Brothers, husbands and wives and whole families were included. Others are to be received next Sunday, children at the Sunday school service and transfers will be called at the church service. ## NEGRO IN NEW CONFESSION PLEADS GUILTY

Indianapolis, April 23.—William Ray, 19 year old negro slayer of Martha Huff, 14 years old, whose body was found in Eagle creek late Tuesday afternoon, after grueling questioning by detectives, admitted in a second statement yesterday afternoon that he stabbed the girl because he wanted to silence her screams. He further admitted that a statement in his original confession that he murdered her during a dispute about the return of a $2 bill he had given her was untrue. The negro confessed that he criminally attacked the girl. He said he stabbed her when she screamed and fought him as he started to attack her a second time.

Ray entered a plea of guilty when arraigned before Judge Pritchard in City Court yesterday. He was held to the grand jury on a charge of murder without bond. Ray's trial will be held as soon as possible.

Find Natural Purple Dye. A shellfish exists on the Pacific coast of Costa Rica from which a specially fine purple color is obtained and used for dyeing silk thread. A report received by the department of commerce states the discovery of this natural dye came to light through an inquiry from Guatemala, where some silk thread imported from Costa Rica contained a good purple.

The dyers, who apparently are limited to a few old persons, take the thread to the shore, where the shellfish abound, and dye it there. The person who picks up a shell blows his breath upon it, whereupon a few drops of greenish liquid ooze out. This liquid is collected in an open clam shell or other small container. After a sufficient quantity has been collected the thread is passed through it. The thread soon afterward, on exposure to the sunlight, assumes a beautiful purple color, which is absolutely fast.

In ancient days it is believed this dye was called "Tyrian purple," and was even then so rare that it was reserved for royalty.

GOSH! IT'S STILL TOO COLD

BELOVED GOLF CAME FIRST

Little Things Like Marital Ties and the Demands of Business Didn't Worry These Devotees.

A golfer's wife had just told her husband that she intended to leave him for ever, not because he was a golfer, but for some other reason.

"Will nothing alter your decision? Will nothing induce you to stay?" he asked.

The wife was obstinate. "Well," he said, "it is a terrible shock, but while you are packing I think I will go out on the lawn and do a little putting."

This is reminiscent of a story of one of the heroes of golf, an Edinburgh innkeeper, who lived a hundred years ago or thereabouts. He was so devoted to the game that he started playing at dawn and was seen at night putting on the greens by the light of a candle. At last his wife applied for a separation on the ground that her husband was not attending to his business.

He went to the court, admitted the impeachment, and said: "She can have all I got if she will give me so much a week to buy golf balls. She can look after the business!"

AT WORK ON BIG PROBLEMS

Grandson of Huxley Seeking, Among Other Things, the Secret of Perpetual Youth.

The secret of perpetual youth and renewed vigor, the determination of sex and the curing of certain human diseases are some of the problems which it seems are being solved in the laboratories at Oxford, England, by Julian Huxley, grandson of the famous biologist, Thomas Henry Huxley.

The actual achievements included the change of tadpoles into frogs within three weeks; the production of a new sort of creature; the restoration of a flatworm to youth, and the control of the sex of frogs' eggs, producing 90 per cent of males at the will of the experimenter.

The Duffy Mail, which makes this news public, comments in an editorial on the great possibilities of Julian Huxley's discovery and says: "We seem to be nearer some of the hardest and most enthralling mysteries of life."

Historical Parks Planned.

Sites of historical trails, camps and battle grounds in North Dakota will be marked by parks and monuments, according to the plans of patriotic organizations.

Dr. Melvin B. Gilmore, curator of the North Dakota Historical society, recently announced the acquisition of additional tracts made famous by pioneering expeditions. The sites have been purchased by communities in which they are located and the historical society has been made trustee for them. This procedure will be followed by communities as rapidly as new sites are found to be of unusual value historically. Eventually each park will contain a plot of ground in which only the native crops, plants and grasses of the Indians will be grown. It is planned also to provide each with specimens of animals.

He Spoke With Feeling.

It was the good fortune of an automobile tourist to have his machine break down in front of a farm the owner of which, says Forester, and mented his income by serving good board to persons who fled the city in summer.

"Fine scenery here," remarked the motorist as the farmer obligingly helped him on the repairs. "It is just what I need to be attractive."

"Yes," was the reply. "It might be worse."

