Barlow Bros.' Minstrels did not have near the house they deserved Wednesday night. It was one of the best minstrel companies ever showing in our city. Every feature of the performance was excellent and deserves high commendation. A very appreciative audience enjoyed the entertainment.

Putnam County Bar Association.

On Saturday evening occurred the second meeting of the Putnam County Bar Association, at the law offices of Mathias & Mathias & Case. The committee appointed at the former meeting to draft a constitution reported favorably, and the association, pursuant to an article of the constitution, proceeded with the election of officers. The following was the result of the election: President, D. E. Williamson; 1st vice-president, C. B. Case; 2d vice-president, J. J. Smiley; secretary, S. C. Matson; treasurer, S. A. Hays.

The lawyers intend to hold regular meetings, and to study and discuss the great legal questions which modern civilization is constantly bringing to the front. The association will be a means of making better lawyers of the able Putnam bar. The next meeting of the association occurs Saturday evening at the offices above mentioned.

Sudden Death of Mrs. J. R. Weaver.

On Friday evening, shortly after 6 o'clock, Mrs. Weaver, wife of Col. James Riley Weaver, of DePauw University, died at Beecher's, her late residence, in this city, from the effects of a surgical operation performed on that day. Her death was a shock to the community, as but few of our people knew that Mrs. Weaver was afflicted, or that she had undergone a surgical operation. Some months ago she was attacked with cancer of the breast; Dr. Dunning, of Indianapolis, was called here to perform the operation necessary for its removal, and with the assistance of Drs. Lammers and Evans, of this city, the operation was performed. She recovered from the effects of the operation nicely and speedily. Recently the malignant growth again developed, and it spread with such rapidity that a second operation was deemed necessary to prevent early death as a result of the malignant growth. The second operation was performed on Friday morning, as before stated by the same surgeons. The ravages of the cancer were so widespread that the last operation necessarily took a much wider range than the first, and the shock was so great that the patient never rallied from it—everything possible was done for her relief, but all without avail, and in a few hours she passed from time to eternity.

Deceased was an estimable Christian lady, with a wide circle of friends who respected her highly and loved her dearly because of her brightness, amiability and goodness of heart.

In the home she was the idol of husband and children, and their loss is irreparable this side of the grave—their home is bereft of its chiefest joy and greatest comfort.

Funeral services were held at the family residence, Monday morning, conducted by Dr. H. A. Gobin assisted by Drs. Hollingsworth and Poncher and on Monday afternoon the body, accompanied by the family, left for Philadelphia, where they were buried by the side of her father, Bishop Simpson, of the M. E. Church.

Mrs. Mattie Smedley has returned from Indianapolis.

Miss Lillie Williams who has been visiting in Roachdale, has returned home.

Messrs. Shillings and Browning observed the Sabbath by drinking too freely from the inspiring cup. Marshall Starr, gave them a bed in the big Stone front, and Monday morning they payed their fines of $9.60 each and went on their way rejoicing. It costs more to get sober than drunk.

Putnam County Historical Society.

The historical society met Tuesday evening in the G. A. R. hall. The venerable president being absent Mrs. J. Birch presided over the meeting. Mrs. Louis Steeg and Miss Helen Hathaway furnished the music. Several excellent papers were presented by various ladies, among them a paper written by Alexander S. Farrow, read by Mrs. Bryan. Mr. Farrow became a citizen of Putnam county in 1830, and brought the first blue grass seed sowed in Putnam county, with him. Mrs. Birch read a paper written by Mrs. Mary L. Allison, giving the experience of the writer in the early days of Indiana. Mrs. Hammond's paper upon the pioneer women of our county was especially interesting. During the discussion which followed the papers, the fact was brought out that Thomas Jackson, who was married here in 1822, and who is still living, is the longest resident of Putnam county.

The New Athletic Park.

The DePauw Athletic Association, has purchased the four acre track of land lying immediately south of the old cemetery, and are progressing rapidly in grading the ground for the new athletic park. Fifteen teams are employed each day and the somewhat rolling surface is very rapidly becoming even. An athletic park is what the students of DePauw University have needed for many years. It will be the means of encouraging athletics and legitimate athletics with the students. It will afford a foundation upon which to constantly excite athletic interests. It will provide a place for efficient training of athletic aspirants and an opportunity of exercise for all students. When a bath house has been built and the track, diamond and gridiron completed, Greencastle may feel that she has something to be proud of. It already speaks well for our citizens that they have taken so much interest in the new enterprise. Three of our best business men have accepted positions on the board of directors of the Athletic Association, and that assures us that the business welfare of our city will be carefully guarded. We are glad to see the students and citizens unite in the cause of mutual welfare.

The new park will be in the hands of the citizen members of the board of directors in the summer and will be open for all games between the Greencastle nine and other crack teams of the state. It will be a splendid place for fourth of July meeting, for picnics and old settlers' reunions. The park, the result of the combined efforts of students, faculty and citizens is a long delayed need. It is hoped that all interested in Greencastle affairs will lend their financial and moral support to the new project.

Loaded to the Brim.

My store is full of good, reliable shoes—good bargains, all of them. You would think to look at them that I had enough to supply the county, and yet they are not all in. Before you buy you want to examine our women's heavy shoes and men's and boys' boots. They are the best goods for the money you will see this season.

Gokey's hand-made boots the same as heretofore and at same prices as last year. How can I afford it? Well, I bought them last April before the advance in the price of leather took place, and I am going sell every pair of them without any advance in the price. I have sold this line of boots since 1855. Nobody ever goes back on them, and they never go back on anybody. Get a pair for yourself and a pair for your boy. It will pay you to do so.

Respectfully,
P. R. CHRISTIE.

A RUINED CAPITAL.

The Fall of Cahaba, Once Chief
City of Alabama.

Before the Days of Railroads It Was the Center of Culture and Learning—
Now a Cotton Plantation.

It was Father Ryan, the southern poet, first who said: "A land without ruins is a land without memories." If such be the truth, Alabama is not without memories. A visit to the plantation of Capt. Cliff Kirkpatrick, situated about twelve miles from Selma, in Dallas county, beside the rippling waters of the Alabama river, where the once city of Cahaba, for many years the capital of the state, and the seat of culture and learning, stood, will convince one of this fact. What was once the streets and boulevards of the gray city are now broad fields, where stately stalks of corn and spreading plants of cotton grow in luxuriance, nourished by the fertile soil upon which famous men in Alabama's history half a century ago gathered to solve grave problems of state or to enjoy the unalloyed pleasures of antebellum times.

Before the days of railroads, says the Chattanooga Times, Cahaba, then the capital of Alabama, was in her glory. Beautifully situated, with steamboats plying up and down the Alabama river between Cahaba and Mobile, carrying down cargoes of cotton and produce and returning with merchandise, the ancient capital became the inland metropolis of her state. The bulk of the cotton crop was shipped through it. The wealthy planters and slave owners made their purchases there and its trade became large. It was likewise the hub of aristocracy and the seat of colleges and schools of a high order. When the legislature was in session the season of gaiety set in. The palatial homes of the wealthy and historic families, many of whom owned lordly mansions in and around Cahaba, were thrown open and southern hospitality held uninterrupted sway. These homes were veritable palaces of luxuriance, for their owners lived in the lap of plenty.

The decline of Cahaba began before the war, when railroads missed it and were built to Selma and Montgomery. The days of river transportation were numbered, and Cahaba's trade began to leave for the more favored cities, and with it went the population gradually. Then the capital was removed, and next the courthouse. The population continued to diminish. Then came the trials of war, the raid of Wilson's cavalry and the devastation that followed. By the end of the war Cahaba's glory had departed. It was a veritable deserted village. The more substantial of its buildings still stood, but its people had sought other climes.

A visit to the ancient place—now a cotton plantation—a few days ago disclosed some curious sights. It demonstrated what wonderful changes time had wrought. Nearly one hundred old houses, relics of the past, still stand, and around them the cotton plants are just now disclosing their white blooms. These old structures, built of brick, will for years to come continue to mark the spot where the proud city once stood, for the owner of the plantation does not contemplate pulling them down. Some were stores, others were churches and schoolhouses, and others still lordly mansions. All are crumbling to ruins, and while a few are inhabited by negro families who labor on the farm, the majority are tenanted only by bats and owls.

On a hill not far from the river stands what was once the capitol building in whose walls the eloquence of William L. Yancy and other famous Alabamians of by-gone days resounded. The old building, a substantial three-story stone and brick structure, still stands, and is utilized now as a gristmill and steam ginny. Across from it are two blocks of brick stores, time having made sad inroads into them.

The once fashionable church of the town, which cost many thousands of dollars, is now used by a colored congregation. It was, when built, the costliest and handsomest house of worship in the state. The old Dallas academy, where Senator John T. Morgan attended school, is now only a towering mass of ruins. The place where the historic Craig family resided is planted in corn, and the broad expanse where Gen. F. W. Pickens' costly house stood is now used as a pasture. The ruins of the famous old Perrine mansion, which cost sixty thousand dollars, were torn away last year and the brick used for other purposes. A solitary magnolia tree marks the spot where it stood.

At one time Cahaba was a city of many thousand people. Lots sold for as high as fifteen thousand to twenty thousand dollars. Now the entire site, with land adjoining, embracing nine hundred acres, is owned by one man, Capt. Cliff Kirkpatrick, who came out of the war penniless, but by pluck and perseverance has built up his lost fortune until now he possesses one of the finest plantations in the south. He resides with his charming family in one of the twenty-thousand-dollar antebellum mansions, which has been refitted. It is hospitality's own abode. The property which Capt. Kirkpatrick now owns could not have been bought fifty years ago for ten million dollars. Some thirty artesian wells, which quenched the thirst of our ancestors, still flow freely, but only the wandering herds and the thirsty farm laborer imbibe their sparkling waters. If the story of Cahaba's rise and fall could have been pictured by Father Ryan he would have immortalized the dead city.

Bird of Brilliant Plumage.

There are few birds whose plumage is so variable as the ptarmigan. Three times in the year its plumage changes; it has separate coats for spring, autumn and winter. At the beginning of November it puts on the last costume of the season. Its spring brown and summer gray serve well to hide it among the scanty herbage of its haunts from the keen eye of the soaring falcon.

GLADSTONE'S GREAT POWER.

No Other Man of the Century Has Wielded as Wide an Influence.

Happy the man who can sit on the fence and wait! Happy the politician who is old enough to have gone through all the turmoil of electioneering and is not too old to find enjoyment as a looker-on! Happy the man smoking the pipe of peace and listening to the echoes of the fight and turning them to the music of his own reminiscences! Mr. Gladstone, says the Newcastle Chronicle, finds it hard to sit still. He hears the trumpet call and the roll of the drum and would gladly be in the contest once more, but the joints are stiff and the eyes are dim. He does not hear so well as he did and he must be content with the reports of the fighting and a passing remark of commendation or dissent.

There is something peculiarly pathetic in the situation of Mr. Gladstone, still moved by the desire to fight but without the power of physical impulse. It might have been better for the world had he confined his vast intellect to moral philosophy or to abstruse theology, or had been a priest or even a soldier, than to have put his heart and soul into politics. A soldier, would he not have smitten the enemy hip and thigh? A priest, who could have stood against his aggressive theology? A philosopher, what subtle theories he would have launched against the schools? Now that he is old and still brave as a lion, we can only rejoice that he has done less harm as a political dictator than might have been permitted to him had time renewed his lease of active life.

No man of our day has exercised such a fascination upon his followers. His personality was sufficient to impress the Scotch into acquiescence with his least practical schemes. The spell of his name and his remarkable individuality withdrawn, Scotland gradually assumes her normal characteristics. It was the same in England as in Scotland. Mr. Gladstone, not his policy, was the mainspring of his party success; and his opponents may be forgiven for believing the desire to have the same influence over the Irish brought about his strange and sudden conversion to home rule.

Anyhow, he is a remarkable man, a statesman whom all parties are willing to honor, a figure and a personality that will always fill a deeply interesting chapter of British history, and a scholar who will hold a high place in the esteem and respect of the learned all the world over. While the new lights of statecraft are flashing upon the horizon of a general election fraught with tremendous issues to the country, his lantern burns dimly, his sun is setting, and if "England to herself prove true," the popular statesman will have reason to exercise the patience that belongs to age and to philosophy when the last echoes of the present contest reach Hawarden.

WHEN MEN ARE HELPLESS.

It is on a Shopping Expedition or When Piloted Into a Tea-Room.

"Of course," said the social philosopher, according to the Philadelphia Times getting interested in her subject, "you understand about the shopping question. You must never, under any circumstances, take a man into a dry goods store with you, for the first thing he'll say will be an emphatic 'There's not another man in this whole place except the clerks,' or a soft, meek little 'I feel like a fish out of water.' There is something about the heaps of dress materials and the hanging rows of gloves and hosiery that makes a man appear ridiculously funny to the feminine eye, and you don't dare laugh, because if you do he will be highly indignant, and will be very likely to march off in a towering rage."

