POVERTY IN CRIMEA

Million Rubles Go for $25, but Meal Costs 60,000.

Newspaper Correspondent Finds No Real Money and Little to Purchase in Sebastopol.

Sebastopol, Crimea.—One million Don rubles were purchased for $25 here by a correspondent, but afterward he paid 60,000 rubles for a meal, 10,000 more for a short cab ride and at the close of the day was a bankrupt millionaire. Crimea is in an unhappy condition. It has 24,000,000,000 of rubles, but no real money, and there is little to buy here.

The harbor is filled with idle and disabled warships and merchantmen. There are no cargoes on the docks, street cars have been stopped because of the lack of coal, stores have no stocks and streets are deserted except for an occasional carriage, some wounded soldiers or armed patrolmen. The only life here is on the beaches at the park at the entrance to the harbor. There bathers, for the most part women and wounded officers and soldiers, pass the time when not reading bulletins from the various south Russian fronts at the official news bureau. These bulletins afford depressed Crimeans much encouragement. Most women here have no hats, but wear veils or kerchiefs about their heads. Many are without stockings, but are charming, nevertheless, in bright, inexpensive gowns which they dignify with erect and independent carriage, suggestive of American women.

Six years of war have not broken the spirit of south Russian women. They "carry on" with the slight means at their disposal without complaint, and give whatever encouragement they can to men battling with bolsheviks along the Dnieper river and in the Don and Kuban territory.

Sebastopol, with its idle dockyards and railways operated only for military purposes, has not, in spite of its 80,000 inhabitants, the dynamics of a city one-tenth its size. The old Russian naval base has lost all its brilliancy, most of its warships are rusting at the docks and its industries are closed. The civilian population is awaiting resumption of export trade, which is necessary to the exchange situation and the restoration of normal trade conditions.

EXPLAINING MEMNON'S MUSIC.

Enigma of the Centuries Solved by Modern Research.

Another of the enigmas of centuries has been solved. Shoals of writers, ancient and modern—Strabo, Pausanias, Juvenal and Tacitus among the former—have puzzled themselves and their public by speculation as to the explanation of the harmonious sounds given off under the statue of Memnon at Thebes, on the left bank of the Nile, and as to the reasons why those sounds ceased. The facts are, says the London Globe, that after being cracked in its upper part the statue became sonorous, and that this quality ceased on the fissure being closed. For two centuries Greeks and Romans journeyed to see the wonder of the musical statue and to honor Memnon. Some of the ancients said that the fissures in the granite were caused by an earthquake. Modern research saddles Cumbyes or Ptolemy Lathurax with the vandalism, which was produced by working grooves into the junction of the arms, and then producing enlarged cracks with wooden wedges drenched with water. It was the vibratory motion set up by the early sun expelling the moistures of the night that caused the musical sounds. Severus, by closing the fissures to "restore" the statue, as part of his policy of putting the pagan gods against the increase of Christianity, ended the "music."

Belgium's Sugar School.

Among the special professional schools that are offered in different parts of the old world, none is more unique than the "sugar school" recently opened at St. Ghislain, Belgium. The course, which covers two years, leads to a diploma, which will insure the holder a lucrative position with any of the large sugar manufacturers on the continent. The student body is of course not very large, owing to the novelty of the course, but the curriculum is exceptionally comprehensive, including instruction in the fundamental underlying studies such as physics and general chemistry in addition to such direct studies as sugar technology, sugar chemistry, sugar legislation, industrial factories, sugar accounts, cane and sugar raising, etc. Schools of this character are much needed in the industrial world, being analogous to the technical schools which have been found so extremely valuable.

SANITARY SHAVING MUG

Liquid Soap Drawn Upon as Desired by Thumb Pressure.

The sanitary shaving mug which has been recently invented by a Detroit genius not only presents a portion of a clean soap each time that it is required, but it has the soap stored away in its interior in the most convenient form for preservation. The feature of this invention lies in the double bottom, and between the two is a chamber designed to be filled with liquid shaving soap. Convenient to the handle there is a plunger operated by pressure of the thumb. When this is pressed down a quantity of soap is forced into the inside cup through perforations provided for the purpose and upon rubbing this with the brush a lather is soon worked up. After using, the cup is rinsed out in the usual manner, but this operation in no way disturbs the soap between the two shells of the cup, which is ready to be delivered again in response to a slight pressure of the thumb.

POWDERED COAL A SUCCESS

Reported Satisfactory and Economical for Railroads.

Some of the big railroads have been using powdered coal with very satisfactory results. The coal finely powdered and dried, is stored in receptacles from which it is blown into the firebox in jets by air pressure, much the same as oil fuel is used. The dry powder is converted into gas almost instantaneously, the temperature of the firebox is not lowered and the objectionable heavy black smoke is obliterated. This method is also more economical of fuel than ordinary firing and materially lessens the labor of stoking.

VISIBILITY OF RED LIGHTS

Why They are Chosen When Danger Signals are Needed.

Red lights are chosen for danger signals on railways for the reason that they are visible at a greater distance than those of any other color. Red light has a visible range of nearly three and a half miles in the standard signal light. The next in strength is green light, which can be seen under similar conditions for three miles. Blue, purple and yellow can be seen only about a mile and are likely to be confused with the other colors.
