

POETRY.

"Come Inspiration from thy hermit seat,
"By mortals seldom found."

STANZA.

Weep! O weep! for tears are given
To soften our hearts and brighten our grief;
To sooth us, and make us more fit for the heaven,
That lives in our brightest and fondest belief
The heart that is stillness and coldness is sleeping—
The eye that is strange to suffusion and weeping,
May sparkle and shine, it is true, like a bubble
On the stream that runs darkly & coldly below;
But their brightness and warmth are all fled,
when trouble
Clouds pleasure's bright sun with its mantle of wo.

Fly! fly! from the heart that, unshaken,
Sends up no glistening tear to the eye,
When the heart of a friend with sorrow is breaking,
To tell of his home far away in the sky.
Tears are bright gems that to mortals are given,
To link their pure souls to angels in heaven;
And when smiles are forgot, and the wit that pro-
vok'd them,
Or, remembered at all, create but a sigh,
Soft sympathy's tears and the wo that invok'd
them,
With mem'ry shall live, and with mem'ry shall die.

I LOVE THEE NIGHT.

I love thee night! thy solemn hour
So stills the hum of busy men;
I love thee night! and own thy power,
To calm my breast to peace again.

I love thee silence, night's compeer!
Sedate and noiseless 'neath thy wing;
Gay fancy, evening reveller.
The most enrapturing visions bring.

And softly treads the passing hour.
When thoughts of friendship fill the breast,
That melting yields to beauty's power,
And lulls the grateful heart to rest.

MISCELLANY.

The Fire-Irons, or Family Quarrels.—Mr. Chose was gravely reading the original Hafsen Slawkenbergius, at one side of the fire and Mrs. Chose sat darning old worsted stockings at the other. By some untoward accident, the fire-irons were all on Mrs. Chose's side. "My dear," said Mr. Chose, "how miserable it makes me to gaze on any thing that looks un-uniform: be kind enough, my dear, to let me have the poker on my side." Mrs. Chose, who was busy taking a long stitch at the time, replied, "I'll give it to you presently, my love."—"Nay, pr'ythee, put me out of pain at once; 'tis absolutely quite distressing to my eye—the fireplace looks like a sow with one ear." "One fiddlestick! How can you be so excessively whimsical!" "Lord man! dont be so plaugy fidgetty." "No, madam, I am no such thing!" "Pray, sir, don't put yourself in such a fluster." "I tell you I am not in a fluster." "I say, sir, you are. For shame! How can you throw yourself in such a passion?" "I in a passion?" "Yes, sir, you are." "Tis false!" "Tis true!" "Madam, 'tis no such thing." "S'death, do you think that I'll submit to such provoking language?" "You shall submit." "I won't." "You shall." "I shan't." "I'll make you." "You can't." "By Heavens, madam." "By Heavens, sir." "Hold your tongue, Mrs. Chose." "I won't, Mr. Chose." At it they went ding dong, with poker and tongs. The more he ranted, the more she raved; till at last, vying to outdo each other in provocation, the contention ran so high, that Mr. Chose declared he would not live with Mrs. Chose an hour longer; and Mrs. Chose declared she would not sleep another night beneath the same roof, much less in the same bed! "Madam," said the husband, "tis time that we should part." "With all my heart," said the wife. "Agreed!" said he. "Agreed!" echoed she. A lawyer was absolutely sent for, to draw up the articles of separation; being made 'mirabile dictu.' The lawyer came, and addressing himself to the husband, said "are you both fully agreed upon a separation?" "Yes, yes!" exclaimed both parties. "Well, sir, what are your reasons for so doing?" "Sir, I can't inform you." "Madam, will you be so kind as to acquaint me?" "Indeed, sir, I cannot." "If this be the case," said the peace-loving lawyer, "I venture to pronounce your quarrel has originated in something so frivolous that you are both afraid to own it." He urged the point so closely, that he at length extorted the truth; nor did he desist from his friendly interference until he had the satisfaction to re-establish the most perfect harmony.—Warned by his friendly admonitions, this wedded couple grew more circumspect in their words, less aggravating in their manners, and, in short, quite left off wrangling, and lived happy.

A young lady, who had been insulted by an old maid, placarded the following lines on her door and windows:

To be let, or to be sold, for the term of her Elizabeth Hall, by the way of a wife: [life, She's old and she's ugly, ill-natured & thin, For further particulars, inquire within.

