been employed, and the plans had been submitted and accepted, and an accomplished builder had been sent for to come from Venice, a man whose work had won for him renown and who was known to be a just and upright man.

The builder had arrived, and at an appointed time he waited upon his holiness to receive the plans and make his estimates. "There is one thing yet to be done," said the pope. "There has been no proper inscription or legend thought of to be placed over the main entrance of the palace. It should be put above the great gate. You have had experience. Do you think of an inscription that would be appropriate?"

"If your holiness would pardon me for the liberty, I might suggest one most appropriate at this time."

"You are pardoned in advance," said the pope, smiling. "Now, what shall it be?"

"Sovereign pontiff, let it be thus: 'Command that these stones be made bread.'"

The pope was visibly and deeply affected. He paid the builder munificently for his expenses of coming and going, and instead of building his palace he fed the hungry ones of his children.

Poverty Has Its Advantages.

A man on the wane of life observes that poverty has advantages and adversity its uses. If you are poor you can wear out your old clothes. You are excused from calls. You are not troubled with many visitors. Boreds do not disturb you. Spongers do not haunt your tables. Beggars do not stare at you. No one thinks of presenting you with a testimonial. No storekeeper irritates you by asking you, "Is there anything I can do for you?" Begging letter writers do not bother you. Flatterers do not flatter you. You are saved many debts and many a deception. And, lastly, if you have a true friend in the world you are sure to know it in a short space of time by him not deserting you.—Huntsville (Tex.) Post-Item.

The Origin of a Miserable Joke.

Confucius had just met William Penn at one of Cleopatra's 5 o'clock teas. "William Penn?" he said. "William Penn? Seems to me I have heard of you, sir."

"Yes," said Penn, with a pleased smile. "I am the man who was knighted by the sword."

"Ah, yes!" said Confucius. "You are also the man who invented sleep, are you not?"

"No," said Penn; "I founded Philadelphia."

"Oh, yes," said Confucius. "I knew it was something of that kind."—Success Magazine.

The Important Item.

He—Here is a thrilling account of the way in which that daring woman climbed to the top of a mountain which is five miles high. Wonderful, isn't it? She—Yes. What did she wear?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Well Bred.

Plot and Counterplot.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Jim Pickering and Marcia Kyle were as popular a duo as ever graced a city social set. When they became engaged the girls all said "How lovely!" and the men said "A pair of bricks." It was to be expected that they would be married in fine style and would receive a multitude of presents. They decided, however, to confine their invitations to their intimate friends and make an old fashioned jollification of it. Even this narrow limit took in some two hundred people, but there were plans among those invited to have a rare time. It was proposed by one group to kidnap the bride and groom and take them far out of their way on their wedding trip. Another group planned to give them what is called in the country a charivari—that is, to collect under their windows and serenade them with all kinds of discordant music. Another feature was to follow them tooting horns.

But the groom and bride were also busy planning. How should they escape all these traps set for them and turn the laugh on the would be trappers? Many plans were discussed, but laid aside as impracticable. One was to procure an automobile with an experienced chauffeur to distance their pursuers. Another was to hide somewhere in the house till the guests, weary of hunting for them, would give up the attempt to find them. No confidence was placed in being able to lose their pursuers on the road, and, as to hiding in a house with 200 eager searchers to turn it inside out, such a scheme was manifestly impossible.

There was one avenue of escape, which they did not hit upon till the last moment, though it was the simplest and most practicable of all. Fortunately for them they thought of it in time to put it into practice.

"The guests were met, the feast was set." Two hundred young men and women—there was not an old person among them except from the immediate families of the bride and groom—witnessed the ceremony, many of them on tiptoe of excitement, to put in practice some plan by which to turn the wedding night into a carnival. Then there were the usual kisses for the bride and groom from members of their respective families, after which the boys and girls passed before them, offering their congratulations. After this came the drinking of the health of the bride in the supper room and lastly the usual disappearance up stairs of the newly married couple to don traveling suits preparatory to being driven to the station.

The hour was 10 o'clock at night. The groom's dressing room was on the top floor of the house, the bride's on the next floor below. When the bride was ready she mounted to the floor above, where the groom awaited her. Together they ran up a ladder-way to the scuttle, pushed it aside and stood on the roof. The house was in a block of houses of nearly equal height. Pickering jumped down over the coping and handed down his bride, and together they ran over half a dozen roofs, vainly trying to find an open scuttle, till they reached the seventh house away.