"And never, never, under any circumstances, take him into a downtown tea-room. The short trip in the elevator, along with a dozen hurrying women and six dozen bundles, is enough to make him say swear words under his breath, and if he happens to be big and broad-shouldered, he seems as out of place as a washtub in a drawing-room. Unless he is especially good-natured, he will tag along behind you like a criminal shunning the detectives, and when he strolls toward the table he looks around in the vain hope of finding a fellow-mortal in the same miserable distress. If he locates any such shipwrecked male being, his face brightens perceptibly. If he sees only a wriggling mass of bonnets, he is crosser than ever. He rebels at the idea of eating off a little dessert plate and sneers silently at the silly little sugar bowl. But he can't help it, for he probably feels as uncomfortable as a girl would were she in a barber shop or a men's clothing store."

News Indeed.

A geography published in 1812 contains the following startling description of that section of our country which Charles Dudley Warner has baptized "Our Italy": "California is a wild and almost unknown land, covered throughout the year by dense fogs, damp as they are unhealthy. On the northern shores live anthropophagi, and in the interior are active volcanoes and vast plains of shifting snow, which sometimes shoot up columns to inconceivable heights." The book adds that some of these statements would seem incredible were they not so well authenticated by trustworthy travelers!

Not So Much After All.

A Frenchman was boasting that he had thoroughly mastered the English language, when he was asked to write from dictation the following choice specimen of our choice eccentric vernacular: "As Hugh Hughes was hewing a yule log from a yew tree a man dressed in garments of dark hue came up to Hugh and said: 'Have you seen my ewes?' To which he replied: 'If you will wait until I hew this yew I will go with you to look for your ewes.'" After an attempt the Frenchman admitted his mistake. He used to imagine he was used to English speaking, but he would be more careful how he used the language in future.

UN UNEVEN RACE.

The Desperate Run of a Brave
California Bronco.

He Keeps Ahead of a Thoroughbred Racehorse Until He Falls from Exhaustion—
A Thrilling Narrative.

An exciting story is told by Cromwell Galpin, in St. Nicholas, of a race between a bronco and a big thoroughbred horse. The former was ridden by a mere boy, a Californian, who had to file a certain paper in court before noon in order to retain possession of a farm. The writer says:

There was still wanting the one thing that stirs a racer to his utmost endeavor. Felipe had almost forgotten the horse behind him. Two-eyes had not. He had been on the alert, horse fashion, with one ear now and again turned, and increased his speed as the thoroughbred drew near. Felipe turned his head with a sick feeling that in a minute more he would be obliged to turn his head to see. One sidelong glance showed him a bay horse with his head in the air, his dainty ears upright and his frothing mouth wide open. The rider stood in his stirrups, leaning over his horse's neck with the reins wound around his hands. White foam had gathered at the saddle girth, and sweat dropped from the horse's body as he ran.

Felipe shut his teeth, and turned his face toward Los Angeles. He did not need to look long nor to know very much about horses to see that this one was a true race horse, and the man a steady and a skillful rider.

And Two-eyes? Two-eyes heard the quick hoof-beats, and the "huh-huh, huh-huh" of a horse at speed, and felt hot breath on his flanks as the thoroughbred drew alongside.

Not the unusual cry of Tomas, not the fierce shriek of the savage who in the old days rode him—neither beating with knotted rope, nor cruel stroke of sharper spur—could have gained from the bronco horse the response he gave to the challenge of the thoroughbred.

The big head came down closer to the ground, the hairy ears were laid back till the mane concealed them, and the deep lungs labored as, through blazing nostrils, the horse sucked in the strong salt breeze.

So far the race had been run over level ground; but as the riders approached the city, the country became hilly and the road rougher.

It was not for nothing that Two-eyes had spent five wild years in the Sierra Madres, where the gray wolf and the mountain lion are always swift and always hungry; nor was it without advantage that Felipe's tomboy sister, Ignacia, had raced the pinto horse over this road till it was as familiar to him as the stableyard at home. To the bronco horse, used to the mountains from coolthood, the hilly road appeared to be rather a relief. He galloped laboriously up the little hills and rushed down the opposite sides with a speed that took away his rider's breath; he jumped from hillock to hollow, and across the little gulches; he dodged the spots where reedlike grass showed that the ground was wet and soft; and whether running or trotting or progressing by irregular jumps, he went on his way with scarcely lessened speed.

The thoroughbred had never been allowed to run except on a smooth and level track. He refused to leap the first gully which crossed the road, though it was scarcely a foot wide. When Harry made him face it again, he jumped ten feet farther than was necessary, and stopped stock-still upon the opposite side. Then he bolted sideways, and ran in the wrong direction; and Harry felt as if his arms were being pulled off as he forced his horse to return to the road.

As for Two-eyes, he did what he could. He was old, as horses' years are counted. He had run many races for Apache masters who jerked his head from side to side, and threw him out of his stride, in their ignorant and ferocious efforts to make him go faster. In all his life there had been but one year in which his feed was regular and good; of all the masters he had ever known this was the only one who had called upon him for speed, riding with steady hand and watchful eye and inspiring voice, sparing him needless pain.

It is bronco nature to respond heartily to these things, and Two-eyes, tried desperately to keep away from the clattering hoofs behind him. His breath came in gasps; his mouth was dry, and his sight was dim; his trembling legs grew weak as side by side the horses raced down the street leading to the courthouse, now hardly a mile away.

As in a nightmare, Felipe saw the thoroughbred forge ahead, the bony head outstretched and down to the level of the withers, the dainty ears laid flat, the crimson nostrils widely spread, and the eyes glaring with fierce eagerness.

The bronco ran on, but unsteadily. Felipe drew his legs out from under the rope, and as he did so the bronco's feet sank in the soft earth where a little stream crossed the street. The horse's courage was greater than his strength. He plunged forward half a dozen stumbling strides, and fell just at the edge of the little stream.

Felipe slid over his horse's head into a patch of tules, and lay, half stunned but not hurt, while the thoroughbred horse passed out of sight and hearing, and the dust his flying feet had raised settled down upon the quiet street.

Singular Case of Blindness.

Mrs. Jonathan Rowe, of South Atkinson, Me., who has been totally blind for twenty years, experienced an odd partial recovery of her sight a few days ago. She suddenly became able to see quite distinctly one afternoon about two o'clock, but her vision was totally obscured again in two hours. Since then she has been able to see every day between about two and four o'clock in the afternoon, but during the rest of the twenty-four hours is as blind as formerly.

A NEW JERSEY POKER STORY.

Why Four Players Divided the Stakes
Equally Among Themselves.

A straight flush in the great American game of draw poker is such a rarity that the person holding it is regarded as one of the most fortunate and blessed of mortals, says the Summit (N. J.) Record. Devotees of that game will peruse the following story with incredulity, but its absolute authenticity can be verified by at least ten thoroughly reliable witnesses: A party of four players entered a place not a thousand miles from Summit one night and prepared to enjoy a few hours of recreation at their favorite game. Another game in progress at the time was full, so the four players were obliged to start at an adjoining table.

The "jack pot" came around, each of the four players filled in and the game proceeded. The cards, regulation pack, fifty-two cards, were cut by the player to the right of the dealer and dealt out in the regular manner. The first player to the left of the dealer opened the "jack pot" and each succeeding player in turn raised. The limit was ten cents and the players are usually light bettors, so that the raising and lively chipping in before the draw created considerable surprise. When the dealer prepared to serve the cards for the draw each of the players stood "pat" and the betting again started.

When each of the players had chipped in ten dollars it was decided to stop the betting, as that amount had never before been wagered on a game in the place and none of the players could afford to risk a greater amount. When the hands were shown some of the players almost succumbed to heart disease, for there lay four straight flushes, one of each suit and all running from four to eight. The pot was divided and the cards were carefully put away in a case to be preserved as a reminder of the greatest poker hands ever held in this section and probably in the United States.

BICYCLES INSTEAD OF WATCHES.

Boys of To-Day Want Wheels Instead of Timepieces.

Bicycles and watches are not much alike, and it is difficult to see how the sale of one can affect the sale of the other. It is a fact, nevertheless, that since the bicycle fever took hold in its present intense form the sale of high-grade watches has greatly reduced. Parents who buy bicycles for their children do not buy watches unless, perhaps, they get cheap ones, so the young ones may know when it is time to come home to dinner.

"The decrease in the sale of watches has been very noticeable," said a Chicago jeweler the other day, "and I trace it to no other cause than the bicycle. For instance, when a boy became fifteen or sixteen years old in former days it was the custom for his parents to present him with a watch—generally a costly affair—which usually lasted him the better part of his life. But it is different now. The boy clamors for a bicycle, and he generally gets it, although it does not last as long and usually costs more than a watch. This same trait I have noticed in people of older years. When they get enough money on hand to buy a watch the bicycle fever strikes them, and then they go out and invest in a wheel."

A FRUITLESS CHASE.

The Useless Self-Sacrifice of a Gallant Italian.

An American lady, promenading in Florence, suddenly missed her purse. The suspicious movements of a man in front made her boldly demand the stolen property, and the man actually handed over her purse. Indignant at such daylight robbery, the lady stopped an elegantly dressed man, and in excited tones, began to pour out her grievance. Merely waiting to hear: "That man stole my purse!" the gallant Italian rushed after the thief, who promptly took to his heels. But the thief was the more nimble of the two, and finally dodged his pursuer. Red-faced, perspiring and out of breath, the gentleman turned back to meet the lady with profound apologies. "Madam, I am very sorry. I did my best, but your purse is gone." "Oh, no," she replied, sweetly. "I have my purse. I got it back from the man." "Got your purse back?" he repeated. "What did you want, then?" "Want? Why, I want justice," said the lady, calmly. It was too much even for proverbial Italian urbanity, and, almost choking with vexation, he gasped: "Justice! To think that I should have run myself into a perspiration for justice!"

WHERE SOUBRETTE'S START.

Many of Them First Begin to Dance While Playing in the Street.

In this age of burlesques and ballet girls, when farce comedies are plentifully supplied with high kickers and dancers, and when even the chorus girls are expected to trip the light fantastic toe, one often wonders where all the dancing girls come from. The natural inference is that they secure their first knowledge of the graceful art in the dancing schools, after which they are prepared for the stage by persons who make a business of that sort of thing. But many a dancing girl will tell you that her first school was the sidewalk, and her first inspiration the strains of a perambulating street piano, presided over by an Italian grinder. Indeed, it is no uncommon sight to see a crowd of interested spectators gathered about one of these street musicians, the attraction being not in the music, but in the graceful movements of the little girls. Some of these children execute some very pretty steps, and occasionally their performances are as clever as some seen upon the stage.

Gulls as Weather Prophets.

It is a widespread belief, both in Scotland and Ulster, that the line: "Sea gull, sea gull, sit on the stand, it's never good weather while you're on land," alludes to the well-known fact that when the bird flies out early and far to seaward, or remains on the sand, fair weather may be looked for, while if it takes a contrary course storms most frequently follow.

in time, if you are a sufferer from that scourge of humanity known as consumption, and you can be cured. There is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its early stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, as we believe, fully 95 per cent, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write to those who have been cured and profit by their experience.

The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in conquering scrofula in whatever way it may manifest itself is vouched for thousands who were severely afflicted by this prevalent disease, but who now rejoice over a permanent cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Scrofula may appear as a humor, or it may attack the glands of the neck, or break out in dreadful running sores on the body or limbs. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may develop into catarrh or lodging in the lungs lead to consumption. Come as it may, a faithful course of treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla will overcome it, for working upon the foundation of all disease, impure blood, the system is clarified and vitalized, and vigor, strength and health restored to the body.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

The theories of physicians in regard to female complaints suffer a "Waterloo" very frequently, when sensible and thinking women take matters into their own hands.

Women are sometimes compelled to act for themselves, because of the suffering forced upon them by incompetent doctors, who are baffled by very simple complaints, because they are not the right sex to comprehend them.

Lydia E. Pinkham, when she gave to the world her Vegetable Compound, lifted women from the darkness into light. She placed within their reach a guaranty, not only of health, but of delicacy and self-respect.

The following letter is a little story where a "dear little boy" was the "Waterloo."

"I have taken three bottles of your Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills; and now I have a dear little babe four weeks old, and I am well. I have to thank you for this."

"I have spent $200.00 for doctors' bills without a cure. For my cure I only spent $5.00."

"I was once a victim of female troubles in their worst form. I have suffered untold agonies every month; had to stay in bed, and have poultices applied, and then could not stand the pain."

"My physician told me if I became pregnant I would die. I had bladder trouble, itching, backache, catarrh of the stomach, hysteria, and heart trouble, fainting spells and leucorrhoea. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?" MRS. GEO. C. KIRCHNER, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

A town is like a large family. We are all interested in each other's welfare—or should be. A cut-throat every-man-for-himself policy means ruin for any community. It means retrogression and failure. The first lesson any family must learn, to be happy and successful, is unity and mutual assistance. The same applies to the business life of a town and the more generally it is obeyed the more abundant will be the city's prosperity.

