That Wedding

[M. J. J. Columbus, O.]
"Twas on a lovely moonlight night—
The stars were brightly shining;
And I, arrayed in pink and white,
Wore pretty flowers entwining.
I dressed that night with taste and grace,
My dress of tulle trimmed in lace,
And jewels with rare settings.

The house was filled upstairs and down
With girls in pretty dresses;
The older folks in their plain gowns—
The young in flowing tresses.
Of pretty dresses to be seen,
I guess there were no less;
There's pink, and white, and buff, and green,
And blue, and many others.

The gentleman stood in the hall—
They all seemed very talking;
Some leaning up against the wall,
While others stood in the hall;
The gentlemen were all in black,
Their coats were "velvet" black;
And every one wore black cravats,
And button-hole bouquets on.

Then all at once there was a pause—
A pause—some one's coming!
I looked to see who was the guest,
Behold! the bridegroom coming!
Just as the pastor lifted his hand,
The bride and groom they followed;
And on his arm she glided away—
He wore a standing collar.

The bride was tall, with coal-black hair,
Her eyes were bright and laughing;
And in her hand a bouquet rare,
The bride and groom they followed;
The groom was tall, with shoulders square,
And dressed in broadcloth shining;
He gazed upon his maiden fair,
And could not keep from smiling.

He vowed to love and cherish her,
For worse, also for better;
When asked "Will you be true," he said "Yes, sir,
I meant to say that;
He vowed to love and cherish her,
For worse, also for better;
When asked "Will you be true," he said "Yes, sir,
I meant to say that;

The pastor called them man and wife,
After he'd finished reading;
"Wished they'd be happy all through life,"
Their merry friends he said;
And after that we went to look At all the pretty presents;
The crowd was large and all it took A lot of time and patience.

And next on programme, supper came,
Of that I will say nothing;
Enough to say they ate no pains,
And that they were not hungry;
And when at last we said "good night,"
To Charles and his wife Mary,
We then walked home in the moonlight
When the hours of night were waning.

The walk was long, the stars above bright,
And all I'll say for good;
For I was dressed in pink and white Just to attend the wedding;
We—Mr. D. G. C. and I Just laughed—I'll never forget him, I'll never forget it till I die.
The night of that great wedding.

The disappointment that we had,
Were two I think in number;
I think of them but don't get mad,
I laugh 'em in my slumber.
The first thing that went wrong I think,
Was something about the supper;
About the lack was not I think,
But more I dare not utter.

performed at the Indiana Medical College

the cancer was of less than a year's growth and one of the largest they ever met with.

his balance he fell between the cars. The car wheels passed over his left leg above

Since the murder on Mississippi street Will Floyd is found at home promptly at 7 in the evening. Wouldn't it be a good idea to employ Ky Lawson as a bodyguard for Billy, on lodge nights, particularly?

"Hank" says a certain fellow is no good atshootin' because every time he bends over to make a pass the weight of his head destroys the equilibrium of his body, and a collapse of the structure is sure to take place immediately.

As consultations is the order of the day now it is suggested that a couple of our young bloods hold a hasty consultation for the purpose of determining as to whether it will be advicable for one, or both of them should carry the city.

TWO BURGLARS BAGGED.
One of Them Shot—He Dies From the Effect of the Wound.

Last Sunday morning about 2 a. m. merchant policeman William Bremer while on his beat, discovered that the lights in R. E. S. grocery, corner Indiana avenue and Vermont street, were turned out and feeling that all was not right, he made an examination of the premises. He found two burglars at work inside the grocery, and fearing that he could not succeed in capturing both, he placed himself at the door and blew short calls for help. The burglars made a rush for the door, with the intention of running past the officer.
Bremer caught one of them, and ordered the other to halt, but upon his refusal to do so, he fired upon him. Soon after this officer Thornton and Temple and one or two citizens responded to the call. Thornton followed in the direction of the flying burglar, and found him leaning against the fence on Illinois street. The shot fired by officer Bremer having hit him in the arm and rendered the burglar too weak to travel farther. The wounded burglar was recognized as Harry Stevenson, a young man not yet of age. He was placed on a hand cart, and in company of Scott Thompson, the other burglar was taken to the central station. Sunday morning Stevenson was removed to the city hospital.
He remained in a delirious condition until 6 o'clock Wednesday, when he died from the effects of his wound. Stevenson bore a very bad reputation, having been engaged in several burglaries, and at the time he was shot was under sentence to the penitentiary for robbing a grocery.

SUDDEN DEATH OF NELSON J. TRUSSLER.
He is Seized With Heart Disease
While Entering the Grand Opera House and Dies in 35 Minutes.

A few minutes before 8 o'clock, Thursday evening, Colonel Nelson J. Trussler, accompanied by his wife, entered the Grand Opera house to witness a performance by a drummer boy of his former regiment. Just as they were passing down the aisle to the parquette, the colonel staggered and fell to the floor, striking against one of the iron seats as he fell. It was at first supposed that he had simply stumbled,
but it was more serious fact was soon
found out.

Mr. John Fishback and other gentlemen carried him out into the vestibule. His wife accompanied them in great excitment. He was placed on a hand cart, and the aisle to the parquette, the colonel staggered and fell to the floor, striking against one of the iron seats as he fell. It was at first supposed that he had simply stumbled,
but it was more serious fact was soon
found out.

There was no visible respiration, but another gentleman tried to produce artificial respiration, but without success. At 20 minutes past 8 o'clock, the doctor pronounced him dead.

Mrs. Trussler, who was in a fainting condition, was conveyed to her home by Annie H. Brown and Mr. Fishback. The lifeless body was conveyed to his late residence where a scene of sadness and mourning met the eyes of those present. Dr. Newcomer who was present at the house called, declared Trussler's death due to valvular disease of the heart, from which he has suffered for some time. He uttered no word after his fall. Mr. Trussler was the present United States district attorney for Mr. Jesse Chapman. Comment on Jesse is unnecessary. His arrangements were first class, and carried out in the best of style.

The music was furnished by Prof. Henry Hart. The Proctor secured the best of a truly musical mood, and his effort, as usual, gave complete satisfaction.

The dancing began at about 9:30 o'clock.
An elegant repast was served at 12. Dancing again resumed away, and "held the fort" until the gray streaks on the eastern horizon indicated the near approach of rosey dawn.

The members of the club are highly gratified with their initial bout, and propose to make it a permanent organization of it.

Prominent among those present were:
Mr. John Martin and lady; Mr. James Rhodes and lady; Mr. W. A. Bibb and lady; Mr. C. E. Saunders and lady; Mr. J.
H. Ringold and lady; Mr. Charles Laner and lady; Mr. Henry Thompson and lady.