Now, there had been frequent robberies of late in that part of the city, and people were on the lookout for thieves. Hearing footsteps on his roof, an occupant of one of the houses the couple passed over telephoned for the police, and in less than three minutes a patrol wagon full of cops drove up to the front door in question. Being informed that robbers were on the roof who would doubtless seek an egress through one of the houses, the block was surrounded. A policeman went into each of the houses and upstairs to receive the thieves when they should come through the scuttle. The consequence was that when the wedding pair stepped down on to the top floor of the house they entered, intending to explain matters to the occupants and then secure their indulgence and co-operation, they walked into the arms of a policeman.

A policeman is a matter of fact individual, utterly devoid of humor, sympathy or any of the attributes required on this occasion. Pickering explained. He told the cop what a fine joke they were playing—all to no purpose. They were informed that they could tell their story to the sergeant at the desk at the station. There was but one alternative—to request to be taken back to the house from which they had escaped. Pickering suggested this course to his bride.

"What! Go back there to be laughed at! Never!"

"We'll have to pass our bridal night in a cell."

"I'll pass it in a fiery furnace rather than face that crowd in charge of a policeman."

The terror of it was in riding to the station in the open patrol wagon. They got there without being recognized. Pickering told his story to the sergeant and was informed that he must not only be identified as a respectable person, but prove that he had just been married. The bride kept her pluck till they were about to be marched to separate cells, then gave in.

Fortunately an inspector came into the office at this time, and he agreed that if Pickering would bring a single witness from the house where the wedding party was assembled to corroborate his story he would let the pair go. Pickering telephoned for his wife's father, and in five minutes after his arrival the now really happy pair were driving like mad for a train.

THE SWORDFISH.

Overlord of the Sea and the Daintiest Feeder That Swims.

The swordfish is the overlord of the sea. Neither the whale, the shark nor any other giant of the deep can conquer him in private fight or public brawl. Nevertheless he is peaceful in the main and seeks the simple life, amusing himself often with worldwide travel and always with delicate gustatory joys. He is the daintiest feeder that swims, always kills his own game and thereby insures its freshness, wherefore his flesh is a delight to the palate of mankind and wherefore, again, men go forth to kill him for market and thereby at times fall upon adventures that make the hunting of tigers and the shooting of grizzlies pale into pastimes for the weary weakling.

For the bold swordfish is still hunted in mode as primitive as that the Eskimo uses to kill the stupid whale, and often the sting of the harpoon changes this luxurious ocean gastronomie into a raging water devil, quick to perceive his advantage, charging with the speed of a bullet and the accuracy of a swordsman up against the lone fisherman in the dory who tries to bring him to gaff. Then must the fisherman measure with exactness the lunge of the monster, avoid it by a marvel of nice sidestepping in a plunging dory, or he will be spitted like a lark.—William Inglis in Harper's Weekly.

CHANCES IN GAMBLING.

The Rule of the Unexpected at the Tables in Monte Carlo.

There are systems, some will say, that will defeat the bank at Monte Carlo. I have not found one. Two factors settle all systems. One is the bank's limit, which prevents the doubling system so often advocated; the second, the extraordinary idiosyncrasies of chance. Red or black will often run in long series. I saw fifteen reds come up in succession on one occasion, seventeen uneven numbers in an unbroken series on another. One evening on a losing day I was playing on the first six numbers and persistently for some hours the last twelve numbers invariably turned up. Once I saw 21 come up four times in succession when mathematically it should have taken 144 coups to make it show that number of times, and still more strange that on this occasion each time it came up a gentleman had staked the limit on the number—namely, 180 francs—winning in ten minutes something over 24,000 francs. One readily sees by these instances the unexpected very often happens—in fact, more often than that not—Arthur Hewitt in Bohemian Magazine.

The Hog.

No other animal has been more modified by civilization and none reverts more quickly to the original wild type than the hog. Three generations of running wild suffice to turn the smooth, round, short snouted razor-back or hazel splitter thin, lank, leggy, lop eared, snarl snouted, an Ishmael in bristles, running like a deer. If running be possible, fighting as only a wild hog can fight when battle is imperative. The tusks, which have been half obliterated in the process of civilization, get back size and strength. At a year old they are formidable, at two murderous, at three or five more deadly than a sword. They afford a certain index of age up to six years, but are commonly broken in fights long before that time. Wild boars are very ill tempered and when worsted in fighting often revenge themselves by ripping the bark from trees as high as they can reach.

