

At Last - For Six Months Anyway

It almost seems too good to be true, but it looks like Indiana will have another six months of everyone being on the same time. Coming on Sunday, April 28, the move to Central Daylight Savings Time or Eastern Standard Time, whichever you happen to call it, will be the end of confusion for a while.

It seems that maybe someone has read a few letters, answered a few phone calls or at least had enough sense to realize that butchering a state right through the middle with a zig zag line and declaring this half on one time and the other half on another, really doesn't make too much sense. At any rate, the Department of Transportation has quited things down for a few months anyway at no threat of the "double fast" time now stands in the way from the last Sunday to the last Sunday in October.

However, the battle isn't over. This seems to be just a temporary thing to take care of the problem that is immediately ahead. In all probability, the same old fuss will be made next October when once again many cities and towns on the Eastern half of the state will show their preference for fast time and not as many, but a good percentage of the populated area on the western half of the state will decide to stay with Chicago once again in the muddled up time situation.

Until some declaration of satisfaction on the time issue can be made and some teeth put into the law, Indiana probably will continue to be a time-riddled state. But right at the present, we are going to look forward to asking someone just simply, "What time is it?" not what time is it and then What time is that!

Chain Letters Are In The Mails Again.

In recent weeks there have received in post offices a great many postal card for mailing which in general read as follows: "In 3 days make 6 copies of this card leaving off the first name and adding yours to the bottom. Mail to friends. Send the top name 1 tea towel. Please do not fail to do this. You will receive 36 towels when your name gets to the top. It's fun to see who they come from. Pin your name on the towel you send." The great number of cards in the mails and forwarded to the solicitor's office for attention indicate that this type of chain enterprise has again reached epidemic proportions. Postmasters warn that participation in such schemes is unlawful. Chain postal cards involving prayers which contain a threat of bad luck to those breaking the chain are non-mailable under section 599, Postal Laws and Regulations, 1940.

State Moves Forward In Planning For Mandatory Vehicle Check

State vehicle inspection department director Willard L. Walls announced this week that when the state's mandatory vehicle inspection program gets underway in January, 1969, motorists may voluntarily take their vehicles to any inspection station during January and February to get their certificate of inspection.

In March, motorists whose plate numbers end in digits 1 or 2 must have their vehicles inspected that month. In April, inspectors will check vehicles with license plate numbers ending in 3, 4, or 5. Motorists whose plate numbers end in 6, 7 or 8 will be inspected in June. In 1970, motorists will be required to present a valid inspection certificate before they can purchase license plates. The inspection fee will be $2.50.

Walls also reported that many requests for applications are being received from garages, service stations and individuals interested in establishing inspection stations. Applicants must show they are mechanically qualified and that they can provide adequate space, personnel and equipment to inspect. In addition, they must pass investigation by the State Police motor vehicle inspection division.

Inspection stations, depending on their qualifications, may be licensed to inspect one, all or any combination of four classes of vehicles. The classes are as follows:

Class A: Passenger vehicles and light commercial vehicles up to and including one ton weight.

Class B: Commercial vehicles over one ton and oversize vehicles.

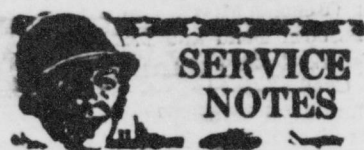

Class C: Motorcycles.

Class D: Foreign made vehicles.

The official inspection station sign will indicate at the bottom what type of inspections each station is qualified to conduct. Walls added that only one license is required regardless of how many classes of vehicles a station is equipped to inspect.

Walls urged that qualified persons interested in operating an inspection station apply as soon as possible. There will be approximately 4,000 inspection stations throughout the state, he said.