"I don't suppose you have any wolves round here?"

"No, not exactly," chuckled the farmer, "but if you want to see the next best thing just stay here till I open the dining-room doors."

Her Chance.

Seven-year-old John had just begun to trade at school. His pencils, pens, paints, and even tablets are traded for all sorts of trifles. His sister, much disturbed, complained to the family, and one after another all except his aunt reproved him. He smiled, seemingly not hearing while they talked.

And after they were through he called his aunt to one side. "Say, do you need a bottle of ink?" he asked. "I've got a chance to trade for one for a pencil, and you've got about six pencils on your desk in there."—Indianapolis News.

Modern Poetry of Motion.

The orchestra softly played "Kiss Me Again." She gazed into his eyes And breathed a sigh. "Your dancing is like a poem," She said. "Yes, yes, go on," he murmured. "An Amy Lowell poem; The feet Are all mixed up," She answered. —Record.

SEA SCAVENGER FRIEND OF MAN

Expert Says Sharks Can Supply Good Food and Fine Leather.

FLESH HAS DELICATE FLAVOR

Scientist Gives Some Interesting Information About Fish Which Seems to Have Been Grossly Libeled—Particular About Food.

New York.—From time immemorial the shark has been considered as an enemy to man and a scavenger of the sea. He has been pictured as the cannibal of the deep, and in fiction has been painted as the monster who lurks about the ill-fated ship in order to devour the unfortunate who may have met their death in a gale or on the reef. We, therefore, for generations have cherished an antipathy for this creature of the sea and have been very willing to accept as fact all of these stories, never stopping to consider that perhaps after all the shark might have a few points in his favor.

To begin with, the shark does not live exclusively on the flesh of man, says Dr. Allen Rogers of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, in the current number of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry of the American Chemical society. In fact, there are only a few species who would eat human flesh, even if it were possible for them to secure it. The principal species considered a man eater, the tiger shark, probably has seldom had the pleasure of this delicacy. Sharks, like all other fish, live on the smaller fish, thus upholding the proverb that the big fish eat the little ones.

Sharks Devour Food Fish.

Sharks travel in schools or singly and are found most abundant where food fish are plentiful. They are especially fond of the mullet, menhaden, mackerel and sea trout. Thus it will be seen that they are migratory and at various seasons are found in different waters. They are naturally warm-water fish, which accounts for the large number to be found in the Gulf of Mexico, along the coast of Florida and the West Indies. Being rapid and powerful swimmers, they often follow ships for hundreds of miles, picking up food as it is thrown over the side of the vessel. Thus their diet at such times is not unlike that of our domestic hog and poultry. It is claimed by fisher folk that the shark will not eat unsound food, which shows him even more particular than our friend the porker. Why, then, if he is so clean in his habits of life, should we discriminate against him?

The bureau of fisheries for several years has endeavored to interest the people in this country in using shark meat as an edible product, with a certain amount of success. In fact, they species of shark known as the dog fish is being canned in large quantities and sold under the name of gray fish. Certain fisheries on the New England coast are removing the head, tail and fins and selling the product in Boston and New York as deep-sea sword fish.

Italians Eat 'Em.

In Boston, also shark meat is being sold as such to the Italian trade, who appreciate its food value and enjoy its delicate flavor. Why, then, should we not take a lesson from the Italians and acquire the shark-eating habit?

For the last five or six years the writer has been interested in developing a method for converting shark skins into a merchantable leather. As a result of this work several processes have been devised which have been assigned to a company operating fisheries in the south.

A conservative estimate indicates that for a catch of 2,000 sharks daily, at an average weight of 200 pounds, there would be 400,000 pounds of fish. As at least 50 per cent could be used for human consumption, we would have 200,000 pounds daily, or 73,000,000 pounds annually. Assuming that the market price could be set at 10 cents, we have a saving of $7,300,000.

FAVOR TO KINGS IRKS SWISS

Waiver of Customs Rules at Frontier Sharply Criticized by Newspapers.

Geneva, Switzerland.—An order issued to the troops and customs officials regarding the Swiss-German frontier that if the former kings of Bavaria and Wuertemberg and the former grand duke of Baden desire to enter Switzerland with their suites all frontier formalities must be waived in their favor is causing considerable discussion in the Swiss newspapers. The order says the former monarchs and the one-time grand duke may come into Switzerland without being subjected to the usual procedure at the frontier.

