BUYS MORE HORSES FOR EUROPEAN WAR

Indianapolis Buyer Says the Height Standard Is Raised, and Dealers Have Animals On Hands.

Jerry Klotz was in Greenfield Saturday and purchased a few horses for the European war. He said the standard height of army horses had been raised, and as a result many of the horses purchased a month ago for cavalry purposes were left on the hands of the buyers. This resulted in great loss, as the buyers could find no other market for that kind of horses. The Southern market, which usually affords an outlet for small horses about the close of each year and the beginning of the new year, is absolutely eliminated by the condition of the cotton market. There is no demand for Southern horses, so the buyers who purchased horses a month ago see no relief against great loss on those horses which were left on their hands to feed at big daily expense.

It is said that even the market for heavy horses is not good at this time. In large cities, especially those on the sea coast, where there is large import and export of products, there is not much being done. Notwithstanding these present conditions, it is generally thought that the horse market in the United States is sure to be stimulated ultimately by the European war.

Something Pertinent From "Fidelity Man."

You would not have gotten up from that sick bed and out of the house so soon and suffered that "back-set," if you had carried a Standard health policy.

You can afford to "lay off" until the injury gets well if you have a Standard accident policy. Hufford Agency, 118 West Main. 13d-2-w

HOME FROM THE WEST FOR A SHORT VISIT

Ora Staley Has Been In Oklahoma. Talks In Interesting Manner of Western Conditions.

Ora Staley, formerly of Charlottesville, and for several years a prominent teacher in Hancock county, has been spending several days at his old home. Mr. Staley taught in the state of Oklahoma for a few years, but has been in business in that state for the past two years. He recently disposed of his business and will probably engage in farming in the West.

He talked in an interesting way of the West. He has been in many states and has studied the existing conditions in them. He says that he does not think he would like to locate in Kansas or Oklahoma, though there are many men making good money in these states. But the hot weather and winds from the middle of June to the first of September are obstacles in crop production.

He says that he likes the West for the reason among other things, that it is a place where big things are done. Such methods make big profits possible. He says the irrigated land in the West is very high priced, in fact, too high priced in many places to be either profitable for cultivation or for investment.

He likes California and thinks there are great opportunities there both for investment and to make money.