One of our druggists recently took his wife out for a country drive. As they passed along the road they noticed one of their former acquaintances at work in an adjoining field, digging up his crop of sweet potatoes. They stopped in the road and opened up a conversation. Finally the druggist's wife said: "I see you are digging your 'sang.' The farmer replied: "I don't understand; what did you say?" The lady smilingly replied: "You are getting your ginsang ready for market; I noticed in the store that it was beginning to come in." The farmer looked sort of surprised, but finally pulled himself together and said: "These are sweet potatoes, not 'sang; but they are rather small." Since that time the lady is shy in commenting on sweet potatoes and 'sang, and her husband is tireless in talking on these subjects.

The Mount Lebanon Shakers have recently perfected an ingenious cure for dyspepsia. Their Digestive Cordial consists of a food already digested and a digestor of foods happily combined.

The importance of this invention will be appreciated when we realize what a proportion of the community are victims of some form of stomach trouble. Thousands of thin, pale people have little inclination to eat, and what they do eat causes them pain and distress.

This Digestive Cordial of the Shakers corrects any stomach derangement at once. It makes thin people plump. Every one will be greatly interested to read the little book which has been placed in the hands of druggists for free distribution.

Dr. John on Ingersollism.

On Friday night Dr. John delivered his new lecture, "Did Man Make God or God Make Man?" at English's Opera House, Indianapolis. The Sentinel says:

The distinguished divine met with a most enthusiastic reception and his lecture, which is an answer to the arguments of Robert G. Ingersoll, is one of most brilliant thought. "Did Man Make God, or Did God Make Man?" was his subject, and it was touched upon in a most admirable way. In Dr. John's distinguished agnostic he was a worthy foe, and the guns that Dr. John brings to bear upon the witticisms and expressions of Ingersoll are of a calibre to break the force of the arguments of the agnostic against the Christian religion and faith.

Dr. John has a splendid presence and he speaks in a quick, clever manner that is readily understood. His audience last night, which filled English's opera house, was in full sympathy with him, and he held the undivided attention of his hearers for fully two hours in his assault upon agnosticism. The Indianapolis Christian Endeavor and the Epworth League local unions had the lecture in charge. While there were hundreds of church people in the house there were a very large number of faces seen at the Ingersoll lectures, and these listened with rapt attention to the remarks of the lecturer and seemed deeply interested with his points.

In his introduction Dr. John stated that he was not in the lecture field and before his audience on a self-imposed errand, but by the bidding of his conscience, which led him to make answer to the specific objections of the modern agnostic for the benefit of the young men of the day, so many of whom had requested him to give them light upon the statements of Ingersoll and his followers.

He said that he did not call young men sinners because they were doubters, but urged faith on their part in the Bible and its teachings. He stated that Mr. Ingersoll objects to the Bible as a text book because it is not a good one, and then stated that Ingersoll was not in sympathy with the public schools either. There is nothing of mathematics in his lecture on Shakespeare, nor is there anything of love in his lecture on "Skulls". Dr. John also said that many of Ingersoll's statements are foolish, some are frivolous, some are not true, some half true and some overdrawn. Some he said are true, and he spoke particularly of his teachings of justice. He predicted that the pictures of the happy homes presented by the agnostic would only be realized when the gospel of Christ universally prevails.

Mr. Ingersoll's claims that the Christian religion and its reputed author were both man made, and are therefore no better than the men who made them, were presented.

Dr. John, in his answer, classified all the objections in two distinct ways, as follows: Moral objections against the character of God and intellectual objections against the revelation. Dr. John placed the agnostic and the believer in the maker on equal grounds. He insisted upon a discussion of the case in a scientific manner. Ingersoll's objections to the Christian system, Dr. John stated, are because the scheme is unscientific, and in answer he gave a number of theories of evolution. The moral objections to Jehovah's alleged cruelty were touched upon. Dr. John said that life is by hypothesis the gift of God in trust, and that Ingersoll tacitly accepts the trust in that he accepts the advantages derived from the trust, though he talks against it.

In closing the lecture Dr. John drew a vivid contrast of what agnosticism proposes and, on the other hand, what the Christian scheme promises to the race and the individual. The logic and reasoning throughout the lecture were most brilliant.

At Indianapolis a bogus coffee is on the market. It is being sold in some of the stores as Java. The grains are made of flour, colored black and flavored with coffee. Here's a problem for you: A man found a ten dollar bill and paid the grocer and took a receipt. The grocer paid the real estate agent the money for rent. The agent paid the ten dollars to the man who owned the property, who happened to be the man who lost the bill. He deposited the bill in the bank and it was returned to him as counterfeit. Was there anything made or lost in the series of transaction?

His audience last night, which filled English's opera house, was in full sympathy with him, and he held the undivided attention of his hearers for fully two hours in his assault upon agnosticism. The Indianapolis Christian Endeavor and the Epworth League local unions had the lecture in charge. While there were hundreds of church people in the house there were a very large number of faces seen at the Ingersoll lectures, and these listened with rapt attention to the remarks of the lecturer and seemed deeply interested with his points.

In his introduction Dr. John stated that he was not in the lecture field and before his audience on a self-imposed errand, but by the bidding of his conscience, which led him to make answer to the specific objections of the modern agnostic for the benefit of the young men of the day, so many of whom had requested him to give them light upon the statements of Ingersoll and his followers.

He said that he did not call young men sinners because they were doubters, but urged faith on their part in the Bible and its teachings. He stated that Mr. Ingersoll objects to the Bible as a text book because it is not a good one, and then stated that Ingersoll was not in sympathy with the public schools either. There is nothing of mathematics in his lecture on Shakespeare, nor is there anything of love in his lecture on "Skulls". Dr. John also said that many of Ingersoll's statements are foolish, some are frivolous, some are not true, some half true and some overdrawn. Some he said are true, and he spoke particularly of his teachings of justice. He predicted that the pictures of the happy homes presented by the agnostic would only be realized when the gospel of Christ universally prevails.

Mr. Ingersoll's claims that the Christian religion and its reputed author were both man made, and are therefore no better than the men who made them, were presented.

Dr. John, in his answer, classified all the objections in two distinct ways, as follows: Moral objections against the character of God and intellectual objections against the revelation. Dr. John placed the agnostic and the believer in the maker on equal grounds. He insisted upon a discussion of the case in a scientific manner. Ingersoll's objections to the Christian system, Dr. John stated, are because the scheme is unscientific, and in answer he gave a number of theories of evolution. The moral objections to Jehovah's alleged cruelty were touched upon. Dr. John said that life is by hypothesis the gift of God in trust, and that Ingersoll tacitly accepts the trust in that he accepts the advantages derived from the trust, though he talks against it.

In closing the lecture Dr. John drew a vivid contrast of what agnosticism proposes and, on the other hand, what the Christian scheme promises to the race and the individual. The logic and reasoning throughout the lecture were most brilliant.

Dr. John on Ingersollism.

On Friday night Dr. John delivered his new lecture, "Did Man Make God or God Make Man?" at English's Opera House, Indianapolis. The Sentinel says:

The distinguished divine met with a most enthusiastic reception and his lecture, which is an answer to the arguments of Robert G. Ingersoll, is one of most brilliant thought. "Did Man Make God, or Did God Make Man?" was his subject, and it was touched upon in a most admirable way. In Dr. John's distinguished agnostic he was a worthy foe, and the guns that Dr. John brings to bear upon the witticisms and expressions of Ingersoll are of a calibre to break the force of the arguments of the agnostic against the Christian religion and faith.

Dr. John has a splendid presence and he speaks in a quick, clever manner that is readily understood. His audience last night, which filled English's opera house, was in full sympathy with him, and he held the undivided attention of his hearers for fully two hours in his assault upon agnosticism. The Indianapolis Christian Endeavor and the Epworth League local unions had the lecture in charge. NO REST, NO SLEEP.

How Energy and Ambition are Killed.

Vitality and Health Destroyed by Wakeful Nights.

Strong and Steady Nerves a Necessity.

To Neglect Them Means Certain Ruin.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Gives Strength and Vigor.

How many thousands to-day suffer from sleeplessness caused by nervous weakness. It is one of the incidents of American life, and you who read these lines, are no doubt one of the great throng. After the day is done and when its cares ought to cease, you wish that they might fold their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal away. When night has drawn her sable curtains and all nature seems in repose, your weary eyelids long for that tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep. What would you not give for the rest you had in the olden times. But it is denied you. The long hours are full of weakness and weariness, and the coming day brings only headache and heartache, impaired strength and exhausted nerves as you drag through its duties.

There is no burden so painful, and no loss so wasting. It wrecks the body and impairs the mind. It is the fearful harbinger of insanity. It has filled our asylums with its victims. You know this and gloomily dread the future. Weak nervous, and discouraged, the least excitement prostrates you, and you are always worrying over anticipated trouble. Nothing goes right, and you often feel like despairing. You do not feel equal to the burden you once bore so easily.

Take heed while it is time. You are in a whirlwind of destruction. You are in the very Niagara of our nervous modern life. Do not delay. Safety is right at hand, if you will but accept it. That loss of appetite, gas in the stomach, torpid liver, constipation, nervousness, headache, etc., are but the first symptoms of the danger to come. It can be avoided, but only by acting at once.

Thousands have stood where you now stand confronted by the same frightful consequences, and have been cured and restored to health and happiness by that wonderful enchanter of sleep, that marvelous restorer of nerve energy and physical strength, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is purely vegetable and entirely harmless.

Mrs. L. L. Gumprecht, who resides at 198 Blue Hill ave., Boston, Mass., says:

"After having had an attack of the grippe I was feeling very weak and completely run down. I could not sleep, eat or work. I was so weak in the limbs I could not walk or work. I was very miserable, and I thought I should die. I lost all interest in everything. I had great distress from the little food I could eat."

"After taking three bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy I was entirely cured of all these complaints. I feel like a different woman."

This grand restorative for the nerves, Dr. Greene's Nervura, does not contain a particle of anything injurious, and can be given to restless and sleepless infants, nervous children or the most delicate invalid with absolute certainty of beneficial results. Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th st., New York City, the most successful physician in curing nervous and chronic diseases, discovered it, and he can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

George W. Black's New Business Venture.

Mr. George W. Black, who has been one of our most successful and enterprising horse men for many years, and whose name is familiar to almost every horse buyer and horse seller in the country, has taken a new departure in this line of business, having bought a half interest in the large and extensive Deil Arena Auction, Commission and Sale Stables, 392 to 400 East Washington street, Indianapolis, Ind. His partners are Messrs. Warman and Chamberlain. Mr. Black will spend only a portion of his time at Indianapolis, and will make a special point of being there on Tuesday of each week, on which day the weekly auction sale will be made, but he will continue his business so long and so successfully conducted in this city. On Tuesday, Oct. 15, will take place the first of the series of auction sales by this firm—it will be the largest auction sale of horses ever held in Indianapolis; over 400 head will be placed on sale, consisting of heavy draft, express, grocery, farm and general purpose horses. In speed, they will offer trotters and pacers, with and without records; gentlemen's drivers, single and in pairs; saddle horses, ponies, and everything that belongs to the horse family.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of Mr. Black's Putnam county friends at this sale—it will be well worth attending, and will begin promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The unique symposium by representative women on Life's social problem now appearing in The Arena is attracting well-deserved attention. In the October number of this review, Julia A. Kellogg writes on "Land and Money;" Charlotte Perkins Stetson on "The Solution of the Labor Question;" and Alice Thatcher Post on "The Great Neighbor."

The Feeding Value of Oats.

The price paid farmers for oats at the present time is lower than for many years, perhaps the lowest in the history of the United States. From 1870 to 1895, the lowest average value for oats in the United States in any one year was 22.9 for 1889. The quotations on oats in Chicago markets to-day are 10 to 12 cents less per bushel than for a year ago at this time. At Lafayette, Indiana, farmers are paid 16 cents per bushel for No. 2 white oats, and extra choice old oats can be bought of commission men for 20 cents.

One hundred pounds of average oats and corn are each supposed to contain the following amounts of food nutrients that are digested by the animal body.

Protein. Carbohydrates. Fat. Oats.....2.25.....48.34.....4.18 Corn.....7.92.....66.69.....4.28

Protein is the flesh or muscle forming material, while Carbohydrates and Fat are important fat forming foods. Of the two foods, protein is the most expensive to produce. The so-called "rich" foods are so designated on account of having a larger per centage of protein than the others, and they are

The possibilities are that Tom Taggart will be the next Democratic nominee for Governor of Indiana.

In 1896 strength to the Democratic position would be secured by a short campaign and a Western nominee for President.

If this thing goes on, the learned professions will rank ahead in deeds of blood and plunder—clergymen and doctors lead in these lines, and it is nip and tuck between them.

The suggestion is made that Indiana celebrate its 100th anniversary, in 1900, with a Mid Continent Exposition of mammoth proportions, and managed that the masses may enjoy it.

At Peru, Ind., last week, they had to close one of the public schools because of a bed bug invasion of immense proportions—no explanation as to where they came from has been made public.

ONLY $1.50 will pay for the STAR-PRESS and Weekly Indianapolis Sentinel for a whole year—the evenings are growing long, and now is a good time to take advantage of this offer to supply yourself with good reading matter.

