

From the Lexington (Ky.) Reporter.
EXTRAORDINARY LONGEVITY.
We published a few weeks ago, an account of the death of Colonel DANIEL BOONE, whose name is associated with so many interesting events in the history of Kentucky, and we are now informed that the last of his brothers died a few days ago, in this state in an adjoining county. The following statement, derived from a correct source, of the longevity of that family, is the most remarkable that we have ever seen:
Ages of five brothers and three sisters.

MORE MISERIES.

Among the various complaints made by the brethren of the Type under the titles of "Miseries," "Grievances," and "Hardships" of Editors, we see many that are applicable to ourselves. One complains that he has 1000 subscribers not any two of which number are of the same mind, and yet every one expects to be pleased, so that the poor editor is under the necessity of displeasing 999 of his patrons let him pursue what course he will. Another source of "misery" is, after having sat for hours, with a pen in his hand, poring over the newspapers he has received "by the last mail," marking every thing of importance—culling the wisest, wittiest and most interesting paragraphs and endeavoring to find something that will be interesting or acceptable to our readers of every taste; to hear a subscriber after looking over the paper, declare it all to be "dry stuff" or "poor trash" not worth reading. Again; what can be a greater "hardship" or more discouraging than to hear a subscriber, after taking the papers for years without paying a cent, declare upon receiving a gentle dun, that the printer ought not to ask him for pay, as he only subscribed to encourage him in the establishment of his press! These with a host of others we sometimes see most feelingly enumerated—and we as feelingly can attest their truth; but there is another "hardship" to which Editors sometimes have to submit that we do not remember to have seen noticed by any of our brethren. After receiving some 30 or 40 newspapers from different parts of the United States for the purpose of enabling us to render our paper useful and interesting to our subscribers, to have the office visited by persons who without paying us for our own paper, or for the privilege, or even asking for the liberty; as soon as a mail comes in, seize our papers, as though they had a superior, or the only right—peruse them all over before we can be permitted to use, and often before we can even get sight of them—carry some away—scatter others about the office—mislay those from which selections have been made and put into the hands of the compositor, and for all these privileges—after having access to the only source of intelligence, at our expense, they condemn our paper as not being worth looking at because it contains nothing but what they have seen before! What can excite more disagreeable sensations than to know that such characters, notwithstanding the indulgence they have received, are always ready to give the preference to any other paper than our own.

Extract of a letter from Salem, to a gentleman in Boston, dated SALEM, Oct. 13, 1820.
"It gives me pleasure to comply with the request conveyed in your letter of yesterday, and I hope the information may be gratifying to M.—whom I remember with pleasure. My friend left Hernambuda, Aug. 24. About 8 or 9 days previous to his sailing, it was whispered that a revolution had broken out in a province to the Southward, near Minas. The Governor, who is very despotic, tried hard to repress the report. A Body of about 200 troops were marched Southward, with orders to unite with bodies during their progress towards the revolted province. The troops at Paraira, were also directed to proceed to the same destination.

"My friend represents the people as in a state of great discontent and ripe for a revolution, and gives it as his own, and the opinion generally of those with whom he communicated, that a revolution must ensue. A fleet of ten sail, under convoy of a 20 gun ship, which he says is called the San Gualter, sailed for Lisbon on the 16th of August. When under way the Governor sent orders to the commodore, that in case he should find a revolution had taken place in Portugal, to proceed to England with the fleet. The Governor had issued an order forbidding under severe penalties the circulation of a report, that Marshal Beresford had taken in his ship the king's treasure to England. Great jealousies exist between the native Brazilian troops and those from Portugal, and hence the revolution, though the troops could not be brought to act."—Democratic Press