One of the newspapers in criticizing the order asks whether the Swiss government is democratic or monarchistic.

WHY
Man Is Not Master in the Natural World

That man is only partially master in the natural world, and that whenever he tries to change the natural order of things he suffers for it, was brought out by Prof. Alessandro Ghigi in his inaugural address at the University of Ferrara.

"Man," he said, "has not found it possible either to change the laws that govern the general economy of nature or to suppress certain classes of beings, for it is true that the cultivation of useful plants and the rearing of domestic animals has multiplied a myriad of parasites of both. And man himself, if he no longer has to fight the lion and the tiger, is constantly battling against micro-organisms no less deadly than those great beasts."

"Biology, wisely applied, teaches us that whenever man has interfered with the harmony of a fauna, by introducing a new species or by suppressing an existing one, he has obtained good results only when he has taken into account the repercussions that this action might have upon all the other creatures, and he has run up against real disaster whenever he has failed to take it into account."

"The Americans, for instance, have waged efficacious war against noxious insects imported from other countries, by finding the natural enemies of these in their country of origin. This system of natural war has been systematized."

SURVIVAL OF OLD CUSTOM

Why Mr. Newlywed Invariably Turns to Kiss His Bride at Conclusion of Ceremony.

"Aw, can't they wait until they get home?" is what many a little page at his big sister's wedding has said at least to himself, when, at the conclusion of a ceremony, the happy man turned and kissed the bride. They kissed each other, of course, but it is he who turned.

No, little brother, they cannot wait. It is part of the game. This is a survival of a custom of ancient times when it preceded by a longer time the ceremony which it now ends.

In the days when public betrothals or espousals were the general practice, many an aspiring suitor did not have the wherewithal to endow his prospective bride with the ring which was supposed to complete the ceremony. However, a kiss duly performed before witnesses was considered sufficiently binding.

Who will blame these ancestors of ours if they came without rings then, or having the ring, demanded in addition the alternative, until the official seal reverted back to nature's own?

And who will blame the modern bridegroom if for lack of a ceremony of betrothal he has clung to his privilege and transferred it to his wedding day?

Why China Wants Newspapers.

During the last few years the demand for waste foreign magazines, pamphlets and newspapers has been very great in China among hawkers, who buy these periodicals and pay nearly one-third of what they cost originally. Their use is probably to make sales for sundries for the poorer classes of Chinese to wear in place of shoes.

If the waste magazines contain some war pictures they will be put to better use than the making of shoes. Chinese who are too poor to get an education and who can't read or write find the best way of getting some knowledge of world affairs through the medium of the pictures in foreign magazines.

Why Number Thirteen Is Feared.

The thirteen at table superstition, which has spread to thirteen of anything, is well-known. The origin of the prejudice against this number is usually supposed to be the fact that thirteen persons sat down at the Last Supper, after which occurred the tragic event of the Christian era. Hesiod says it is unlucky to sow corn on the thirteenth of the first month, and an old Norse legend says that the twelve great divinities were dining at Valhalla when Loki, the god of discord, appeared, and a quarrel with Balder occurred in which Balder, the god of peace, was killed.

Why Frost Injures Food.

An egg expands when it is frozen and breaks its shell. Apples contract so much that a full barrel will shrink until the top layer is a foot below the chine. When the frost is drawn out the apples assume their normal size and fill the barrel again. Certain varieties are not appreciably injured by being frozen if the frost is drawn out gradually. Apples will carry safely in a refrigerating car while the mercury is registering fully 20 degrees below zero. Potatoes, being so largely composed of water, are easily frozen. Once touched by frost they are ruined.

MARCH 25 WAS NEW YEAR'S

All the World Once Observed Day That as Beginning of the New Calendar.

New Year's day today? Not now, but formerly this was New Year's day in New York and throughout the Christian world, says the New York Sun of March 25. Until 1752 in England and America March 25 was recognized socially and officially as the beginning of the year. Leases were dated then, rents were paid and in many ways the day began a new year. To this day England, with her ingrained conservatism, calls March 26 one of the "quarter days," when house rents and land rents are paid and tenants come and go.

The three other "quarter days" are midsummer day, June 24; Michaelmas day, September 29, and Christmas day, December 25. These days correspond roughly to the beginnings of the seasons.