CHEADLE, the Republican Ex-Congressman from the Lafayette district, is working up the silver sentiment in the Republican party so thoroughly, that Harrison and other Republican leaders are worried—they're trying to choke him off.

HARRISON is coy and an adept at flirting in politics. Just at present he pretends that the Republican party is attempting to force the next Presidential nomination upon him. His protest is weak however; vowing "he'll never consent, consented," is about the size of it.

INDIANA will doubtless celebrate her centennial anniversary, in 1900, in great style and with becoming splendor. An exchange says: It should be on a large scale but not so large as to cause an overreaching that would end in a farce. While no doubt the greater part of the celebration would of necessity be but a passing show there ought to be something about it that would be lasting and left as a sort of mile stone of the event. A permanent building to which every county of the state could contribute something would be a most fitting memorial of the event. In the building could be displayed the relics of the past in all lines of industry and art together with the best of the present.

THE newspaper publisher is not billeted on a bed of roses; in the eyes of many readers he prints those things he ought not to print, and leaves unprinted those things which he ought to print. Readers do not take into consideration the fact that the newspaper man cannot be omniscient; that he cannot make a note of things he does not see or hear, hence failure to do so is not criminal negligence. Every wide awake newspaper man has a desire to catch on to the news and print it, and he is always under obligations to those who gave him pointers leading to a news item. If you know any local news, tell us about it—the local happenings, the outings and incomings, the births, marriages, deaths, and other events of a newsy character, and they will properly appear in the local news columns.

THE Banner-Times is worried and cries out in agony because the STAR-PRESS has not "rushed to the defense" of Poor Farm Superintendent Mark. The B-T. should take an opiate and something with a smack to it to steady its nerves. It is not necessary to "rush to the defense" of any one until charges are made against them. Insinuations and innuendoes are not worthy of notice; if any one has any direct charges to make against Mr. Mark he should step boldly to the front and make them; if not they are doubtless without foundation in fact and unworthy the attention of the public. Furthermore, the Board of Commissioners of Putnam county are reputable gentlemen, and they look after the public interests of the county in a careful, business-like manner; they would not permit wrong doing of any sort by the Superintendent of the Poor Farm, and they would be certain to know of it, if anything of the kind occurred. Defense against charges not made is frequently regarded as a confession of wrong doing.

EXPERTS in the wool trade, who have knowledge of all the facts, say that the wool growers of the country will receive $5,000,000 more for their wool this year, than they received for a large clip under the workings of the McKinley bill.

INDIANAPOLIS DEMOCRATIC.

Tom Taggart's Majority is 3,500.

The Whole Democratic Ticket Successful.

The election in Indianapolis Tuesday, proved the democratic party over whom the republican papers tried to sing its funeral song, at the last election to be a mighty live corpse. Indianapolis a great republican city, could not mismanage its official affairs, could not discriminate, in favor of wealthy corporations, could not impose upon its own business interests and long sustain its mismanagement. A city as large as Indianapolis, must be conducted upon business principles and conducting municipal affairs upon business principles means more than honest dealing. The Denny administration not only tried to throttle the fair play, fair dealing, and equal rights, but drove from Indianapolis wealth, and prevented wealth from coming there.

The Denny administration was condemned in such terms as will be an everlasting lesson. Street car franchises are to be sold for what they are worth, and not given away; sewer frauds are not to be repeated; natural gas monopolies are not to be tolerated and the city is not to be swamped with the burden of debt by improvements that are beyond all reason. Honest government in the interest of the masses is what is wanted, and is what is demanded. Never before have the people so pronouncedly condemned a city administration. New York preachers and Logansport politicians are not running the affairs of Indianapolis and nonresidents will find they have a poor conception of what that city wants and needs.

The democratic party stands for business methods, and business methods means more than honest dealings. It stands for progress. It stands for the enforcement of the law. It stands for the welfare of the masses. Thomas Taggart, the great business man and organizer, representing thoroughly democratic doctrine was the best man for the place. Not only democrats but republicans, negroes and preachers supported the popular and able candidate, Indianapolis will have a breathing spell for the next two years. Tom Taggart will be the Carter Harrison, of Indianapolis. The barn yard fowl friend of every man and woman has a right to crow. God almighty and the democrats can very easily thrash the devil and the republicans.

AS VIEWED IN WASHINGTON. Special to the Courier Journal.

Washington, Oct. 8. The result of the election in Indianapolis today, the home of ex-President Harrison, was a splendid personal triumph for that fearless and gallant Democrat, Tom Taggart, and is also a great victory for the Democratic party. It means much for Democracy next year—certainly the Legislation and Governor, if not the electoral vote of the State. The proscriptive policy of the Republican party when it gains power is the cause for the upheaval in the capital of Indiana. It was the Baxter law of 1873 that turned Indiana from a Republican to a Democratic State, and now it is the Nicholson law that has disgusted free men with Republican rule. History repeats itself often in a country like ours. As for Taggart, he may be Governor in 1900, and then—why not? Look at Mr. Cleveland's record.

Obituary.

Died, Sept. 29, 1895, Reathy Glenn little daughter of George M. and Rena M. Lewis, aged 2 years, 1 month and 16 days; funeral services conducted by Elder Tincher. The remains were interred at Walnut Chapel, Reathy was a docile and bright child. She seemed to love every one, but she loved her best and when he took her little icy hand he said: "A lily too fair for this earth; come and shine above." Dear parents, we know you have done all on this earth that you know how, but the Savior can do more. "He giveth and He taketh away." You think it hard, dear parents; yet life is better, offer the soul of your child to God. The dear Reathy is not only a great loss to the parents, sisters and brother, but also to the other relatives.

Two little hands are sweetly folded upon a sand..... The little heart within bath numbered its throbs and gone to rest..... Two little eyes are closed forever to earths..... Two little cherub wings now hover in heaven's golden light..... Two feet have ceased to travel upon the shores of time..... A little gem released from the trouble has gone above to shine..... Oh what a comfort dear redeemer, thy grace and love hath given..... That when life's winter day is ended, We'll meet our child in heaven. A Cousin.

A Novel Scene.

Brazil, Oct. 8. Special.—A reunion of company F of Thirty-first Indiana regiment was held a few days ago at the residence of Gilbert Liden, in the southwest part of Clay county, attending which was witnessed a most phenomenal phase, perhaps without a parallel. Grandmother Letsinger, now eighty-five years of age, was present and addressed the old soldiers, who contributed a fine six and a half sons-in-law to the service of her country, only five of whom returned to her.

Annual Report of Commissioner Lamoreux, of the General Land Office.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—S. W. Lamoreux, commissioner of the general land office, in his annual report says that the decline of land office business, as noted in the last report, still continues. Compared with 1894 there has been a decrease in land entries of 10,005 and of 6,016,685 acres entered upon; a decrease of final entries of 6,584 and 350,059 acres entered upon, and a decrease of cash receipts of $734,370. The cash receipts for the year was $2,033,454. The total area of vacant public land in the United States, in acres, is as follows: Surveyed, 313,837,853; unsurveyed, 285,245,607.

A FATAL WEDDING.

Seventy-Five Guests Mysteriously Poisoned—Two of Them Dead.

DURHAM, Ia., Oct. 7.—Two deaths occurred near Sabula, Jackson county, Friday as the result of a poisoning at H. D. Gage's wedding, three weeks ago, which has affected seventy-five or 100 of the 300 guests. The groom's condition is reported dangerous. The physicians from several towns are unable to agree whether the poisoning was caused by pork or by pressed chicken, and have forwarded to Chicago for analysis the biceps muscles of George Bryant, who died Friday.

Celebrated Her Anniversary.

GIBSON CITY, Ill., Oct. 9.—Ten thousand people Tuesday celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the laying out of this city. On this occasion the city accepted the new waterworks, costing $30,000. EARTHQUAKE IN ILLINOIS.

Inhabitants of Wenona Greatly Alarmed by the Shock—Damage to Coal Mines.

WENONA, Ill., Oct. 8.—The inhabitants of this town were greatly alarmed Monday morning by an earthquake. The shock occurred at 1:20 Monday morning, and was preceded by a rumbling noise that awakened nearly everyone. A few minutes later there was a shock. Then there was a lull for two or three minutes, followed by more rumbling and then more quaking, which was so violent as to shake dishes from the pantry shelves. Many people ran to the streets in their fright and in some instances women screamed for aid. It was over an hour before quiet was restored and many people were so alarmed that they sat up until daylight. The shock was so violent that a good deal of damage was done to the coal mines in this vicinity. Slate and rock were shaken from the roofs and veins, and there is scarcely a mine but will have to expend $200 or $300 to repair the damage.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.

A Platform Falls While Laying a Cornerstone at Loraine, O.

A Little Girl Loses Her Life—More Than a Score of Other Persons Are Injured, Several of Whom May Die—The Contractors to Blame.

LORAIN, O., Oct. 7.—The laying of the cornerstone for the new St. Mary's Catholic church in this city Sunday was accompanied by an awful disaster. Fully 5,000 people were in attendance and the priests were about ready to proceed with the services when an accident occurred that created a panic and killed a little girl and wounded about twenty-five more, several of them fatally.

The foundation for the building extended about 10 feet above the basement bottom, and on this was erected a platform where the ceremonies were being held. Over 1,000 persons were standing on the floor when a section of it, containing about 300 people, sank beneath its burden and precipitated them into the pit. The section which gave way was in two wings, and as it sank it formed a death trap for the people, from which there was no chance to escape. The pit resembled an inverted roof of very steep slant, the ends being closed up by stone walls, and into this it was that there were crowded men, women and children in one struggling heap.

A Panic.

As the floor gave way, a great cry went up from the multitude, but in another second it had fallen and carried in its ruin the lives of several persons. Those at the top of the mass escaped easily, but when the pit was partly emptied those victims still entrapped could not clamor up the steep sides, and they trampled each other like so many wild creatures, the strong getting on top and the weak being crushed beneath the great weight. Although there were a thousand people ready to rush to the rescue they could render very little aid to the helpless persons in the pit, and several minutes elapsed before ropes and ladders could be procured. When help finally reached the unfortunate victims, several had already been trampled to death and others fatally injured. The old Catholic church near by was turned into a hospital and morgue. Into this were carried those who were killed and injured. The following is a list so far as ascertained:

Killed.

Rose McGee, of Loraine, skull fractured.

Fatally Injured.

Katie Griffin, 8 years of age, of Loraine, injured internally; Mrs. Mary McGrath, of Loraine, left leg crushed and injured internally; Mrs. John Euston, an aged lady of Loraine, left leg crushed, chest injured; Mrs. Cornelius Sullivan, of Loraine, spine injured, left leg crushed; Mary Sieder, an aged lady of Loraine, chest crushed and hurt internally; Mrs. Mike Kelling, of Loraine, injured internally; John Feldkamp, of Loraine, hurt internally; Miss Kate Beckwith, of Sheffield, both legs broken and hurt internally; Mrs. Margaret Mackert, of Loraine, hurt internally; Nicholas Wagner, of Ellyria, skull fractured.

Seriously Hurt.

Nellie Dollard, of Loraine, head cut; Leo Theobald, 3 years old, back of head cut; Col. W. I. Brown, of Loraine, right arm and left leg bruised; Mrs. John Fox, of Sheffield, both legs broken; Mrs. William Burgett, of Loraine, hurt internally; Mrs. Mary Latimer, of Carleisle Center, right leg crushed; Mrs. Mary O'Keefe, of Loraine, hurt internally; John Martin, of Loraine, left leg broken; John Euston, of Loraine, back hurt; Mrs. I. M. Bruce, of Hoganville, left ankle broken; William Ryan, of Loraine, right leg broken; Mrs. O'Keefe, of Loraine, leg crushed, will have to be amputated.

Contractors to Blame.

Notwithstanding the shock of the accident, the priests succeeded in quieting the crowd and continued the services. Very Rev. Mgr. Boff, of Cleveland, delivered the sermon. The contractors are said to be responsible for the accident, poor timbers being used for the support of the platform. The mayor and other city officials lent a helping hand in caring for the injured. The town is in deep mourning over the accident.

SMITH WILL BE HANGED.

Murderer of His Child and Sister-in-Law to Be Executed.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 8.—Charles N. Smith, who murdered his daughter Louise Smith, and his sister-in-law, Edna Buchert, nine days ago and pleaded guilty before Judge Vail on Thursday, October 3, was on Monday sentenced to be hanged Friday, November 29.

Gibson Gives Bonds.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 8.—Hon. Milroy H. Gibson, of Chicago, against whom indictment for bribery was returned by the Sangamon county grand jury, came to this city Tuesday morning and gave bond in the sum of $2,500, with S. D. Scholes, an attorney of this city, as surety. He would make no statement.

Milwaukee's Population.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 7.—According to the returns of County Clerk A. F. Zentner, the total population of the city of Milwaukee, as shown by the new enumeration, is 249,290, an increase of 2,138 over the first census. This makes the total population of Milwaukee county 287,992.

John Brown's Handcuffs.