Her Exercise.

Many readers think insufficient exercise is responsible for worrying moods. "Dare I whisper it?" writes one correspondent. "Though I am a married woman, with two bonnie babies, when my worries and temper prove too much for me I shut myself up in my room and dance a wild Scotch reel. I always did it when I got in a temper as a child as a sort of vent to my feelings, and I do it still and probably shall continue to do so as long as I'm sufficiently energetic."

Certainly a Scotch reel ought to provide enough exercise to exorcise any demon of worry if lack of exercise is the cause of it.—Home Chat.

Describing the Climate.

"Is your climate changeable?" asked the stranger.
 "Not very," answered Farmer Corn-tassel. "It keeps shifting around a little till it strikes a kind of weather nobody likes; then it sticks."—Washington Star.

Just Like Her.

Hewitt—I didn't know that you lived on the first floor. I understood your wife to say that you lived on the second floor. Jewett—If you knew my wife you would know that she always stretches a story.—Exchange.

They Married.

Trotter (who has been abroad)—So Mand and Charlie finally married? Miss Homer—Yes. Trotter—I suppose they are happy. Miss Homer—Undoubtedly; they each married some one else.—Chicago News.

What do we live for if not to make life less difficult to each other?—George Elliot.

A Story of Twins.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

"They say, Charlie, that the love between twins is something far beyond ordinary fraternal affection—that a man will suffer any amount for his twin. You have a twin brother, so you ought to know if this is true. How is it?"

"You mean suffer things willingly?" "Of course. Why do you ask that?" "Well, sometimes a fellow will suffer for another when he doesn't want to."

"I don't understand you." "It's this way: I'm fond of Dan just as you say twins are, but I want you to understand one thing—the next time Dan gets sick and has to go to a hospital I propose to let the doctors and the nurses take care of him. As for going to him with pig's feet or jelly or any other good things, I'm not going to do it. He can get on without me if he is my twin brother."

"Something unpleasant must have happened while Dan was in the hospital last summer."

"Something happened! I should smile!"

"Well, smile then; don't look as if you'd like to carve somebody and tell me about it."

"Well, not long after the surgeons had been carving Dan I went to see him. The door of the hospital being open, I walked in, expecting to see a janitor or somebody connected with the institution who'd show me to Dan's room. Nobody being around just then, I walked to the rear of the building, looking this way and that for an attendant, but not finding any I stopped and exclaimed to myself:

"Well, I'll be jingled!" "Suddenly I heard a woman's voice: 'Heavens! There's my patient walking about delicious!' There was a smash of crockery, and, turning, I saw a nurse looking at me with horror, a heap of broken dishes at her feet, which she had just dropped from a tray. Another nurse came out of a door and, seeing me, seemed to recognize me, though I'd never seen her before, and the two made a dive for me."

"I'm a peaceable fellow and can be led like a lamb, especially by a woman or even two women if they are pretty, and both of these were, but I'll be jingled if I could stand having each one of them seize me by a wrist and attempt to force me up a stairway. I resisted. One of them stepped to an electric button and pressed it. It must have sounded a general alarm, for a man attendant came from one direction and another from another, and the nurse who'd dropped the dishes said:

"Take him up to No. 14. When I came down to get his dinner he got up, dressed and came downstairs. I'll get discharged for this. Heavens! There comes the house surgeon! Put him in here!"

"Do you know, those two duffers just picked me up and hustled me into a room close by, while I kicked and struck out like a maniac. They put me on a bed, and one of them held me down by main force while the other rushed out for something. The nurse—my nurse, you know—poured some funny tasting stuff down my throat, and in a few minutes the man who had gone out came back with a chunk of ice and put it at the top of my head. Then they got hot water bags and put 'em to my feet, and all stood round looking scared to death."

"Well, I was getting madder and madder every minute. 'Now, look a-here,' I shrieked, 'you just let me up or when I do get out of this I'll murder every mother's son or daughter of you!'"

"Give him another dose, Miss Walker," said one of the men.