England and the American colonies lagged far behind the rest of the civilized world in dropping March 25 as New Year's day and adopting the more modern date, January 1. To call January 1 the more modern date is not strictly accurate, perhaps, since the ancient Romans observed the date as the beginning of the year. But in the later European countries the beginning of the spring was held to mark the beginning of the year from time immemorial until in the sixteenth century Pope Gregory XIII reformed the calendar and decreed that January 1 should thenceforth be observed universally as the beginning of the year.

The act of parliament for the change of style and for doing away with March 25 as the legally recognized New Year's day, provided that the legal year 1752 should commence not on March 25, as in former years, but on January 1. It was provided, further, that September 3, 1752, should be followed by September 14, thus dropping eleven days from the calendar. The change caused great commotion in England and was violently opposed in some quarters, especially among the ignorant.

These believed that they were being cheated out of eleven days of their lives. They made demonstrations in the street and at meetings against the statesmen who had been active in passing the act.

Another Guess at Sun's Age.

A new calculation of the age of the sun was made recently by M. Perout, who read a paper on the subject before the French Academy of Science. Here is his version in a nutshell: On the principle that the mean temperature of a star remains approximately equal to the surface temperature it had when first formed, and giving the sun an internal temperature of 12,000 degrees Centigrade, or double that of its surface, and calculating its mass to be 2 by 10,30 kilograms, the sun cannot have been formed more than between 2,500,000 and 6,000,000 years ago. A star with a surface temperature of 600,000 degrees Centigrade would have been formed from a nebula in 300 days and one with 6,000,000,000 degrees in seven hours.

On Detail.

Private Napoleon Booker Washington Simpson had obtained leave of absence to visit his buddy, who had been wounded and was in a nearby field hospital. He was stopped at the entrance by an army nurse, who asked him what he wanted.

"Has you got a dark complected man named Johnson what's been shot in his hospital?" he inquired.

The nurse replied that there was such a person there, adding, "But he's convalescing now."

"Ah beg yo' pardon?" said Nap perplexedly, scratching his wool.

"He's convalescing now," she repeated.

"Well," said Napoleon, "if yo' don't mind, I'll set right here and wait till he gets through."—The Home Sector.

Beyond Expression.

An elderly lady was questioning the ex-artilleryman. "And what was the most terrible sight you witnessed in the war?"

"Well, it was like this," replied the soldier. "We had just spotted a German machine-gun nest with about 12 enemy gunners that were holding up our advance. We located the nest and put the first shot right in the middle of the Jerries."

"How dreadful!" interrupted the old lady, "did it kill them all?"

"No'm," replied the soldier sadly, "it was a dud."—American Legion Weekly.

Tree Surgery.

Another new and growing work akin to forestry, is tree surgery. This was originated by an Ohio man, who now maintains a school to train his workers, all of whom find employment with the company at the satisfactory completion of the course. This work is interesting, scientific, well paid and gives a boy a wholesome out-of-door life.—Boys' Life.

Slight Complication.

"We must economize on our table," said young Mrs. Torkins.

"That should be easy enough."

"Yes. But it must be managed with a little discretion so that Charley won't spend all his money on luncheon downtown."

The Worrisome Ones.

"Well, granddad, you don't worry over your seventy-five years."

"No. Only over the last five."—Meg Henderson Platter (Munich).

STORM BOUND

By LOUISE HOFFMAN.
(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Gee! the wind's blowing 60 miles an hour and everything will be drifted full by morning," prophesied John Becklin as he came stamping into the kitchen after feeding the hens. "I thought I'd be blown away once or twice myself. I pity any one caught out in this storm tonight. Heard the 4:20 go up yet, mother?"

Mrs. Becklin, a remarkably trim, young looking woman to be the mother of such a stalwart looking son, was busy setting the table and alternately stirring creamed potatoes on the stove.

"No, John, I haven't heard a sound," she replied in a motherly tone. "But I thought I saw a sleigh with two come around the bend in the road a while ago. I've been watching everything more of it."

She went to the window again. It was just dusk.

"Oh, John!" she exclaimed. "There is some one trying to get through the drifts by the old barn. There, the horse is down."

John Becklin came to the window and peered out into the fast deepening gloom.

"Why, it looks as though there was a woman in the sleigh. Too bad they've been caught out in this. But the drifts are soft yet, and maybe they'll pull through. I wonder who they are? They must be strangers, or they wouldn't attempt to drive through that spot."