LINCOLN, Ill., Oct. 7.—Daniel Lizer, living near this city, found in an old trunk the first manacles worn by John Brown, of Ossawatimie, during his imprisonment at Harper's Ferry. Mr. Lizer's brother was in charge of the armory at the time and so got the handcuffs.

Advocates the Single Tax.

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 8.—The thirteenth annual convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor is in session here. In his address Tuesday President Riefler advocated the single tax and urged adoption of Henry George's theory.

A Mill in Ashes.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 8.—The mill of the Smith & Dousman Milling Co. at Depere was burned Tuesday night with its contents. The loss is about $20,000, partly insured.

PAINE OF NEAL SMITH.

Taken from a Stockade at Coal City and Tortured to Death.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 7.—Neal Smith, the negro who assaulted and murdered Maggie Henderson at Coal City, was taken from the stockade Friday night by a mob of 200 men and lynched, after being mutilated in a terrible manner. The sheriff and Jailer Ed Cox, with several men, were on guard, but the crowd refused to listen to reason and threatened to tear down the stockade and burn it unless Smith was delivered. Smith was then turned over to the crowd, who led him to a point near where the assault was committed. He confessed his guilt and was then treated to torture which is unparalleled in history.

After being mutilated in a fearful manner by the father, William Henderson, who cut off the negro's ears, the victim was seized and held while one of the crowd pounded his fingers, joint by joint, one finger at a time, until his hand was a shapeless mass of bloody jelly. This was because in the struggle to subdue Miss Henderson he had bitten off one of her fingers. Each man in the crowd then took a turn at shooting at him, till, when he died, he must have had four or five pounds of lead in him. He was literally shot to pieces, and the bloody pulp, which only an hour before had been Neal Smith, was thrown into a hastily prepared pile of brushwood and burned until not a scrap of bone remained.

TOWN IN A PANIC.

Two More Deaths Result from the Sabala (La.) Poisoning.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 8.—The state board of health has received an appeal from Sabula, where a large part of the population are suffering from the wholesale poisoning which occurred at a wedding three weeks ago. Two more died Monday, making four dead. D. C. Gage, groom at the wedding, will die, and others are almost certain to do so. The walls of the victims can be heard all over the town day and night. Over 100 are now confined by the complaint. The doctors believe it is trichinosis, but the symptoms reported to the state board, which has sent a representative to Sabula, are those of cholera. The doctors there are exhausted and the town is in a condition of panic.

TO WALK AROUND THE WORLD.

Charles Blomberg, of Rockford, Wagers He Can Do It in 201 Days.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 5.—Charles Blomberg, eldest son of August Blomberg, a prominent banker of this city, has wagered $5,000 that he can walk around the world in 201 days. This represents the time he will be actually on the road and is exclusive of time taken up in steamship transportation. Blomberg's route is from New York to San Francisco, through Japan, China, Russia, India, Persia and Egypt, thence through Europe to Southampton, which is the end of his pilgrimage. Blomberg is 24 years of age and is a great athlete. He will have to walk about 45 miles a day on the average to win the wager and has already started from New York.

DEATH IN A MINE.

Terrible Explosion of Gas at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Kills at Least Ten Men.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 8.—Shortly after 5 o'clock Monday afternoon an explosion of gas occurred in the Dorrance mine, operated by the Lehigh Valley Coal company, which is situated in the northwestern part of the city. At 8 o'clock five men, all badly burned, were brought to the surface. At midnight the bodies of the members of the engineer corps and six laborers were brought to the surface by the rescuing party.

The Following are dead:

William Cahill, W. L. Jones and L. Owens, mining engineers; Daniel Reese, mine boss, and six unknown laborers. Injured—Robert Blanchard and William Miller fatally; George Lally, Michael Moss and Joseph Murphy, seriously burned.

After the Turks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 8.—The representatives of the six powers sent a collective note to the Turkish government demanding the prompt institution of a rigorous inquiry into the recent rioting, bloodshed and wholesale imprisonment of Armenians there and demanding the release of all prisoners who are innocent of wrong doing and the cessation of arrests.

Shattered in Her Struggle.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Oct. 8.—Mary Kunze, wife of a prominent farmer living near here, was pronounced dead by her attending physician after a long illness. Eighteen hours later, and just before the time of the funeral she arose in her coffin and asked for a drink of water. It was thought she would recover.

Has a Month to Pay His Fine.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—H. J. McCoy, secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, who was fined $250 by Judge Murphy for making the remark to one of the Darrant jurors: "If you don't hang him we will hang you," was Saturday morning given by the court until November 1 in which to pay the fine.

Cleveland Gets It.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 8.—The Temple cup, being contested for by the Cleveland and Baltimore clubs of the National league, was won by the former by a score of four games out of five.

HIS CAREER ENDS.

Death at Washington of Gen. William Mahone, of Virginia.

He Was a Picturesque Figure at the Capital, and a Stubborn Fighter Both as a Confederate General and a United States Senator.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Gen. William Mahone died at Chamberlin's hotel at 1 o'clock Tuesday from the effects of a paralytic stroke sustained last Monday, September 30. He had been totally unconscious for more than forty-eight hours previous to death and passed away seemingly without pain. Mrs. Mahone, Butler and William Mahone, Jr., his sons; Mrs. O. M. McGill, his daughter; L. L. Manry, of Southampton county, Va., a nephew, and Capt. Rogers, secretary of Virginia state republican committee and former secretary to Gen. Mahone, were at the bedside when the end came.

Arrangements for Funeral.

Arrangements for the funeral were made soon after Gen. Mahone died. The remains will be taken to Petersburg, Va., by train this morning. The services will be held this afternoon at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Petersburg, and the body will then be taken to the place of interment. The honorary pall bearers will be officers of "Mahone's brigade," and the body bearers will be soldiers who served in that organization. Gen. Mahone was paying one of his frequent visits to Washington when he was paralyzed last Monday. He was partly conscious and able to take nourishment until Sunday morning last. From that time until his death he did not open his eyes and was unable to take any nourishment.

Sorrow in Virginia.

PETERSBURG, Va., Oct. 8.—The announcement of the death of Gen. Mahone was received in Petersburg with sincere regret and especially by those who served in his old brigade during the war. His remains will arrive here at 10 o'clock this morning and the funeral services will be held at St. Paul's Episcopal church and will be conducted by Rev. C. R. Haines and Rev. John Ridout. The honorary and active pall-bearers will be made up of officers and privates of Gen. Mahone's old confederate command.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 9.—The news of Gen. Mahone's death was received with general regret. Pickett Buchanan camp, confederate veterans, through its commander, telegraphed Mrs. Mahone its expression of condolence. Numbers of the veterans of Mahone's brigade from this section will attend the funeral at Petersburg.

Sketch of His Life.

The country will long remember Gen. William Mahone as one of the most picturesque figures and characters in public life during the last thirty years. Exceptionally slight in stature and frame, he has been a marked man in great assemblages. His peculiar style of dress, and especially his hat, attracted attention to him. This broad-brimmed, soft-felt headgear seemed out of proportion to the tiny form beneath it. But beneath this shade sparkled a pair of the keenest eyes ever possessed by man.

Gen. Mahone marks an epoch in the history of the United States since the late war. He has been during the last quarter of a century, the central figure in Virginia politics, and at one time his slight figure was the nucleus of one of the most violent political storms ever waged in congress.

He was in his 6th year. His favorite sobriquet was "Hero of the Crater," won by his wonderful courage in the attack on Petersburg when the federal forces sprung a mine beneath the confederate defense. He fought like a tiger, and later historians give to him almost alone the credit of keeping Petersburg from the union hands by retarding before sunset the shattered confederate lines. He had joined the confederate army at once after the secession, participated in the capture of the Norfolk navy yard in 1861 and raised and commanded the Sixth regiment of Virginia. He was commissioned a brigadier general in March, 1864, and six months later became a major general. At the close of the war he returned to his original work of engineering and became president of the Norfolk & Tennessee railroad.

His Political Career.

A spirit of leadership led him into the political arena and he at once assumed a foremost position in the internal affairs of Virginia, which was at that time laden with an enormous debt that soon became the issue of vital importance between the political parties. He was elected to the United States senate in 1876. He was like a firebrand cast into a mass of dry tinder, and from the peculiar attitude that he at once assumed he caused one of the most bitter controversies and stubborn deadlocks ever known in the history of that body.

Mahone at last acted with the republicans and gave them the organization of the senate. His course brought down upon his head the wrath of the democrats, but the republicans received him with open arms and the federal patronage in Virginia was turned over to him. Since that time he has been par excellence the republican leader in Virginia. He served in the senate until 1887, when he was defeated. Although he has since resided almost constantly in this city he retained the republican leadership in Virginia and in 1890 was a candidate for governor.

He was best known here of late years by his efforts to secure the purchase by the government, for a printing office site, a square of ground owned by him. The quality figure of its owner was always seen in the lobbies of both house and senate at the close of every session and he was considered a great power in the third house.

Put Nearly for Stealing Seven Dollars.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Oct. 7.—The first man to be convicted under a law enacted by the legislature last winter, making the punishment for highway robbery imprisonment for life, are Tullis and Henry Welsh. They were convicted at Tecumseh for robbing an old man of seven dollars.

Sherry Dan McAnan, of Wabash county, found two large iron bars concealed in the berth of a prisoner in the county jail. The bars were passed in through the windows by friends of some of the prisoners to facilitate a jail delivery.

Fire the other afternoon destroyed the Arnold hotel at Milford. Loss, $11,000; insured for $1,200 in the Ohio Mutual.

At Union City Bert Morris died at 4 o'clock the other morning from the result of injuries received in a runaway. He was a well to do young man, and is the third child of Mr. and Mrs. Morris who has died from accident.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

HOWARD county divorce docket is heavy this fall.

An Elkhart freak is a Siamese twin set of kittens.

A LONG-DISTANCE telephone may be put in at Seymour.

J. M. Hooker was acquitted at Tip-top of altering a tally-sheet.

At Kendallville, the other day, while 20,000 people were on the grounds of the Northern Indiana fair, the horse barns were discovered to be on fire. It took hard work by the people and the fire department to prevent the grounds being swept clear of buildings. Four hundred feet of barns were burned and a number of valuable horses killed. Great excitement prevailed. Gov. Matthews was present during the conflagration. The total loss was about $10,000.

Two ball clubs at Warsaw played for the benefit of the poor and took in $133.25.

During a storm at Elkhart five electric alarm boxes were burned out by lightning.

Gov. MATTHEWS will make eight or ten speeches, during four or five days, in Ohio, in the latter part of October. D. CARVER, a boot and shoe merchant of Columbia City, assigned, with liabilities of $5,000 and assets $7,000.

JAMES FERGUSON was crushed to death in one of the furnaces at the new steel mill at Alexandria.

"SQUIRE" PARKER's team was being driven across the I. & V. railroad, near Centerton, by two men in a wagon, when a special freight train dashed on them, killing both horses and wrecking the wagon. The men escaped.

An Elkhart woman had Alonzo Hulee arrested for trespass because he persisted in visiting her after she told him to stay away. A jury dismissed him.

The state appropriation for 1899 will be available on and after November 1. The present year will leave probably $50,000 on hand, and to this will be added the portions of money which come in from counties and are attached to various funds.

The police chiefs of Indiana, at Terre Haute, the other day decided to hold the next state convention at Indianapolis at some date in 1899 when the criminal courts are not in session.

At Montpelier David Caines and William Grose were killed by the explosion of a nitroglycerin can. They had built a fire over it while coon hunting.

The two-year-old daughter of Phil Borden, living near Helmer, fell from a haymow, striking on a lot of scrap iron. She was fatally injured.

S. G. COPELAND, while cutting down trees near Helmer, was caught by a falling limb and crushed in a horrible manner. His recovery is doubtful.

At Madison, Harry "Red" King, who shot and killed Basil Angell, last May, was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to the penitentiary for three years.

At Indianapolis the jury in the bank wrecker's case, the other afternoon, returned a verdict of guilty as to Grant Coffin and not guilty as to his brother Percival. The Coffins were at the head of the Indianapolis Cabinet Co. and were charged with getting nearly $400,000 from the Indianapolis National bank, with the connivance of its president, Theodore P. Haughey, now in prison. At the former trial both brothers were convicted, but the supreme court reversed the case.

The Good Citizens' league of Indiana, in convention at Indianapolis, sent a telegram to Gov. Culberson and the Texas legislature congratulating them on their action in suppressing the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight "in the interest of good citizenship."

WALTER BURGE, recently paroled from the Northern prison by Gov. Matthews, was struck by a freight train at Lake and killed. An hour later Fred Rice, a Chicago & Erie brakeman, was caught between two cars at Hurlburt and cut to pieces.

NINE trunks and all the baggage belonging to the colored people who held a camp meeting in the fair grounds at Huntington recently, were the other day attached for debts.

CHARLES WILSON, who is wanted at Huntington on a charge of forging a check for $80 on James R. Stack, was captured at Warsaw.

JACKSON AMOS, of Shelbyville, while handling timber in Morgan county, fell through a bridge with his team. Both legs were broken.