"Miss Walker—my nurse, you know—she poured out another dose, and just as she was about to put it down my throat I made a big effort, freed one of my fists and sent the glass and contents flying toward the ceiling."

"Mercy me!" cried my nurse. "Why did I ever leave him? It's a sure case of brain fever!"

"Just at that moment something popped into my head. I wondered why I hadn't thought of it before. They had mistaken me for Dan."

"See here, you people, you're backing up the wrong tree, aren't you? Do you think I'm Dan Malone?"

"'Funny,' remarked one of the men, 'how people who are off their heads always think they're some one else.'"

"You blankety blank fools! You go to Dan's room and see if you don't find him there. I'm his twin brother. I came to see him."

"The two nurses began to look at each other, the two men pricked up their ears, and then my nurse said to the other one:

"Run up and see."

"So she did and in a minute came back into the room with a grin on her face that looked like the cat that ate the canary."

"He's safe in bed," she giggled. "Thank heaven!" sobbed my nurse, and she fell over in the other one's arms. When she came to herself she turned to me and said: 'I ask a thousand pardons. I shall rely on your magnanimity to help us keep this secret.'"

"Not much," I replied, 'not without compensation.'

"I'm only a poor nurse," she pleaded. 'I can't pay anything.'

"Yes, you can," I said. 'You can pay all I ask. You put your lily white arms around my neck and give me one big long kiss right on the lips and I'm mum as an oyster.'

"Did she do it?"

"You bet."

OSCAR COX.

A MEMORY OF THE PAST.

The Unalloyed Joy That Came With the Little Red Scarf.

"I was wondering the other day what one thing had given me the most pleasure in the world," said the village deacon. "I had to go back a long ways—clear back into the blessed Santa Claus days—but I recalled it. It was a scarf I found in my stocking one bright Christmas morning. I got a red one, and my brother got a blue one. I was a mighty proud boy that morning as I trudged downtown with that red scarf around my neck. I wore it every day until the birds began to sing in the springtime and the kids were hunting up their marbles. I don't now remember who gave it to me for what became of it, but I do know that the memory of it still clings like a benediction."

"Since the days of that little red scarf I have had things of far more intrinsic value. I have worn lodge emblems of high degree; I have had a gold watch and chain; I once had a pair of shoes that cost $5 and a necktie that cost twice as much as the little red scarf. Nay, more, I once tackled a plug hat. But among these things do I recall none that gave me such genuine and unalloyed pleasure, such a swelled up feeling, as did that little red scarf way back in the days when the wolf sat out in the road and howled. 'Tis the little red scarf days that stir the memory with 'It might have been.'"—Osborn (Kan.) Farmer.

PLAIN JOHN SMITH.

How His Name Changes In Various Parts of the World.

John Smith—plain John Smith—is not very high sounding; it does not suggest aristocracy; it is not the name of any hero in die away novels, and yet it is good, strong and honest. Transferred to other languages, it seems to climb the ladder of respectability. Thus in Latin it is Johannes Smithus; the Italian smooths it off into Giovanni Smithi; the Spaniards render it Juan Smithus; the Dutchman adopts it as Hans Schmidt; the French flatten it out into Jean Smeet, and the Russian sneezes and barks Jonoff Smithowski. When John Smith gets into the tea trade in Canton he becomes Jovan Shiamuit; if he clambers about Mount Hecla, the Icelanders say he is Jahnne Smithson; if he trades among the Tuscaroras he becomes Ton Qa Smithia; in Poland he is known as Ivan Schmittweisk; should he wander among the Welsh mountains they talk of Jibon Schmidt; when he goes to Mexico he is booked as Jontli F'Smitti; if of classic turn and he lingers among Greek ruins he turns to Iohn Smnikton, and in Turkey he is utterly disguised as Yoe Seef.—Phrenological Journal.

Mystery of a Cookbook.

Sombody mentioned cookbooks. "It takes a good deal to make me wonder," said the publisher, "but I received a jolt in the culinary line the other day that set me thinking. In looking over the manuscript of a cookbook that had been submitted for our approval I was struck by this introduction to many of the recipes, 'Good for boarding house table.'"

"Now, why that discrimination? Isn't anything that is good enough for a boarding house table good enough for any other table, and isn't anything that is good enough for any other table good enough for a boarding house table? Judging by the way those particular recipes read, they may result in some rather tasty dishes. Then why limit them to boarding houses?"—New York Globe.