"Well, the horse is up," announced Mrs. Becklin with relief, "but they are trying to make him go ahead. The next plunge and the poor animal will only go down again. Even if they do manage to get through this bank, they can't go on in this blow. It would be sure death, with night coming on, and it's growing colder every minute. Oh, my! Mercy! I hope that poor woman isn't hurt."

She turned.

"Where are you going, John?" she questioned as he began putting on his things.

"I'm going to take down the bars so that man can come through the field. He was gone, and the mother watched with keen anxiety as he battled against the fierce wind and whirling snow. Once he turned his back to catch his breath. Twice he sank out of sight, but finally succeeded in reaching the two weary travelers."

John directed the strangers through the perilous drifts into the open field and up to their barn, where the hired man took charge of the almost exhausted animal.

Mrs. Becklin ran to the kitchen door and threw it as hospitably wide as the storm would allow to welcome the strangers.

"Come in, come in out of this wind," she invited cheerfully. "You must be nearly frozen."

"Fortunately we both escaped, but such an experience!" returned a sweet young voice, as the man, divested of his furs, came into the living room.

"Myra," he gasped, gazing straight into her clear gray middle-aged eyes. "Is it possible?"

"Wilbur," breathed Mrs. Becklin, scarcely believing her eyes. "I thought you were in the West. And this," she paused gazing at the pretty blue-eyed girl.

"Is my daughter, Una," he said briefly. "And this lad to whom we are indebted for our escape is—"

"My son," returned Myra.

After a moment's silence, "If it were not for the children, we might think time had almost stood still," he murmured.

Over delectable creamed potatoes, sliced pink ham, hot rolls and coffee, Wilbur Norcross told how the urge to come East had been too strong for him. In the fall he had bought a small farm at Fallsburgh. His sister kept house while Una taught school in the old Everet district about five miles distant.

Myra nodded. She had heard about a Norcross family moving into the village.

As the weather looked promising and as it was Friday night he had started out to drive Una home.

For three days the travelers were storm-bound in the mountains. It was impossible to shovel out roads until the wind abated. During this time a friendship and intimacy sprang up, which ripened into something warmer, and when the storm had ceased and the roads were open, Myra and Wilbur told the children the same old ever new story. Years ago they had quarreled because Myra refused to live in the country.

"Such a silly thing," laughed Myra happily, "because I live on a farm now and love it, even to being storm-bound and cut off from civilization."

"We'll make it a delightful binding for life," added Wilbur.

John looked at Una.

"I guess we have something to confess, too. It's a pretty short courtship, but—Cupid has been flinging his darts around so lively he has struck us squarely, too."

"The second edition, bound for life," murmured Wilbur. Then with boyish enthusiasm: "Let's make it a double wedding."

And so it happened that in a few short weeks the neighbors nodded their heads and joyously announced, "Spring's coming. The young will marry, but the old—well—they may. Sure sign."

CELESTE

By AGNES G. BROGAN.
(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

"I'm real glad you've come," said Mrs. Lawson, "it'll be so nice to have a good visit once more. Folks don't get to our corner of the world too often, an' you'll want to know what's happened to your old friends. I reckon we an' our houses look about the same as they used to before you went away. Ain't much progress in Landseer. You asked about Celeste an' those are the same words I says to her last time I got up as far as her place. You know it's awful inconvenient to get there, but Sam said he'd take me when he drove over with supplies, so I went. Celeste's gran'ma had died then, an' Celeste was alone in the little house her gran'ma left her under conditions that Celeste would go on livin' in it, an' keep the place like it was used to. I reckon it wasn't so much because she cared about losin' her legacy that Celeste kept on livin' there alone, but the gift has that kind of a conscience. A dyin' wish to her is an oath—it has to be kept."

"Course there was another condition to the will, which was that Celeste should go on livin' there only until she married and had a home of her own; there wasn't nothing binding against that. But land! the old lady felt pretty sure about having her place kept up. If ever sweetness was wasted on desert air it was Celeste's. There she sat in her gran'ma's faded parlor, glowin' like a rose, cheeks all pink, her eyes bright an' her hair soft and curly. "Celeste Robins," I says, "how do you manage to keep cheerful in all this lonesome waste?"

"I'm not exactly lonesome," she says. "I read an' sew an' play, an' drive my old horse Mollie. But I will admit, I often do wish for companionship."