A. J. HINKLEY, aged sixty-four, a patient in the Central hospital for the insane, at Indianapolis, committed suicide by hanging himself with a towel. In the circuit court at Crown Point Judge Shirley has rendered his decision against the Lakeside Jockey club, which knocks out racing at the old Roby track until April 15. The new Sheffield track is running, but it is understood that Gov. Matthews will stop it in a day or so.

The Union Shoe Co., a large eastern manufacturing concern, will locate a shoe factory at Wellsboro, near LaPorte, that will give employment to four hundred men. Ohio capitalists are booming Wellsboro as the coming Birmingham of Indiana, and have already located a large number of industries.

At Union City Bert Morris died at 4 o'clock the other morning from the result of injuries received in a runaway. He was a well to do young man, and is the third child of Mr. and Mrs. Morris who has died from accident.

FIRE the other afternoon destroyed the Arnold hotel at Milford. Loss, $11,000; insured for $1,200 in the Ohio Mutual.

SHERIFF DAN MCANAN, of Wabash county, found two large iron bars concealed in the berth of a prisoner in the county jail. The bars were passed in through the windows by friends of some of the prisoners to facilitate a jail delivery.

BOLD BANDITS.

They Hold Up a Trolley Car in Chicago.

The Car Boarded by Five Masked Robbers Who Demand Tribute from the Eighteen Passengers Aboard—One of the Passengers Shot.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Five armed and masked road agents held up an electric car in the outskirts of the city between 8 and 9 o'clock Monday night and went through the passengers in regular train robber fashion. One passenger was shot and two or three others clubbed, and the robbers escaped without leaving a clew of any kind as to their identity. The spot selected for the robbery was near the Berwyn avenue crossing of Evanston avenue, the latter thoroughfare being the one used by the North Shore Electric Street Railroad company for its cars between the northern city limits and the suburban city of Evanston.

Boarded by Masked Men.

The car makes fast time along this stretch of the run, and Monday night it had eighteen passengers, two of whom were women. As the car approached Berwyn avenue, north-bound, the motorman noticed a group of men standing at the side of the track. At the moment he noticed the men two of them stepped out in front of the car and signalled to stop. As the car came to a standstill two of the robbers stepped upon the front platform and three ascended the steps of the rear platform. Then it was noticed that the men wore masks and their purpose was suspected.

Shut Off the Lights.

The suspicion was not formed in the minds of the passengers when one of the robbers opened the front door and said: "If you people behave yourselves and make no noise you won't get hurt. But you've got to keep quiet and give up what you've got." His remarks were reinforced with a huge revolver and the passengers were thinking about giving resistance when the lights in the car went out, the thieves having taken off the trolley pole and removed the generator wrench from the motorman so the power could not be governed. The darkness compelled the passengers to submit, and then the searching process was inaugurated.

All Were Robbed.

All of the eighteen occupants of the car were robbed of various amounts of money, watches and jewelry. The value of the plunder is not known, but will probably amount to between $500 and $800.

As the bandits entered A. E. Westman sat at the side of the car. In his hands he held a heavy cane. As the robbers entered he half raised it as if to strike. One of them seized it and wrenched it from his hands. Then the bandit poised his new weapon in the air and struck Westman a terrific blow in the face. It brought the blood spouting. It was the signal for a general attack—an attack without mercy or compassion. N. O. Johnson had tried to rise in his place. He was struck to the earth with a single blow from the cane. As he lurched forward with a great gasp in his head he was struck again. Then he lay still and white. The robbers bent over and wrenched his watch and chain from his pocket and slid them quickly into their own. One Man Shot.

A robber approached T. P. Nisbett and demanded his money. Nisbett arose from his seat and knocked the revolver up. Then he dealt the robber a terrific blow in the face that sent him reeling to the opposite side of the car. But it was only a moment. Recovering himself, the revolver dropped to the horizontal. At the same instant another robber struck Nisbett in the face and sent him to one side. It saved his life, for at that moment the shot was fired and the bullet pierced his leg at the knee.

Robbers Escape in a Hurry.

But the robbers knew that their shots would soon alarm the distant settlers. And another car was soon due. There was a signal from the shock-haired leader. Instantly the robbers rode down their victims on their way to the doors, and a moment later they were swallowed up in the dark. There were those who followed in their anger to trace the robbers. In Berwyn avenue the five men sprung into an old survey, laid the lash to the horses and rattled west, and were soon beyond pursuit. The police authorities were notified of the affair, and searched all night, but without result.

Saved His Money.

By his presence of mind Conductor Osborn saved the fares which he had collected during the day, and was therefore almost the only person on the car to escape the robbers. When the masked men began to beat the passengers the conductor grasped his money in his hand and dropped it all down in the space back of the seats where the windows fit down when they are open. In this way the money could not be reached. The entire time consumed by the robbers did not exceed five minutes, and the wounded victims arrived in Edgewater not more than an hour later.

CHARACTER OF ISABELLA.

The Beautiful Consort of Ferdinand Who Helped Columbus.

Isabella was a lady, she was a queen, and, above all she was an autocrat. Gracious and gentle in her manner, says R. Ulrick Burke's "A History of Spain," she brooked no opposition from prince or peer, and she soon made it known and felt throughout Spain that, although she was the daughter of John II. and the sister of Henry IV., her will was law in Castile. Beautiful, virtuous, discreet, with that highest expression of proud dignity that is seen in a peculiar simplicity of manner, with a hard heart and a fair countenance, an inflexible will, and a mild manner—something of a formalist, more of a bigot—Isabella united much that was characteristic of old Castile with not a little that was characteristic of new Spain. And if her boldness was inherited from the Cid, her bigotry was bequeathed to Philip II.

No man can read the history of the times without being struck by the enormous personal influence of Isabella. An accomplished horsewoman, a tireless traveler, indefatigable in her attention to business of state, the queen with her court moved about from place to place, swift to punish crime and to encourage virtue, boldly composing the differences and compelling the submission of rival nobles, frowning upon the laxity of the clergy, denouncing the heresy of the people and laying a heavy hand upon enemies of every degree and evil-doers of every class. In Andalusia the unaccustomed and unexpected presence of the sovereign was everywhere productive of peace and order. Even in the remotest districts of Galicia the royal power was felt. Over fifty fortresses, the stronghold of knightly robbers, were razed to the ground, and one thousand five hundred noble highwaymen were forced to fly the kingdom.

COTTON MILLS IN JAPAN.

The Industry Has Grown Rapidly in the Mikado's Realm.

Cotton manufacturing in Japan is the growth of the last fifteen years. Not a cotton mill, with one exception, of those now in operation was in operation prior to 1880, says the Industrial Record. There is now running in Kagoshima a mill of 3,030 spindles that has been in operation since 1893. In 1880 and 1881 an era of cotton manufacturing was inaugurated by the erection of 14,000 to 15,000 spindle mills. In 1882 a 61,200-spindle mill was put up at Osaka. The mill is the largest ever erected in Japan. There are two 30,000-spindles, one at Tokio and the other at Osaka. The latter location is the principal manufacturing center in the empire. Nearly, if not fully, one-half of the cotton spindles are to be found there. The cotton mills at Osaka are reported as paying average annual dividends of 18 per cent., the highest having been 28 per cent. and the lowest 8 per cent. Not more than about ten years ago the people depended almost wholly upon foreign products of factory-made cotton fabrics, while now not over a fourth of this demand comes from foreign sources. The Cotton Spinners' association of Japan is the most reliable source of information, and that placed the number of spindles in 1894 at 383,203, yet the Yokohama chamber of commerce placed the number in 1893 at about 800,000. Between these two authorities we put our estimate of 500,000 spindles. The cotton mills of Japan will never be able to spin from the native cotton very fine yarn. The cotton is not suitable for anything but for the spinning of coarse yarns.

NEVER GROW OLD.

Parts of the Physical System Which Never Wear Out.

In his work on the senile heart Dr. Balfour tells us that there are two parts of the human organism which, if wisely used, "largely escape senile failure." These two, says the Medical Record, are the brain and the heart. Persons who think have often wondered why brain workers, great statesmen and others, should continue to work with almost unimpaired mental activity and energy up to a period when most of the organs and functions of the body are in a condition of advanced senile decay. There is a physiological reason for this, and Dr. Balfour tells us what it is. The normal brain, he affirms, "remains vigorous to the last," and that "because its nutrition is especially provided for." About middle life, or a little later, the general arteries of the body begin to lose their elasticity and to slowly but surely dilate. They become, therefore, much less efficient carriers of the nutrient blood to the capillary areas. But this is not the case with the internal carotids, which supply the capillary areas of the brain. On the contrary, these large vessels, "continue to retain their pristine elasticity, so that the blood pressure remains normally higher than within the capillary area of any other organ in the body. The cerebral blood paths being thus kept open, the brain tissue is kept better nourished than the other tissues of the body."

A Willy Scotchman.

Was not this the retort courteous? It was the custom in Scotch parishes for the minister to bow to the laird's pew before beginning his discourse. On one occasion the pew contained a bevy of ladies, and the minister, feeling a delicacy in the circumstances, omitted the usual salutation. When they next met the laird's daughter—a Miss Miller, widely famed for her beauty and afterward countess of Mar—rallied the minister for not bowing to her from the pulpit. "Your ladyship forgets," replied the minister, "that the worship of angels is not allowed by the Scotch church."

Absolutely Pure.

A little Ohio girl was taught by her good mamma to pray regularly every day, but the requests made were the same night and morning, week in and week out. Finally her mamma suggested a change for the next day, and what was her surprise to hear the dear little innocent pray that God would make her "absolutely pure" like the baking powder in papa's paper.

LANDING ON A FOREIGN SHORE.

The Traveler on Arriving Wonders What to Do First.

When our steamer lands us in a foreign port—it matters little whether it is an English-speaking port or not—the traveler who has not taken the trip to Europe before wonders what to do first, according to a writer in Harper's Bazar. Having donned our shore garments, packed our steamer trunks and given it to the room steward, who brings it to the custom house for us, and having given our fees to this same steward, our stewards, our table steward and deck-steward, we have nothing to do but wait with our hand baggage until the gangway is placed in position and we can go ashore.

With our fellow-passengers we enter a large room, where custom house officers abound on every side. They stand behind long tables, upon which our hand-bags and rolls are placed, and which we should prepare at once to unlock. A cheerful compliance with the request to open all packages does much to make our passage through all custom houses pleasant and easy, and a person has no disagreeable experiences who obeys the requirement of the law of the country she is entering. Travelers, as a rule, and American travelers especially, are treated with consideration. They will ask you, in French, German or Italian: "Have you anything dutiable?" and as cigars and brandy are what they seek, one can truthfully answer in one word: "Nothing"—a word easily learned in all three languages. When our hand-baggage has been examined, one of our party usually stands guard over it, in some out-of-the-way corner, while the others, with trunk keys in hand, wait for the trunks to be brought from the steamer's hold. One claims them as they appear, and they all must be opened as a rule. As the place for examining trunks is large, a distinctly marked trunk is necessary.

A red ring or cross on the end of a trunk is seen at a great distance, when initials are not distinguishable. Great patience works wonders in a custom-house, and when rough hands plunge into every corner among our small number of treasures, we are supposed to smilingly approve. The hat tray is always attractive to these guardians of the peace, and then a woman is allowed to make known her feelings by a gentle "Prenez garde, s'il vous plait!" or, "Bitte, in acht nehmen!" or, again, the soft Italian: "Badate, per piacere!"—all of which is simply: "Please, take care." If a person preserves a calm indifference, and does not attempt to violate their laws, there is nothing to dread in these places of custom. But no fee is ever offered a custom house official.

After passing the customs, a porter carries our luggage to a cab, or, if we have too many trunks for a one-horse carriage, we must take a larger one. A one-horse cab can carry comfortably two people with their hand baggage, and two small trunks in front with the driver. We direct the coachman to the hotel previously decided upon, our decision having been reached by our red-bound Baedeker.

POETICAL COMPETITION.

A Pleasant Pastime of Literary Folk in China.

The Chinese have at least one very gentle and highly civilized amusement—competition in making verses. Teheng-Ki-Tong says, in his book, "The Chinaman at Home:" "Instead of shooting, or playing lawn tennis, or croquet, our literary folk, as soon as a certain number of them have a little time to spare, meet together in turn at each others' houses, and give themselves up to poetical tournaments." This is done in all parts of China, but especially in the province of Fukien. As soon as the players are ready, a vase is passed round, and out of it each draws a slip of paper, on which is written a word denoting what part he is to take. He may be examiner, copying clerk, or competitor.

When this formality is over, one of the examiners takes up a book and opens it at random. Another examiner calls a number, say nine. The first examiner reads the ninth line of the page at which he has opened, and from this line a phrase or word is chosen as the subject of composition.

Then a second vase is placed upon the table, to which a bell is attached. A thread hangs from the bell, and at the end of the thread is a lighted stick of incense. In about half an hour the stick burns out, the thread ignites, and as it snaps, a weight drops, which at the same instant rings the bell and closes the lid of the vase.

The time is up, and no more verses can be put into the urn. Now the clerks pour the manuscripts out of the urn, copy them all on the same sheet of paper, to secure anonymity, and so submit them to the examiners. The examiners compare them, decide upon the best and the second best, and one of examiners mounts a kind of desk and reads or intones the best one.

