ENGLISH MEATS.

The Establishment of a Liverpool Agency for Ferguson's Meats—Some Views Upon the English Market.

Mr. N. M. Need, of Ferguson & Co., returned from Liverpool, England, on Sunday morning, where he had been for the past few weeks, establishing an agency for the sale of Ferguson & Co.'s European cuts of pork meat.

This morning a News reporter was given the following information regarding the European trade:

"At the present price of corn in this state farmers can hardly feed their hogs at a profit. They could sell their corn to better advantage. But in Europe this is much more the case. The failure of the harvest causes the consumers to buy their corn from America, and as a matter of course this cannot be fed to hogs as cheaply as it can be here. There must be a demand for their meat in America, and is prepared to furnish them. Last year our exports of meats were larger than ever before, and they will probably be as large this year. While the Europeans have less money than usual to spend for meats, they have no meats of their own, and they must eat. They will consume less meat than before, but nearly all they have will come from this country, and we will see no difference between the seasons."

"It is considered a safer business to pack for the English market than for home consumption, is it not?"

"Much more so. There is less speculation and more actual demand than here. Frequently a cargo of meats is sold before it arrives. There is also a fairer profit on English cuts than on American ones. The cuts differ so. Some cuts have no shoulders blades in them. Others have only two cuts each side. Some cuts have the shoulder blades on the side which they are accustomed to see, and to especially compete with them in their own market. And when grain is high over there we succeed tolerably well. American meats are yearly becoming more popular in the English market."

"Do you look for any lower prices on hogs here this season?"

"I think that before the season is over the price will drop 3 cents, but I can't tell. The farmers have their hogs on hand and they must feed, no matter how high corn gets. This year's hog crop, but it may differ a good many farmers from investing largely in it next season."

The Courts.

W. P. Fishback, master in chancery, is hearing evidence in the case of Brown, assignee of Brown, against Mrs. Brown, to recover lands claimed to have been transferred to her by the defendant of the creditors. This is a case from Grant county, which has been the scene of alleged frauds in a bankruptcy than any other locality in the state.

Judge Heller had under advisement the case against Belle Wellington, charged with keeping a house of ill fame. The fine against Ralph Ladd, in square Wright's court for ticket scalping, has been confirmed in the criminal court. Ladd will appeal.

Samuel D. Smith secured a divorce from Catherine Smith in room 1. Violet A. Adams suing Dr. S. A. Butterfield for $5,000 damages, caused by the doctor moving his stable directly in front of plaintiff's dining room window and maintaining it in a filthy condition to the detriment of the value of the property.

Some time ago suits were commenced against a number of building, loan and savings associations, to recover taxes assessed against the shares of stock, running back as far as 1872. Judge Elliott held that the tax for two years only could be collected, and an agreement to remit the penalty and interest assed the associations paid the taxes for 1877 and 1878 this morning, and the costs of the prosecution. The following are the companies and the amounts received: Northeast, $4,150; Jackson, $3,28; Meridian, $75,23; Jefferson, $7,47; Teutonia, $77,73; Southwest, $3,70; Russell Avenue, $27,02, and Southeast, $20,24.

Judgments were filed in the United States court to-day against Fred Graham, Indianapolis, and Alfred Isaacs and Hiram Paul, Shelbyville, for failure to pay special taxes on their liquor and tobacco. Graham pleaded guilty and was fined.

In the city court this morning Nelle Livingston, arrested yesterday on a charge of pelfary lancey was dismissed. John Davy, running a concert saloon, and Charles Robinson and Otto Reece, musicians, pleaded guilty.

Subsidized Flapdoole.

The following is the text of the poster gotten out for the Grant reception:

"Welcome the coming guest—Grant, the great captain, at Indianapolis, November 20, 1879. All nations and people delight to honor him. Republics are not ungrateful. Indiana bids him welcome home! General Grant, the honored guest of kings and principalities, after a tour around the world in glory, returns to hear our country's deep-mourning welcome as our drawed sword. He is the true representative of our republics, and the world's admiration, that the republics are not ungrateful! Taking up the voices of her sisters as they come from the Golden gate over the broad prairies, Indiana bids the great captain welcome home again, and has tendered him a state reception at Indianapolis, Thursday, November 20th, 1879, which he has accepted. The people of Indiana, without respect to creeds, parties, race or color, are united and resolved to make this reception a glorious success for the host. General Grant is in the same sense that Washington was, the Savior of his country. No armies in the world's history ever had a greater general, and no general ever had better or braver armies. His fame and the fame of Indiana's soldiers are inseparably bound together forever. In honoring him we honor ourselves. Come one! come all."