"Well," says I, "Mr. Right will come along some day." As I said it I knew there was as much chance of anyone who would be Mr. Right to Celeste—findin' her in that buried corner—as there would of the president to drop in for afternoon tea.

"Oh, I didn't mean that particular kind of companionship," Celeste says, laughin'. "I just meant that it would be nice to have some pleasant person about to enjoy things with. There's so many things to enjoy," says Celeste; "the flowers in summer, and right now, even with all the snow about, there's the birds, who come to be fed and sit in rows on the red berry tree, and there are cookies to be baked for the schoolchildren," she says. "How they love to find me in my cutter at the bend of the road when they come home from school. Sometimes I drive the smallest ones home."

"I hope," I said, as a parting joke, "that Mr. Right will drop in soon an' surprise you."

"Alyplanes don't fly this weather," Celeste had laughed back. An' I looked up to see a blizzard gathering around me. All night that blizzard raged, while the thermometer went down below zero. No mail came in to Landseer that night, or went out, either; for the trains had been blocked in big drifts miles out, where even snowplows couldn't reach 'em."

But as the train didn't draw in, no whistle sounded. So, quicker than a careless wits, Celeste was at the telephone asking the station agent why; an' when she learned of the plight of those stranded people the girl pulled on her fur coat, tied her red hood and goes out in the darkness to harness Mollie to her cutter. An' when Mollie was ready for her fight against the night and the roads Celeste runs back to the house to fill up a hamper with everything eatable she could find. She found considerable. Celeste always did keep cooked up. I can believe that she looked like an angel to those hungry folks in the car when she smiled down the aisle, her red hood over her pretty hair, an' her basket on her arm. She'd felt into several snow mounds as she came, but she didn't mention that.

An' when one little frightened girl learned that Celeste had driven there she held on to her and begged to be taken home.

"Marion's not very well," a man told Celeste. "I'm afraid a night in the car will be hard on her."

The trains were held, you see, nearer to Celeste's faraway home than to Landseer. An', with the child's arms around her, she suggested to the man whom she took to be the father, that she be allowed to carry Marion home with her for the night.

After one look into Celeste's face he agreed willingly. That was the beginning of the end. The man wasn't Marion's father, as it turned out, but an uncle who'd gone to fetch the child to his own bachelor quarters after her father died. An' when this uncle managed to get to Celeste's next day, an' the child hung on to her there an' begged to stay—why, that's the way it was arranged. He came back, this uncle, to visit, regular, an' as her gran'ma's will hadn't said nuthin' about holdin' Celeste to the house after she was married, Celeste left it. Oh, yes! she married Marion's uncle.

An' Celeste now has a fine home of her own in the city. She keeps her gran'ma's here for a sort of country place. So to Celeste happiness did come, you see. And I reckon that, while flowers may bloom unseen, you can't hide a kind heart—it's bound to make itself known."

WHY

Underground Workers Are Superstitious

Underground workers in coal and other mines are full of superstitions, some of which are extremely weird. Darkness means mystery, and imagination has created various hobgoblins that are commonly believed to lurk in such subterranean places.

For instance, there is the "ladder dwarf," a hunchbacked demon with a large head and enormously long and powerful arm. His favorite trick is to climb the ladders in mines and, as he passes the rungs, to kick them out one by one.

In Germany the mines are haunted by two supernatural beings called Nickel and Kobold—the former being benevolently disposed and the latter evilly mischievous. They are the gnomes who fill or empty the lodes. Nickel, if properly propitiated, will reproduce metal-bearing ores as fast as they are removed.

Kobold, on the other hand, will steal away the metal from the lodes. He blows out the miners' lamps and, if he catches a man alone he may drag him about by the nose or hair. If he has a special grudge against an individual miner he will throw him down a ladder or crush him beneath a down-fall of rock.

To gain the good-will of these formidable goblins the miners leave bread, cake and even money in old places. And as a special means of appeasing them, two metals, nickel and cobalt, have been named after them.

More familiar is the story of the eighteenth century boy who, watching the lid of a boiling kettle rise and fall, applied his observation to the invention of the steam engine.

In 1733 a Dr. Clayton of London read that in a certain coal mine there had been discovered a strange gas that burned when fire was applied. Dr. Clayton reasoned that the gas might come from the coal itself, and, acting on this theory, he burned coal in a retort, caught the escaping gas in bladders and amused himself and his friends by lighting what the doctor called "the spirit of coal."