His Successor.

Shortly after the death of one of England's greatest poets a devoted admirer of his visited the little Westmorland villages where the poet had lived and died to gaze reverently at his house, the little church and at some of his favorite haunts where some of his immortal poems were composed.

Seeing an old man a native of the village, the stranger entered into conversation with him, remarking sadly on the death of the poet, to which the old man answered kindly and encouragingly:

"Aye, aye, still I mak' na doob but t' wife 'll carry the business on."

Brief and Pithy.

An American law journal has quoted the charge to a jury delivered by a certain Judge Donovan as the shortest on record. The judge said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, if you believe the plaintiff find a verdict for plaintiff and fix the amount. If you believe the defendant find a verdict for defendant. Follow the officer."

But an English periodical caps this brief charge by quoting a shorter one delivered by Commissioner Kerr. He said to a jury:

"That man says prisoner robbed him. The prisoner says he didn't. You settle it."

Plagiarism.

At the literary club a sympathetic crowd surrounded the humorist, whose house had been robbed.

"They cleaned out everything," said the man—"everything, but, thank goodness, they didn't swipe from my desk the manuscript column of jokes for next week's paper."

"Perhaps they knew," suggested a somnolent cynic, "that the jokes had already been swiped."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Liberality.

Little Jimmie, who had just received a box of mixed candy, passed it around to treat the family, saying: "Help yourself to all the chocolates you want. I don't like them."—Exchange.

DEPAUW NEWS

AUDIENCE WAS PLEASED NO NEED FOR A COLLEGE

GERTRUDE MILLER COMPANY APPEARS ON LECTURE COURSE

ORGANIZATION WAS HIGH CLASS

The Gertrude Miller Concert Company appeared before an audience composed mostly of college people, in Meharry Hall last night. The personnel of the company included Miss Gertrude Goodwin Miller, reader; Gaylord Yost, violinist; Miss Bertha Allgower, soprano, and Johann Mayer, pianist.

The company seemed to have solved the problem of pleasing its audience without stooping to the mediocre. All of the artists were well received each answering to an encore.

It was Miss Miller who pleased the audience most. The depth and richness of her voice lent itself well to the interpretation of masculine characters, while her portrayal of women, and especially of the unconventional girl, was especially good. She answered several encores.

The violinist who was probably the greatest artist on the program was secluded a good deal and did not appear alone but once.

This was the second number in the university lecture course series. The next number will be a lecture by De Witt Miller on December 15.

RABBIT HUNT IS NEXT

CELEBRATION OF SEASON'S CAMPAIGN AND HONOR TO THE GRIDIRON WARRIORS.

DEFINITE PLANS SOON MADE

"I am glad there is going to be a rabbit hunt," said Dr. Seaman some days ago and from all indications it looks as though DePauw students are going to arouse themselves from the usual after-season lethargy to honor their football men.

As the plans take definite shape there will be little, if any, material change made in the project as outlined in these columns some days ago.

The affair will take on a barbecue nature, at which function the football heroes will be given an ovation.

One thing against the project is the warm weather which is not too conducive to hunting.

MUSIC AND ART

Miss Mary Barrett left today for her home in Delaware, Ohio, to spend a week.

Quite a number of music and art students joined the excursion to Crawfordsville yesterday and enthusiastically over the athletic interests. Nearly all of their lessons had been arranged for in advance, and the practice was omitted.

As by its printed bulletin the school of music will have the Thanksgiving recess of the last half of next week November 26 to 28. Individual arrangements will be made by the teachers for students who need to leave as early as noon of the 25th.

To Convention.

Chester Jewett and Clyde Randel leave for Pittsburg Sunday morning where they will attend the National convention of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. A special train will be made up at St. Louis and the boys will join the party at Indianapolis. The convention will be in session all of next week.

SOME MEN ARE BETTER OFF WITHOUT FOUR YEARS OF STUDY SAYS KLEINSMID

HE DIFFERS WITH SPENCER

Prof. Kleinsmid is not an unqualified believer in promiscuous collegiate education. He laments the fact that it is becoming the fashion for every Tom, Dick and Harry to go to college regardless of natural characteristics and mental capacities. He recently gave expression to this sentiment to his class in the Philosophy of Education in something like the following words:

"Why, bless your heart, there are young men and women going to college who have no more business there than I have in an emperor's chair. A good many of them find this out during the first term and quit. There is always a wait at the end of the first term because seventy-five students leave school." (Here the professor shook his head knowingly.) "Why," he continued, "we should be better off, and they would be better off, if a hundred and fifty left instead of seventy-five."