"Come as the winds come when forests are rended; Come as the winds come when mountains are strained."

The city of Indianapolis throws open her gates and tender the freedom of the city to the state and its citizens. Let all who love their country come to Indiana's capital, and let there be a sea of upturned faces to greet our guest. Ample arrangements have been made for the comfort of all who may come. Let our reception and our welcome show that the great state of Indiana knows how to receive the most distinguished of America's citizens. The executive committee wish to particularly understand that this is a non-partisan demonstration.

A grand review of old soldiers by General Grant and staff.

Reduced rates on all the railroads. Organize at once on in city, town and village to join the coming throng.

The Jury Abuse.

The abuse of the jury system was made apparent Monday, at the beginning of the November term of the superior court, in a most offensive manner. When the regular panel was in the box, the attorneys who had cases set for trial at once announced that they would be postponed; they would not risk trial before such a lot of incapables as were foisted upon the court by the officers who selected the jury.

Robert Connolly, who sued for an injunction to prevent the burial of this father-in-law, Mr. Wingate, in a lot in Crown Hill cemetery, was by the plaintiff dismissed his suit this afternoon, the executors of the deceased showing that Wingate was certainly elected. Butler had engaged parlor in the Revere house weeks ago for a reception last night to celebrate his election. The republican success is complete throughout the state.

Not a Grant Victory.

This afternoon a young son of William Maginnis, conductor on the Indianapolis, Cincinnati & Lafayette road, was riding on a switch engine. At the crossing of Cady street, a boy threw an apple at him, in dodging which crushed his left foot.

A Miscalculation.

The republicans engaged Fanueil hall and had a jolting election last evening. Yesterday morning the election was over, and they to them to take the hall off their proposition for them to want it themselves, because Butler was certainly elected. Butler had engaged parlor in the Revere house weeks ago for a reception last night to celebrate his election. The republican success is complete throughout the state.

The election of Cornell under the circumstances, with the rest of the republican ticket defeated, is a poor sort of republican election. It certainly does not authorize Senator Conning to rise in the next republican national convention and claim that the state of New York would vote for Grant, and for no other republican candidate, and he must therefore be nominated.

Not a Grant Victory.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

The election of Cornell under the circumstances, with the rest of the republican ticket defeated, is a poor sort of republican election. It certainly does not authorize Senator Conning to rise in the next republican national convention and claim that the state of New York would vote for Grant, and for no other republican candidate, and he must therefore be nominated.

During the evening General Butler appeared in the best of spirits, and gave a ban-

by peremptory challenge, and this morning all of them went the same way in room No. 1. This is one of the chief reasons why jury expenses are so large. The regular panel contains a lot of dilapidated incompetents who are provided for at the cost of the people by their friend, the auditor, recorder and attorney to fill these places, competent bystanders must be selected, thus entailing double expense.

THE ELECTIONS.

What Some Home People Think of Their Effect.

Ex-Gov. Hendrickson declined to discuss the effect upon presidential candidates. As to New York state, if the returns are accurate, the outlook of last night, that Cornell also is in, is not good. The democrats are in the majority, and the democrats in the party come from division in the ranks. If the entire democratic ticket is defeated, he attributes that to the division as to the head.

Gen. Harrison says that notwithstanding the result of the New York election the fact still remains that Tilden is the only man who can carry New York for the democrats, unless it should be some man who will not antagonize, and, under the circumstances, that man is not Thomas A. Hendrickson.

Senator McDonald had nothing to say about the chances of Mr. Tilden. After the republicans have elected their entire ticket, Mr. Hendrickson's chances are materially improved. And if Cornell alone is elected it will go very far towards making Clarkson N. Potter the man for the second race on the presidential ticket. (It will be observed that however it goes, Mr. Tilden is not benefited in Mr. McDonald's estimation.)

"Does the tie of the senate?" asked Mr. Butler, the senator's law partner.

"Yes," responded the senator; "counting David Davis as a democrat. But then we can always remedy that by turning out that fellow from Louisiana—Kellogg—and will proceed to do it."

"Is it not the election help Hendrickson?"

"It won't him any."

"It's out of the race."

Governor Williams—You may put me down as knowing nothing about the matter at all.

James H. Rice, general political prophet—Hendrickson and Potter will be the ticket.