But Dr. Clayton didn't think far enough. It remained for one William Murdoch to make coal gas commercially useful.

"Once you get an idea, you work like a hurricane," says the admiring publisher to the author who is the heroine in a popular play.

"An idea is in itself a hurricane," she replies. "It is the most powerful force in nature."

HIRAM EVIDENTLY A SNORER

Faithful Wife Thought She Recognized Porcine Lamentations as Made by Her Lord and Master.

An amazingly fat couple boarded a sleeping car just before the train pulled out of the Pennsylvania station in New York, and soon retired, the woman taking the lower berth and the man the upper of a section. It was necessary to enlist the aid of the porter and a couple of friendly passengers to enable the man to attain to his lofty couch, but it was accomplished and the car presently became quiet.

Some time during the night the train was held up on a siding, and, as it happened, the sleeping car was stopped right alongside a car loaded with uncomfortable and loudly protesting hogs, the noise of whose lamentations ascended to the stars.

"Oh, Lord!" the occupant of the lower berth was heard to moan. "Just listen to that! Hiram has started to snore!" and I can't get up there to make him turn over!"

"It is highest unfortunate Mr. E—so godlike and excessive awkward for business purpose. I think much better add little serpentine wisdom to upright manhood and so found a good business edifice."

In these few sentences, concludes the Living Age, lies all the wisdom of the East applied to all the wisdom of the West.

Why Few Travel in Afghanistan. Even in recent years there have never averaged annually more than five to ten Europeans in Afghanistan. A European or American who wishes to enter the country must have a permit, or firman, signed by the army, asserting that the bearer be allowed to proceed through the country unmolested, and that a bodyguard, pack animals and tents will be supplied for the road. Upon the presentation of this firman to the secretary of state for India, a permit is granted allowing the bearer to pass the frontier, but at the same time the recipient is required to sign a paper stating that he understands that the British Indian government takes no responsibility either for him or his business. A British subject receives no more protection than any other national. A. C. Jewett writes in Asia.

Sounded Like It.

A schoolteacher relates the following dialogue which took place during a recent examination:

Teacher—Johnny, spell and define hewthling.

Johnny—Re-witch-ing, fascinating.

Teacher—Correct. Now what does fascinating mean? Who can tell?

Silence for the space of half a minute, then up comes a hand, shaking with impatience to give the desired information.

Teacher—Well, Michael, tell us what your idea of fascinating is.

Michael (drawing, but shouting with the utmost assurance)—It's phwat yer put in yer arm ter keep off small-pox.

Money of the World.

From official data supplied by the director of the mint the monetary stocks of fifty-six of the principal countries of the world have been estimated in terms of American dollars. The computation shows the money of the world was approximately $20,636,558,000.

Georgette and Tricotine.

"Tricotine, I hear some silly girl is going to marry Algy."

"Yes."

"Isn't it ridiculous?"

"Well, I don't know what to say. Georgette, I'm the girl."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Golden Opportunity.

Judge—Haven't I seen the defendant some place before?

Lawyer—Yes, your honor; he taught your wife how to sing like a grand opera star.

POWERFUL FORCE IN IDEAS

As Incentives to Work, Nothing Like Them Can Be Devised or Described by Man.

Many years ago two boys were employed in banks located at opposite ends of London. The daily job of each was to carry to the other bank whatever checks his bank held against the other.

Well, one day the boys met midway, compared checks and found they balanced.

"What's the use of my going all the way to your bank and you going

FOR GOVERNOR MASON J. NIBLACK DEMOCRATIC TICKET

Hon. Mason J. Niblack, of Vincennes, is the only candidate for governor in the primary, May 4th, who lives south of Indianapolis.

Southern Indiana Democrats have not been represented in the Governors chair since the days of "Blue Jeans" Williams.

Hon. Thomas Taggart, of Indianapolis, is the unanimous choice of Indiana Democracy for United States Senator. He has no opposition and will be the party nominee. Northern Indiana is asking the nomination for Lieutenant Governor. With Mr. Niblack on the ticket for Governor, the three sections of the State will be represented and the ticket will be well balanced. Can't you think of a thought should be exercised so as not to "centralize" nominations all at Indianapolis. Think it over.

Mr. Niblack was born and reared in Knox County, a member of one of the most prominent Democratic families in the state. His father, Hon.