"There are honorable positions calling to them and demanding their services now. What need to wait four years? Books are not the only things that make for culture. It is just as good to study men and things as it is to study books. I am not a believer in the Spencerian idea that a college graduate should always keep his text books before him and continually pursue his studies, that is, unless his particular work calls for it. I believe in the cultural value of the knowledge of men and things."

LAWRENCE MADE CAPTAIN

THE "D" MEN CHOOSE THE LEADER OF METHODIST FOOTBALL MEN FOR '09

ELECTION WAS HELD YESTERDAY

Immediately after the game at Wabash yesterday afternoon, the "D" men went into an election and selected Chester Lawrence, DePauw's center, as the Methodist gridiron leader for the 1909 season. Lawrence has been playing a great game of ball since he entered school. He has been on the team for three years, he having no trouble in making his "D" in his freshman year.

He was graduated from the Shortridge high school with the class of '06 and was a favorite on the blue and white team while in school there. He is very popular with the men on the team and the election yesterday was almost unanimous.

And said it is yet true it is, and said it is that true it is that the city officials of Greencastle truckle to the Water Works Company, rather than to the rights of the people, in that said officials do not force said Water Works Company to install drinking fountains for man as well as beast, as is set forth in the contract. The horse troughs to furnish drinking water to the people are a dirty, disease breeding disgrace to the city.

"I myself belong to the former class," he said. "I am a tariff thief and I have a license to steal." Referring to the assertion that those asking that the tariff schedules should remain as they are or should be changed only in the way of an increase are much in evidence at the hearings in progress, and that the tariff reformer so called does not appear or is silent, Mr. Adams says: "You, my dear Mr. McCall, know perfectly well the reason of this. These first referred to are directly and peculiarly interested, and as such, naturally divided into two classes. Speaking as to the fashion of men, they are either thieves or hogs. I myself belong to the former class. I am a tariff thief and I have a license to steal. It bears the broad seal of the United States, is known as the Dingley tariff.

"I stole under it yesterday; I am stealing under it today; I promise to steal under it tomorrow. The wise call it 'beneficiary.' The Government has forced me into this position, and I both do and shall take full advantage of it. I am, therefore, a tariff thief with a license to steal, and what are you going to do about it?"

"The other class come under the hog category. That is, they rush squealing and struggling to the great Washington protection trough and with all four feet in it they proceed to gobble the feed. Well acquainted with those of this class, you know their attitude and their utterances. It is useless for me to dilate upon either. To this class I do not belong. I am simply a tariff thief, because as I have said, with a license to steal. But, on the other hand, I am also a tariff reformer. I would like to see every protective schedule swept out of existence, my own included. Meanwhile what inducement have I to go to Washington on a public mission of this sort? A mere citizen. I represent no one.

"If I went I would receive from the committee scarcely a respectful hearing. If any hearing at all; and I would have to be at considerable expense, both of my money and of my time, the last of which I can least afford. My position in these respects is exactly the position of myriads of others, and then they say we do not exist.

"Meanwhile, I do know this. On every occasion when of late I have addressed an audience any reference to 'protection run mad' or to tariff as the 'mother of trusts,' has invariably elicited a more spontaneous response than any other utterance I could make.

"This feeling is abroad, becoming stronger, and will certainly sooner or later be in evidence at the polls. Meanwhile, the tens of thousands of persons who feel in that way, like myself, cannot afford either the time or more frequently the money to go to Washington to ask to be heard before a committee which they know in advance is both prejudiced and packed against them.

"I have in this letter set forth the situation, as far as the revision of the tariff is concerned, as it exists within your personal knowledge and my personal knowledge. You are welcome to make such use of it before the committee or elsewhere as you see fit. I should have no objection even, to seeing it in print. Meanwhile, have it well understood that my position is exactly the position of tens of thousands of others scattered throughout the country. To ask us to put aside our business affairs, and at our own expense go to Washington on a desperate mission is asking a little too much, whether the demand comes from the committee or from a President-elect."

