THE SCENE OF THE 1964 World Series moves back to St. Louis as the Cardinals and Yankees will head into the battle for all the marbles in either one or two games. The Cards hold a 3-2 game lead following five exciting games to date. This year's series certainly is a change from last fall's as the Dodgers featured nothing but excellent pitching and the Yankees also had very fine hurling to make for a rather dull series from the excitement standpoint.

THE CARDS, LAST MINUTE winners of the National flag, look to have the best representative of their league if play in the series means anything. They were a hot club, coming off a torrid pennant chase that broke wide open in the last two weeks. Now they have continued this fine showing in the series. The Yanks meanwhile were having a battle of their own for the flag and had a fine climax to the season themselves. This also was a change from last year when the Yanks had the flag from early September and were really stale by the series.

THE CARDS HAVE BEEN blessed with a couple of nice pitching performances and have had very timely hitting. Their three home runs in the first five games were all very clutch blows, none being wasted at all. Combine with this the fine defensive play they have displayed and their timely hits and you have a team that could end it all Wednesday as they are hot and the spirit is high. The Yanks are also a team that has all three of these assets with more emphasis on the power end of things. However, their defense, usually rather tight, has been responsible for a couple of losses if the blame can be put on anything other than the Cards clutch bats.

AS IS OFTEN THE CASE, A different person has vaulted into the stars role about every game, but the consistent play of the Cardinals' young catcher, Tim McCarver, has been the real boost to the Cardinals. With such stars as Dick Groat, Ken Boyer and Bill White, you look for the big hits to come off their bats. Boyer made up for his series slump in one swing Sunday with a grand slam, only the ninth in series history. White has had a terrible time getting hits and Groat, who always used to be a number two hitter, hasn't taken the hero's crown to date. The pitching of Craig and Taylor Sunday in relief was outstanding, and Gibson's game Monday was tremendous.

FOR THE YANKS, MICKEY Mantle must be remembered for his clutch homer in the last of the ninth Saturday and his bat has been their big factor. Tommy Tresh has some real clutch hits, including the home run that tied Monday's game in the bottom of the ninth. Bobby Richardson has had his usual flock of hits, but his couple of defensive lapses and misplays have put the goats horns on him twice, greatly benefiting the Cardinals.

THE SERIES MAY BE OVER by the time this is read, but there still is at least one game and possibly two to play at the time of this writing. You can't count the Yanks out until it is all over. Remember a few years back, 1958 to be exact, the Milwaukee Braves had the Yanks down three games to one with such stars as Spahn and Burdette on the pitching slab, only to have the Yanks come back with three in a row for the title of World's Champions. Only time will tell and the time is now as the series will be ended this week for certain.

LOOKING BRIEFLY AT TWO other great events, the Olympics are now under way in Japan. Almost every newscast you will now hear how many gold medals the United States has against the number the Russians have won. This is a bunch of hogwash. The Olympic committee doesn't even keep team totals, it is a battle of individuals. However, the press and air coverage makes a big thing of the comparison of the two countries. Wouldn't it be something if some also ran, jumped up and claimed the team title? It might be the best thing that could happen, even though it won't.

THE EXCITING TRACK AND field events begin on Wednesday. This is the United States very strong point along with the swimming which is already heavily underway. Combine with this the basketball and you have the U. S. strong points. Then comes the many miscellaneous events in which the Russians really excel and you won't hear much of it. Much of the Olympic games are carried on TV and this is always exciting to watch. More of this type activity for everyone would make the world a more comfortable place to live.

A QUICK LOOK AT THE NATIONAL Football League after the week end action, has found little change other than the fact that the two Eastern Division winners both lost and Baltimore and Detroit are still one-two in the west. The Pittsburgh Steelers thoroughly beat the Cleveland Browns Saturday night while the St. Louis Cardinals were solidly whipped by Baltimore Monday night. The two races have taken a pattern, but what a jumbled up mess the pattern is. In the Western Division all seven teams are still in the running. In the Eastern half, prior to the past week end, it looked like a two way battle between St. Louis and Cleveland. It still appears this way, but a little lustre was taken from the co-leaders with their twin drubbings in the league's two night games Saturday and Monday.

People must have a vivid imagination or they wouldn't believe all the things they hear.