William E. Niblack, represented the old First District in the United States Congress for sixteen years, and was a member of the Supreme Court of Indiana for twelve years. He has two brothers, William C. Niblack, an eminent attorney of Chicago and Rear Admiral Albert P. Niblack of the United States Navy.

Mason J. Niblack has served four terms in the Indiana Legislature, twice as speaker in the house of representatives. He was a Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor and the running mate of Mr. Adair in 1916. He served twenty-two years as a member of the State Board of Agriculture. He was a member of the Vincennes City School Board for fifteen years. For the past fifteen years, he has been president of the Indiana State Bee Keepers Association.

Mr. Niblack lives on his farm and is a professional and practical farmer. He has devoted his energies entirely to the farm industry for the past twelve years. He has first hand, practical scientific knowledge of the farmer's problems. He has always been fair to labor. Farmer's candidates have always been winners with the people of Indiana.

Mr. Niblack is an old line Democrat—honest, unassuming and capable. He believes in the integrity of the people and in their ability to manage their own local affairs without dictation or interference from the Government's office. He does not believe in the modern schemes of centralization of power and authority.

Southern Indiana offers to the Democratic voters of the State her native son, Mason J. Niblack, in full knowledge that he measures up to Democratic standards and Democratic ideals as to qualifications and fitness for the chief executive office of the State.

HIS SALARY ARM FELL USELESS

The strain of the extra innings seemed to sap all his strength and after the game he ventured to remark that he was through. The aching arm hung to his shoulder like a lump of lead.

"I felt it tingle to the finger tips," he told the chiropractor who found spinal joints affecting the arm nerve under pressure. Adjusting allowed the old "soup bone" to "comeback" and two seasons of good pitching have since been delivered. This is the record of Dan Griner, formerly of Brooklyn, now of St. Paul, the American Association league team. Adjusting brings back power to weakened lungs, stomach or any other organ, just as it does to pitching arms.

PESKY BED BUGS

Bedbug (Cimex lectularius.) The origin of the name bedbug is unknown but is supposed to be naturally suggested as it is descriptive. There are many local names for these parasites, as for illustration, around Boston they are called "Cinches," from Baltimore comes the name "Mahogany Flat," in New York they are styled as "Red Coats," around Pittsburgh they are called "Pesky Devils," in Cincinnati and the South "Night Riders," in St. Louis and Chicago district "Crimson Ramblers," the great West "Pilgrims." The old saying, "the bedbugs have no teeth but they get there just the same," is correct. Instead of teeth they possess a piercing and suckling beak to draw and rob you of your blood for their own body.

Bedbugs, no matter what you may call them, or where they came from, science has found a way to get rid of them if you will use faithfully the chemical Pesky Devils Quietus "P. D. Q." A 35c package makes one quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas, ants or beetles, and their eggs as well. P. D. Q. will not injure bedding, and each package contains a patent spout to enable you to get them in the hard-to-get-at places. Impossible for Pesky Devils to exist where P. D. Q. is used.

OLDEST RESIDENT GIVEN

UP BY PHYSICIANS

"Given up by five doctors, my only hope an operation. I rebelled at cutting me open as I am 75 years old. A neighbor advised trying May's Wonderful Remedy for stomach trouble. I got relief right away. I had not eaten for 10 days and was as yellow as yellow as a gold piece. I could have lived only a few days but for this medicine." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver, and intestinal ailments including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

London's Subway System.

London's underground railways transport 4,000,000 passengers daily.
The vehicles controlled by the roads make a total journey every day equal to 20 circuits of the earth. The gross revenue each month is £1,000,000.

Fitting Emotions.

"We ought to make it warm for the coal producers."
"Yes, and here is coming along a cold deal in ice."

How About the Price?

The British government has established a research station to determine the fuel value of coal and its products and especially to ascertain the extent to which low grade coal and colliery waste can be utilized.

How to Remove White Spots.

A little wood alcohol will remove white spots from varnished furniture but rub it quickly to prevent the alcohol having time to act on the varnish.

How Toothbrush Plant is Used.

The toothbrush plant of Jamaica is one of the most curious plants in the world. By cutting pieces and frying the ends the natives obtain natural toothbrushes, and a tooth powder is obtained by pulverizing the dried stems.

An Independent Operator.

Madisonville, Ky.—A. D. Melton, farmer, found a vagrant vein of coal five feet thick on his farm. He has opened up a surface mine, gets all the coal he wants and will keep his mine open supplied.