"I suppose you carry a memento of some sort in that handsome locket of yours?"

"Yes; it is a lock of my husband's hair."

"But your husband is alive."

"Yes, but his hair is all gone."—Pick-Me-Up.

THE TARIFF IS A THIEF

Charles Francis Adams Talks Pointedly of Tariff Taxation and Depicts The Subject so Vividly That No Mistakes are Possible in Assimilating His Meaning.

DECISION WILL BE AT POLLS

Charles Francis Adams, the Boston publicist and former president of the Union Pacific Railroad, has sent to Representative Samuel W. McCall, of the Committee on Ways and Means, the hottest communication with which that body has been favored so far. Mr. Adams takes as his text the suggestion of William H. Taft that persons who desire a revision of the tariff in the direction of a reduction should make themselves heard in Washington. Mr. Adams writes for this class a sweeping indictment of the men who appear before the committee asking for increase of duties or the maintenance of those existing. They divide into two classes, he says, and are either thieves or hogs.

"I myself belong to the former class," he said. "I am a tariff thief and I have a license to steal." Referring to the assertion that those asking that the tariff schedules should remain as they are or should be changed only in the way of an increase are much in evidence at the hearings in progress, and that the tariff reformer so called does not appear or is silent, Mr. Adams says: "You, my dear Mr. McCall, know perfectly well the reason of this. ## HE PREFERS PRIVATE LIFE

William Jennings Bryan Declares That He Has no Desire to be a Candidate Again, He Would Not Decline a Call to Champion the Right.

NO FORECAST OF THE FUTURE

A special from San Antonio, Texas says:

William Jennings and Mrs. Bryan arrived in San Antonio this morning and spent the day here.

Mr. Bryan was given an ovation at the depot by hundreds of people, immediately after breakfast he left in an auto for a duck hunt at a lake fifteen miles from here. Sport proved good, and by 1 o'clock he had killed the limit—twenty-five ducks. He returned to the city and in the afternoon made a brief non-political address.

In an interview regarding his future plans he said: "I would much prefer to retire to private life, and I hope that four years hence circumstances will not be such as to force me into the campaign. But if circumstances should demand me to battle, battle I will.

"The burden carried by the candidate is heavy, but no heavier than that carried by an officeholder. I do not desire to ever be a candidate for office again, but it is difficult matter to make a rule for the future. What the plans will be four years from now I am unable to say. The newspapers are the ones making the plans but whether or not they will be accepted by the Democratic party is a matter of conjecture. The Democratic party is very much alive and will be in the fight at the next presidential election. Further than this I do not care to say more on the subject of politics at this time."

In answer to the direct question, "Will you run for the presidency again if conditions arise to warrant it?" Mr. Bryan to-night dictated the following statements:

"My friends do not require me to pre-judge the future, and I shall not take the advice of my opponents on this subject. I shall continue to write and speak in defense of things which I believe to be good for the American people. I hope it may never become necessary to run for an office again, but I will not attempt to decide that question until the time comes to act. I do not see any necessity to say more on the subject."

Regarding the future of the Democratic party, he said: "I am not at all discouraged as to the future of the Democratic party. There must be a Democratic party in every country, and I want our party to be Democratic, and I have no doubt that the country will see the necessity for the adoption of the reforms advocated by the Democratic party. It is already a great educational force, and I have no doubt that conditions will so indicate the party as to make the voters turn to it as the best instrument for the accomplishment of the necessary reforms."

"Will you allow yourself to be elected United States Senator from Nebraska?" he was asked.

"They do not elect a Senator this year," he said with a smile.

"But they do two years from now?"

"You have my statement regarding my future so far as I care to say," and he smilingly refused to discuss the subject further, so far as his own position is concerned.

Mr. Bryan left for Corpus Christi to-night to attend the Deep Waterways convention. He will remain there several days, enjoying a hunt. From there he goes to Mexico for two weeks. He will then return to Galveston, where he will hunt ducks for four weeks.

"Hobson's Choice."

"There is an egg for breakfast," remarked a landlady to her lodger.

"Which do you prefer?"

"Prefer?" repeated the latter.

"Where's the preference when you only offer an egg?"

"Why, you can have an egg or nothing!" was the sharp reply.—London Scraps.