Chivalrous Heroine.—The most singular combat by which arms were ever gained, was one which happened in the family of Hotot. The family of Dudley, in Northamptonshire, bears for a crest a woman's head, with a helmet; her hair dishevelled, and her throat-latch loose. The occasion of this crest was singular. In the year 1390, Hotot having a dispute with one Ringsdale, about the title to a piece of land, they agreed to meet on the disputed ground and decide it by combat. On the day appointed, Hotot was laid up with the gout; rather than he should suffer in his honor, or lose his land, his daughter Agnes, armed herself cap-a-pe, mounted her father's steed, and went to meet Ringsdale at the time appointed. After a stubborn fight, she dismounted him, and when he was on the ground, she loosened her throat-latch, lifted up her helmet, and letting down her hair upon her shoulders, discovered her sex. Agnes afterwards married into the Dudley family; and in honor of this heroic action her descendants have always used the above crest, with the motto Calce spes salutis.

A new burying company is talked of in London—Sir J. Coffin is to be the president, W. Churchyard, Esquire, the vice president, Mr. Tombs to be the treasurer, and Mr. Saxon to be the secretary: the office will be in Bury-street.

A gentleman who had visited the Columbus, was describing, in very pompous terms, the extent of her decks, the size of her chicken coops, and stalls for cattle, &c. &c. when C— (rather tired of the subject) observed, "O yes, I hear they had a pack of hounds and a few hares, for the amusement of hunting occasionally, as they crossed the Atlantic!"

On the day of the eclipse, when all the inhabitants of Paris were without doors, provided with telescopes and pieces of smoked glass, an Englishman was seen driving furiously in a coach along one of the principal streets.—"Where does my lord wish to go?" said the driver. "To see the eclipse," said the Englishman, thrusting his head out of the window, "only drive up to it as near as possible, for I am near-sighted."

A minister reading the first line or so of a chapter in the Bible, the clerk, by some mistake or other, read it after him. The clergyman read as follows: "Moses was an austere man, and made atonement for the sins of his people." The clerk, who could not exactly catch the sentence, repeated it thus: "Moses was an oysterman, and made ointment for the shins of his people."

The American Athenaeum,

OR REPOSITORY

Of the Arts, Sciences, and Belles Lettres.

Each number of this Journal consists of twelve pages, quarto post, executed in a superior style and stitched in a neatly printed cover. The volume, when complete, will be embellished with an engraving representing some interesting view of American scenery, and an elegant vignette title-page; a copious index will also accompany the volume.

The objects of the work are to cultivate native genius, and to give the earliest literary intelligence, whether foreign or domestic. It contains a select Miscellany from American and European Journals—Reviews—Essays—Poetry, &c. —We shall never envy the honours which wit and learning obtain in any other cause, if we can be numbered among the writers who give ardour to virtue, and confidence to truth."

The ATHENAEUM will be delivered to subscribers at $4.50 in advance, or $5 per annum, payable half-yearly. Subscriptions and communications will be promptly attended to by Geo: BOND, Publisher and Proprietor, No. 4, Chambers-street, New York.

La Mott's Cough Drops.

IMPORTANT MEDICINE FOR COUGHS AND CONSUMPTIONS.

THIS Elixir is not offered to the public as invaluable, and a rival to all others, but as possessing virtues peculiarly adapted to the present prevailing disorders of the breast and lungs leading to consumption. A timely use of these Drops may be considered a certain cure in most cases of Common Colds, Coughs, Influenza, Whooping-Cough, Pain in the Side, Difficulty of Breathing, Want of Sleep arising from debility; and in Spasmodic Asthma it is singularly efficacious. A particular attention to the directions accompanying each bottle is necessary.

The following certificates from respectable gentlemen, physicians and surgeons, are subjoined, to show that this composition is one which enlightened men are disposed to regard as efficacious and worthy of public patronage.

Having examined the composition of Mr. CROSBY's improvement upon La Mott's Cough Drops, we have no hesitation in recommending them to the public, as being well adapted to those cases of disease for which he recommends it.

Doct: JONATHAN DORR, dated Albany, December 4th, 1824; JAMES POST, of White-creek, February 14th, 1825; WATSON SUMNER and JOHN WEBB, M. D. of Cambridge, Feb. 20th, 1825; SOLOMON DEAN, of Jackson, January 10th 1825.

Mr. A. CROSBY—I am pleased with this opportunity of relating a few facts, which may serve in commendation of your excellent Cough-Drops. For ten years I was afflicted with a pulmonary complaint; my cough was severe, my appetite weak, and my strength failing. I used many popular medicines but only found temporary relief, until by a continued use of your valuable drops, I have been blessed with such perfect health as to render further means unnecessary.