Each candidate may write and drop into the urn as many poems as he pleases—before the bell rings—but has to pay a small fee for each entry. The money is spent for paper, ink and prizes.

A second trial follows immediately, and the two winners of the first trial are made examiners in the second one.

This may go on for an entire afternoon, and in the evening a dinner brings the fete to an end.

Estimating a Horse's Height.

The Arabs have two methods of estimating the height to which a colt will grow, the first being to stretch a cord from the nostril over the ears and down along the neck and compare the measurement with that from the withers to the feet, and the other method being to compare the distance between the knee and the withers with that from the knee to the coronet. In the first method it is considered that the colt will grow as much taller as the first measurement exceeds that of the second, and the second method, if the proportion is as two to one, the horse will grow no taller.

STRANGE WHEELS.

Such Were the Bicycles of "Ye Olden Time."

Archæologists will be interested to know that the first record of a bicycle is that of a stained-glass window in the church of Stoke Pogis, near Windsor, in England. It was this churchyard, by the way, that inspired Gray to write his ever-famous elegy. The rider of the cycle in the picture on the window, writes John Gilmer Speed, in Lippincott's, which is dated 1642, would be mistaken for Pan with his pipe were it elsewhere than in a Christian church, where pagan deities are not made at home. But history is silent as to the use of any such vehicle at that time. One hundred and twenty years or so later there was exhibited before the French court a manumotive carriage of several hundred pounds' weight; but the bicycle can scarcely have grown from that. It was much nearer our own time that the first genuine bicycle was invented. It was quite the fashion to ride such a vehicle in England in 1819; the new invention was variously called the "dandy horse," the "hobby-horse," and the "velocipede." There are many allusions to it in the records of the day, and in a letter from John Keats in February, 1819, to his brother in America I find this mention of it: "The nothing of the day is a machine called the velocipede. It is a wheel carriage to ride cock-horse upon, sitting astride and pushing it along with the toes, a rudder wheel in hand. They will go seven miles an hour."

How it would have stimulated the poet's imagination if, in the year he wrote that epistle, he had been granted a vision of the modern bicycle, a thing of grace, swiftness, and outdoor delight. Perhaps a really great poem of the wheel might have resulted. For there is poetry as well as utility in it, and anybody with a spark of ideality must feel this, except in those moments when the mind is taken up with the attempt to escape being run down by one of the reckless flyers.

Think of seven miles an hour and several hundred pounds weight set against the figures concerning the modern "bike!" Verily, the world moves and bicycles move with it. It would be dangerous in the light of the past to say what the machine of the future may evolve into, one can hardly believe in an improvement proportionate to that of the last fifty years, but anyway it furnishes another reason for wishing to live a hundred years or so that one might behold the wheel of 2000 A. D. The "nothing of the day" of 1819 has become an almost indispensable of personal business and pleasure 1895. It must be left to some John Keats of the present to attempt a better prophecy than his fellow bard of England eighty odd years back, whose gifts were not of the kind to give him a hint of the great prospects of the "velocipede."

TOWNS OF SETTLED HABITS.

London and Philadelphia Alike in This Respect.

In her article on "The Myth of the Four Hundred," in the Cosmopolitan, Mrs. Burton Harrison tells of an American calling upon a lady in London and finding her seated in a big chair by the window, engaged in some sort of needlework. A young man came in and paid his respects, as it was her day at home, and then bowed himself out. Three years later the American was again in London, and again he called upon the lady. It was her day at home, and there she sat in the same chair by the same window with the same needlework, or some very like it, in her hand, and, more remarkable still, the same young man called and made the same remarks he had made three years before. Mrs. Harrison tells this anecdote to show how unchanged things are in England, and how you are pretty sure to find people just about as you left them. The illustration is a good one, but I can match it with a better one over here.

I have the pleasure of knowing a family in Philadelphia, who have lived in the same house for forty years. As the children of this family grew up, they developed a musical talent from four or five generations of men learned in the law, as well as skilled with the bow. Every Sunday between twelve and one o'clock, it was the custom of the father and the sons to play classic music, the father being first violin, one son viola, one second violin, the other violoncello. They played well, and, as I lived nearer Philadelphia in those days than I do to-day, I often dropped in at these rehearsals, as they called them. Five years ago I was in Philadelphia on a Sunday. I had not seen my old friends in fifteen years, but I was sure that they were living at the old place. I walked around the house, and, as I mounted the marble steps, I heard sounds of music. Could it be possible that a "rehearsal" was going on? Yes, sure enough. There sat the father, his hair snow white, with his violin tucked under his chin, and three "boys"—fathers themselves—all playing away as they had been doing since they were children. To be sure, they were married men and did not live at home, but they met every Sunday morning at their father's for the usual music. I expect to run on to Philadelphia again before long, and, though it has been at least five years since I was at my old friend's house, I expect to hear the music on Sunday morning, for I shall time my visit so as to include a Sunday.

The Fire Cure.

The native doctors of India practice a peculiar system known as "firing." Afflicted persons, no odds what the disease may be, are immediately upon the arrival of the family physician, subjected to the tortures of the fire. At the beginning of the present century it was used chiefly for aches and pains, but at present it is said that it threatens to become the universal remedy for all afflictions. A late report by a medical authority declares that there is not one to the thousand of total population in Bombay and the larger cities generally, who does not bear trace of the "fire cure" in the shape of hideous scars on head, back, stomach, or limbs.

A Wonderful Story of an Old Lady.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH., May 9, 1894.

Lyon Medicine Co., Indianapolis, Ind.:

I wish to congratulate you in being in possession of such a grand medicine as LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. I was in very poor health for a long time, could eat no solid food, and scarcely anything else; had no appetite, but a continued distress in my stomach, and was very poor in flesh. Your remedy being recommended by one who had tried it, I got a box of same, and can cheerfully and gladly say, after using them, the distress in my stomach entirely ceased, my appetite increased wonderfully, and I gained in flesh very perceptibly. I am a lady seventy-four years of age, and can say that LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS have given me a new lease on life. I feel grateful toward you and your remedy. It does more than you claim for it, and no words of praise can do it justice.

Gratefully yours,
MRS. CYNTHIA RANSOM.

20 YEARS AGO

a discovery of the greatest possible benefit to mankind was made in medicine. Physicians universally recognized its beneficent results and welcomed it as one of the most valuable remedial agents that has been developed in medicine, because it covered such a wide range of usefulness and brought into requisition the most remarkable food-medicine in existence. This discovery was and this wonderful nutrient was Cod-liver Oil, but until it was made available in Scott's Emulsion it was almost useless, but by their process of emulsifying it and making it palatable and easy of assimilation, and adding to it the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, they have given the world a remarkable curative agent in all wasting diseases, both in children and adults.

A BIG FEE.

Two Hundred Thousand Dollars to Lawyers in an Indian Case.

The old settler Cherokee Indians are soon to receive in payment from the government $200,000. The roll is about completed in the department, showing that 1,100 Indians are entitled to share in the money, but, as it is to be paid out by estates and not per capita, there is a wide range of difference in the amounts to be received. In some instances individuals will receive only 14 cents, and in other cases an individual will receive over $1,500.

The money to be paid the old settlers, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, comes from interest on old accounts due them from the government. They date back to 1835, when a treaty was made with the Cherokees, and this fund, according to the terms of that treaty, is to be paid to a certain number of families who moved into that country prior to that time. This is how it happens that the money appears to be so unevenly divided. In some instances but few members of a family are living, while in other cases many descendants are living. The department has had considerable trouble in perfecting the roll, as a few of those entitled to share this money now live in California. Nearly all live in the Cherokee nation. With those in the nation it has been a difficult matter to determine in many instances whether or not an individual is entitled to share the money. The work of perfecting the rolls has delayed payment for more than a year.

While the Indians receive only $200,000, the entire claim is $800,000. The $200,000 is taken up by attorneys' fees, which are paid direct to the attorneys. Over 32 years ago the Indians interested in this claim executed a contract with W. J. Bryant, of Tahlequah, giving him 25 per cent. of all the money he could get out of the combination of claims. He commenced work on the matter and is now 78 years old and very feeble, but he is expected to make another trip here to get his $200,000 and divide it with attorneys he has employed in the case. It is understood that he has given contracts to attorneys and officials covering about $150,000, thus leaving him but $50,000. But this division was thought by him necessary to bring about a final settlement, and, as estimated, it never would have been paid had he not been able to deal out some money where it would have the effect of securing action.

In addition to this $200,000 given over to attorneys and for other purposes, $10,000 is taken out of the fund for ex-Congressman Heard, of Missouri, by an act of congress. Mr. Heard was employed in the case some time before he was elected to congress, and did the work that entitled him to the fee of $10,000. The payment of his fee was recommended by the present officials in the department, and Mr. Heard concluded that it would be just as safe to have congress set apart his fee as it would to leave the matter in the hands of the department officials. Accordingly he had an act passed covering the matter and making sure his fee. He gets his fee out of the claim, and it is taken out in addition to the $200,000 that is given to Bryant and divided with others.

MOLASSES TO BURN.

Planters Have Millions of Gallons and They Want a Furnace Invented.

There are twenty-five million gallons of molasses stored in tanks on the various sugar plantations throughout the state, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, that is an elephant on the sugar planters' hands. They do not know what to do with it. They cannot sell it, for any profit in sight would be eaten up in transportation. Besides, it would require a cool half million dollars to barrel it, and putting this sum and the freight charges together, when the present price of molasses is taken into consideration, the shipper would find that he would be out of pocket after his labor was concluded.

The question of what disposition to make of this molasses is a knotty one to the sugar planters, and at the last two meetings of their association no other subject has been discussed. The planters say that it is a problem that has to be solved, for before the next crop is taken off this surplus molasses has to be got rid of in order to make room for the new crop. Heretofore the stuff has been dumped into the river or swamps. In the latter method it has been found that the molasses sours and makes life disagreeable to those living five miles away, while in dumping it into the river or streams, people living on the banks complain of it as a nuisance.

It is being fed to stock, but from statistics there is not enough stock by one-third on the various plantations to consume it. Suggestions have been made to distill it into alcohol, but the planters find that it would require such an outlay of money to erect a distillery to distill fine alcohol so as to compete with the world's markets that it would not pay. It has also been suggested that, as molasses is excellent stock food, it be shipped to central distributing points where stock is raised in large numbers—Texas, for instance—by means of tank cars. This suggestion has met with favor, and some day the experiment may be tried.

The only solution, however, in sight seems to be the discovery of some way in which the molasses can be burned as fuel. When this problem is solved the planters believe that molasses will then be valuable. Experiments have been tried in burning molasses as fuel, and they have been successful, but it has been on such a small scale that it will not pay in its present crude form. What the planters want is for an invention which will successfully allow molasses to enter the furnace in such a manner that it will burn rapidly, will not gum the carrier, and, in fact, do its duty without injuring the furnace in any respect. There is a fortune in sight for the man who works out this invention. A system of spraying the molasses on the bagasse as it goes along with carrier to the furnace, is, from all accounts, the only system that will suffice.

ARTIFICIAL EYES.

The Interesting Operations of the Glass-Blowers.

Those who take an interest in taxidermy will be glad to know how birds' eyes are made.

A visitor to a small factory in New York found two glassblowers at this work. One held a bar of clear glass in the flame of a gas blow-pipe, and worked a lump of fused glass around the end of a wire and then pressed it into a mold. When he drew it out of the mold, a crystal eyeball ornamented the end of the wire. This he passed to his companion, who took a thin bar of yellow glass, and heating it, worked it into the crystal ball, forming a round, glowing eye on the end of the wire. As the glass cooled the yellow iris showed more plainly, and by the time it was cold and hard, it appeared as a good-sized owl's eye, the pupil being a section of the wire on which the glass was heated. While this was going on the first man was busy molding another crystal eye. Later the men took up the work of making dolls' eyes. One molded the clear eyeball, the other worked in the blue or brown iris, as the style might be, precisely as the owl's eyes had been made.

The superintendent of the shop said that, while many dolls' eyes were made, the demand was mainly for eyes for taxidermists' use—chiefly for stuffed household pets. These were made of all sizes and shapes, to suit the varied requirements of the taxidermist. The largest eyes are made for the moose, the smallest for the trushes. Each variety of birds or animals, when mounted, has to have eyes modeled from nature, if its natural expression is to be preserved.

PLEASURES OF MINING.

There is a Fascination in Digging Out the Golden Ore.

An old miner of Cripple Creek, Col., who for years has been engaged in prospecting in the Rocky mountains, while talking to a party of friends the other day, gave the following interesting description of gold mining in the far west: "It's the prettiest work I ever did," he said. "It's the fascination of it; when you have struck it pretty rich and see your gold right in front of you, when you are piling it up every hour of the day, with a nugget now and then as big as a bullet to cheer you. And then, when evening comes, you count it up and you find it worth hundreds of dollars, just picked up out of the earth in one day—well, I tell you, there is nothing like it. Then, when you don't strike it, you always think you are going to the next day; and it is just as exciting hearing other men tell in the evening what they pulled out during the day as in counting your own. Why, I have gone for months at a time without making a dollar, and without a cent in my pocket, but the excitement of the work don't give a man time to realize how hard up he is."

