Increased expenses and taxes is the record of the Democratic party in Indiana for the past six years.

The machine controlled by Crawford, Fairbanks, Tom Taggart and the breweries of Indiana, taking advantage of the split in the Republican party, are running things with a high hand, regardless of expense.

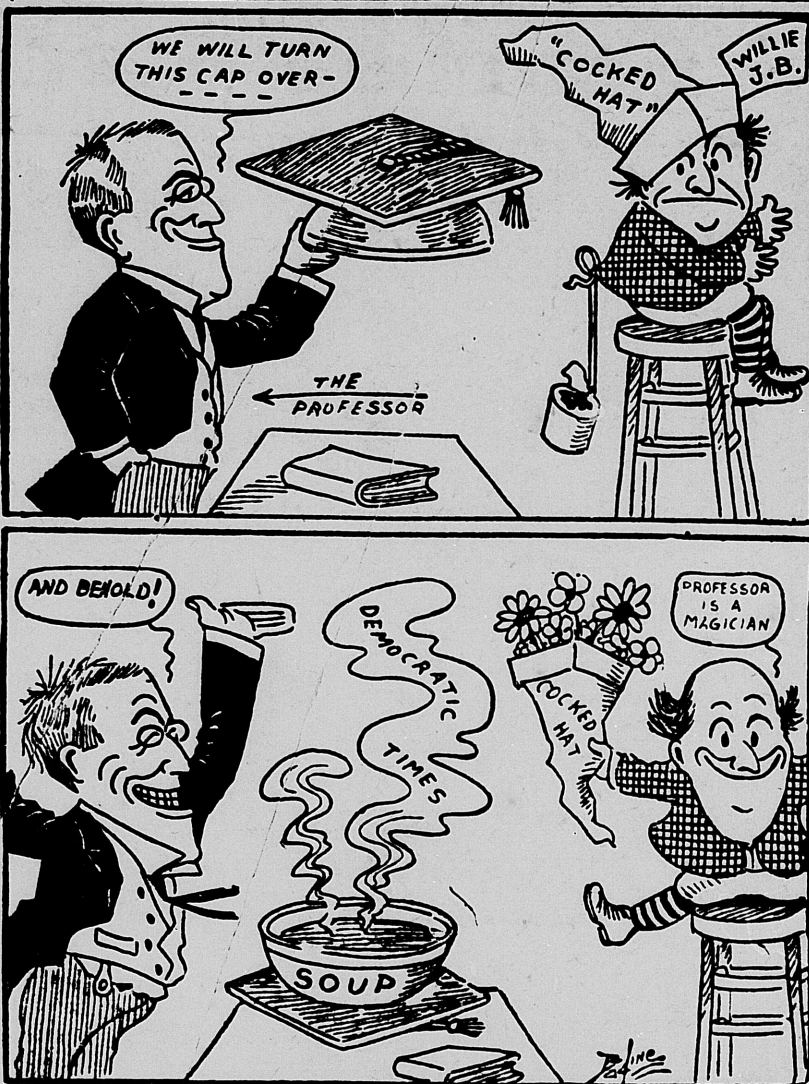

Mr. Pierson, Progressive candidate for secretary of state, thinks every laborer should receive $5.00 per day. Do the farmers want to pay hands five dollars per day?

Even if voters are convinced that there is occasion for some reforms, do not let them lose sight of the fact that they have the best form of government in the world. Nothing on the earth has ever equalled in comfort and happiness the people of the United States. Stay close to that fact on election day.

The voter who is persuaded that suddenly certain men have become remarkably inspired for good, surpassing anything heretofore known, are sure to be disappointed. Great reforms come slowly. New things, like old things, have their faults. Experiments are always expensive.

This much can be remembered by the voters of the country: Everything that is advocated is not necessary.

sarily good, simply because it is new and untried, but most of the new political things that are being tried are very expensive. When everything in connection with the state and national governments has to be controlled by special commissions and then inspected by special high-salaried inspectors, the people may expect to pay the big bills by taxes.

The Progressive speaker Tuesday night favored free school books. This is just another move toward high taxes. Everything that is added to the free list for the public is just that much more for the taxpayer to bear. It may sound good, but the man who pays taxes will pay the bill.

The states which have been favoring all the new reform ideas in politics for the past ten years, are now tax burdened beyond endurance, and are clamoring to repeal the new fad laws, and get back to the old representative form of government.

The Democratic party can beat the Republican party in promises, but it is short in fulfillment. The voters of the country would rather have the conditions of two years ago than those of today.

Mr. Pierson, the Progressive candidate for secretary of state, said in his speech at Greenfield Tuesday night that he was in favor of five dollars a day for every man that works. That sounds as foolish as the flat money idea. There is not a business in Greenfield that will sustain a wage scale of five dollars for each employee. How could the farmers pay five dollars a day for farm labor? If Mr. Pierson is an intelligent man he knows such a thing is not possible, and it could not be made possible by any kind of legislation. It is the worst kind of nonsense, and uttered only to get labor votes, but while it gets labor votes what will it do for the farmer and employer who know they can not pay five dollars per day for labor?

We are unable to see much difference between men who are Progressives and those of other parties. They act much like other men. In political methods and organizations there is no perceptible difference. Why, then, should the voters of the country expect to get results in politics different from that of other party men?

Mr. Lynch, the Republican candidate for congress in this district, is making an energetic and effective campaign. He is a business-man candidate, and makes an impressive speech because of its sensible and practical suggestions. If elected to congress he will be a member that does things.

Some of the farmers who are still holding on to the Progressive party will let loose very abruptly when they realize that many of its tendencies are towards socialism. The socialistic idea of a single tax will soon get into the program. Farmers will object to land being the only property subject to tax.

No party has ever managed the affairs of the state of Indiana and the United States as successfully in the interest of all the people as the Republican party.

Elbert Russell, the Progressive candidate for congress, is decidedly socialistic in his tendencies and arguments.

Ora Myers, the candidate for joint senator on Republican ticket, reports much encouragement from the pledges he is receiving from men of all parties. As mayor Mr. Myers attempted to make good on the platform on which he was elected. He is a good campaigner, and always makes the opposition know that they have a race on hands.