MOVED A TOWN.

The Novel Exodus of the Mormons from Missouri.

The most remarkable case of house-moving ever heard of was at Nauvoo, Ill. When the Mormons were driven out of Missouri by an armed force they built the town of Nauvoo on the banks of the Mississippi. Here they erected their temple and constructed a thriving town. Then the Illinois people arose, burned the temple, murdered the prophet, Joseph Smith, and the entire community fled to Utah. Mennonites from Russia came along and bought the land. They had no use for the three hundred and fifty buildings in the town. They wanted the land to plant vineyards upon. They sold the houses to a Missourian by the name of Boyd for a trifle.

The next winter he began to put rollers under the houses, slid them down the banks to the surface of the frozen river, and then slid and rolled and pushed them six miles up the river and founded the town of Fort Madison. In all except about forty of the houses which are to-day on the left bank of the river, opposite the site of the extinct town of Nauvoo.

Tree Trunks as Filters on Ships.

A well-known Australian engineer, M. Pfister, is stated to have discovered a remarkable property of the trunks of trees, namely, that of retaining the salt of sea-water that has filtered through the trunk in the direction of the fibers. He has consequently constructed an apparatus designed to utilize this property in obtaining potable water for the use of ships' crews. This apparatus consists of a pump, which sucks up the sea water into a reservoir and then forces it into a filter formed by the tree trunk. As soon as the pressure reaches 1.5 to 2.5 atmospheres the water is seen at the end of from one to three minutes, according to the kind of wood used, to make its exit from the other extremity of the trunk, at first in drops and then in fine streams, the water thus filtered being potable, freed, in fact, from every particle of the usual saline taste which is such a drawback to water obtained in the ordinary manner.

Whitest City in the World.

There cannot possibly be a whiter city than Cadiz, unless it be built of snow. The best way to approach the port is to take a trip on one of the small steamers which ply between the ports of Morocco and Spain. As you near the coast you see in front of you a white mass which appears to be floating upon the water, just as you are. The first thought of a foreigner is that he is in sight of an iceberg. The white mass, glittering in the sun and rendered more dazzling by the blue sky and sea, looks exactly like a monster ice mountain partly melted, so that outlines of castles and hills appear upon it; but only for a second does the illusion last, for you know there are no icebergs in that part, and you are quickly informed that you are looking at Cadiz. No other town in the world presents such a magic appearance.

Solid Truths About the South.
It is a fact that the most productive farms, where three crops a year are made, are in Mississippi and Alabama along the line of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. Mississippi with open fertile prairie lands and rich valleys timbered with valuable hard woods and Alabama, the yellow pine belt, a rolling sandy loam, the paradise of the fruit grower, truck farmer, stock raiser and invalid.
The summers are cooler; the winters are warmer; the entire year comfortable for outdoor work. Garden the whole year round, pure air, soft water, good health, and long life for yourself and family. No malaria, no sunstrokes, no swamps, no malaria.
Thousands of acres of land may be had at very low prices and on easy terms. For illustrated pamphlet and full information concerning character and kind of land, locations and prices, address HENRY FONDE, President Alabama Land and Development Co., Mobile, Ala.
Round trip tickets are on sale at cheap rates for land seekers and a very low one way rate for actual settlers and their household goods and stock.

Drunk in a Coffin.
An incorrigible drunkard was being treated in the Tenon hospital, Paris, for hallucinations. One evening one of the nurses was passing through the dissecting-room where there were lying two or three empty coffins, and, walking close to one of them, a hand was thrust out from under the lid and caught the girl by her dress, and a voice from within called out: "I say, where are you going to bury me?" The girl screamed with terror, and fled through the passage, calling for help. Half the house came down around her, and when they heard her story they laughed and chided her; but she maintained the truth of it so persistently that they repaired in a body to the chamber of horrors. When they opened the door they saw to their great amazement a man sitting up in a coffin. It was the drunkard, who by some means had made his way to this room and conceived the idea of getting into his coffin before his time. The girl was made seriously ill by the fright.

She was attacked by a pain in her left shoulder which went immediately to her heart, she dying a few moments after the attack. She was 55 years old, and one of the best known of Putnam old people. Her mind was acute and active until her death. She had been a resident of Putnam county a long time and was a part of its early history. The funeral occurred Monday morning. The remains were laid to rest in the Stilesville Cemetery.

Farden Captured.

John Don Farden and Alias T. J. Franklin, who stole $16,000 from the Adams Express Co., at Terre Haute a few weeks ago, was captured in Baltimore Sunday. Farden stated to the authorities that he had spent every cent of his share of the $16,000, and was with out a penny. He says that he and J. R. Barnett took $16,000 from the Adams Express Co., of which he got $5,000, and Barnett $11,000. Barnett left Terre Haute the same day as Farden and went South. He has not been heard of since. Farden first went to New York where he remained some time, then to New Orleans, where he remained until he turned up in Baltimore. He has expressed his willingness to return to Indiana with out the formality of requisition papers. The authorities at Terre Haute believe that he will plead guilty and take a sentence. Farden was formerly employed in the treasury department at Washington and afterward was an examiner in the pension department. He was first employed by the express company about three years ago.

Big Heads.

A few days ago a traveling man told one of our clothing merchants that there were more big hats sent to Greencastle from the hat factories than to any other town of its size in the United States. If big heads are a sign of intellect, surely Putnam county has more brains per capita than many of our windy neighbors.

The Holy Sepulcher.

On Tuesday night of the 22nd of October Senator D. W. Voorhees will deliver in Meharry Hall a lecture entitled “The Holy Sepulcher” an argument in defense of Christianity from the standpoint of one who has had large experience in the study and practice of law. Like many other eminent public men, Senator Voorhees has had his doubts and perplexities on the subject of religion. There have been times when he seemed to be very sceptical in regard to the genuineness and authenticity of the Scriptures, and there were other times when the teachings of the Bible seemed to be the only adequate source of consolation and guidance in great bereavements. This lecture will doubtless create a great impression and will be the means of strengthening the faith in the divinity of Christ of many practical minds not usually influenced much by the pulpit. The entire community look forward to the occasion with great interest and it is expected that Meharry Hall will be greatly crowded to hear this address. Senator Voorhees is not seeking to make money out of this lecture. The entire proceeds of the lecture will be given to the Alumni fund of the University. The senator is a graduate of the class of '46. In order to afford an opportunity for everybody to hear the lecture the price of admission has been placed at a very low figure. The general admission fee is only 25 cts. and reserved seats, 35 cts. It will be a credit to Greencastle if on the first delivery of this address there is a crowded audience to meet the distinguished senator of our state.

—Mr. Harding, lecturer of the Theosophic Society, talked to appreciative audiences in the court house Thursday and Friday nights.

—Mr. Harding is sent out by the society to lecture at the U. S. High school, are free and are given merely for the sake of the cause. Thursday evening he explained the society's idea of reincarnation, in which he thoroughly believes.

—Theosophic society believes in a sort of refined pantheism. It teaches that there are many lives for a human soul. A body may die, but the soul ever lives. It goes to heaven, where it may remain many centuries, after which it returns to earth to live in another body.

—Theosophy teaches that the soul comes so to move until after having passed through many lives it has gained human perfection, when it ascends to dwell eternally with the creator of the universe. It is very difficult to attain an ample comprehension of this philosophic doctrine advocated by this great society. From what we have heard, it may be justly said:

—I wiggled in and it wiggled out.

—Leaving the people still in doubt.

—Whether the snake that made the track was going north or coming back.

—Report of the Public Schools.

—The close of the first month finds the enrollment in the city schools, 223, which is 10 less than at the close of the first month last year. There are 5 less in high school and 11 less in the grades. A smaller class entering the eighth grade explains the falling off in high school, which was therefore not so good as probable. The enrollment in the high school is 156. The average enrollment in the grades was 99.2; the average attendance 63.4, or 63.4 per cent; the number of absent tardies 35, or 5.7 per cent; the cases of tardiness 63, or 5.7 per cent. The first two are high and very creditable. The tardiness is bad, caused mainly by the children's tardiness. Some reasons have made remarkable records, as will be seen from the following: Schools were 99.2; Miss Jones, 98.3; Miss Resor, 93.1; High school, 97.6; Miss Ridpath, 96.9; Miss Adams, 96.6; Miss Ragan, 96.4; Miss McCoy, 96.2; Miss Hammond, 96; Miss Black, 95.6; Miss Miller, 95.4; Miss Jones, just absent tardy—Miss Jones, 95.4; High school, 95.4; Miss Williams, 91.5; Miss McCoy, 91.4; Miss Adams, 90.9; Miss Ragan, 90.7; Miss Miller, 90.5; Miss Hammond, 90.3; Miss Alspaugh, 89.8. Per cent of punctuality—Miss Alspaugh, 100; Miss Jones, 100; Miss Alspaugh, 100; Miss Williams, 98.8; Miss Ridpath, 96.9; Miss Jordan, 97.3; Miss Ridpath, 96.9.

THE NICHOLSON LAW CASE.

Judge Stubbs Practically Holds the “Restaurant” Section Invalid.

Judge Stubbs, of the city police court, has practically held one of the provisions of the Nicholson law to be invalid. The case was the last one before him as judge of the police court. It was a test case, Fred Brandt, being the defendant. The portion of the law tested was the provision denying entrance to the saloon on Sunday to any other than the saloon keeper himself or members of his family. Brandt's bar is in June's restaurant, or at least, the business is carried on in the same room as the restaurant. Because of this fact the authorities hold that Brandt cannot keep his restaurant open after 11 o'clock the time the bars must close under the Nicholson law. Homer June was the person admitted to the room.

The State held that the fact that a person other than the proprietor or member of his family entered the room after hours was prima facie evidence of a violation of the law.

The attorney for the defendant has filed a motion to quash the information upon the ground that it does not state a public offense, and has raised two questions: (1) That the act is prospective and not retroactive, and (2) that sec. 3 of the act is repugnant to art. 1, sec. 19, of the constitution of the State of Indiana.

So far as the first point is concerned, I do not think it tenable. It may be conceded that the general rule for the interpretation of statutes requires that every statute must be construed as prospective, except (1) where the legislative intent is that it shall act retroactively or (2) where the statute would be wholly inoperative unless construed as retroactive. Sec. 10 of the Nicholson law provides that all the provisions of the act shall apply to persons, places and sales of liquors, whether conducted under the laws of the State of Indiana, or by virtue of any law of the United States, or by virtue of any treaty, or by virtue of any executive agreement, or by virtue of any international convention, or by virtue of any other law, or by virtue of any other authority.

“The second point in the motion to quash raises a more serious question. The constitutional provision is (art. 4, sec. 19): ‘Every act shall embrace but one subject, and matters properly connected therewith, which subject shall be expressed in the title. But if any subject shall be embraced in any act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be expressed in the title.’”

“In the case of the state vs. Young, 47 Ind., 156, an act entitled ‘An act to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, to provide against evils resulting from any sale thereof, to furnish remedies for damages suffered by any person in consequence of such sale, to prevent the sale of such liquors, to repeal all laws contrary to the provisions of this act, and to improve the provisions of this act, and to declare an emergency,’ was held by our supreme court not to embrace within its subject-matter, as a matter properly connected therewith, the offense of intoxication created by the ninth section of the act, or which section it was made unlawful for any person to get intoxicated.”

“For reasons above stated the motion to quash the defendant to quash the affidavit must be sustained.”

The state gave notice of appeal. Should the matter rest with the decision of Judge Stubbs all saloons with restaurants can keep open after 11 o'clock and on Sundays and if persons are seen going into a saloon it will not be evidence that liquor is being sold.

The supreme court sustains the opinion of Judge Stubbs, Greencastle liquor men will not be relieved as a city ordinance covers the point for which the state contended in the above issue.

A Clay County Man Returns After a Long Absence.

A special from Brazil, Ind., Oct. 8, says: Last evening J. B. Wilson arrived in the city from Florida. This man, who was at one time one of this city's most respected citizens, has been moribund as dead 50 years.

Wilson, who was born in 1845, was a family for twenty-five years. In 1868 he went to Kansas. Not long after he was outlook there he joined a party of men bound for the Indian Territory. One night while in camp in the Territory they were assailed by Indians, and all but Wilson were killed. He was left for dead on the field with a terrible wound in his head. He was found by the soldiers, but the wound had destroyed ten long years, when his mind was partially restored to him, although he had no recollection of his name or his past life.

After being released from the hospital he went to Florida, where, ten years ago, he met an old friend from this city. The sight of a face associated with his life before he died, and he inquired of his family. The friend became confused in the many families of dead, and as a matter of fact, having heard of his death in the Indian Territory, he had married. Then he had no desire to return to the home dead to him. Three years ago his wife, who was a most estimable lady, and who had never remitted, applied for her husband's name. He was informed that her husband was alive and residing in Florida. There was begun an effort to bring him back, which resulted in his returning home yesterday.
