

MISCELLANY.

ORIGINAL.

ON FRIENDSHIP.

Ah what's this life with all its joys,
Its blandishments below?
And what this world with all its toys, But splendid scenes of woe?
And love and hope with all their smiles, That gild the distant view.
Are snares and lures and burnish'd wiles That mock as we pursue.
Rankest briars and thorns entwine The couch where beauty sleeps;
And serpents vile infest the shrine Where Hymen wakes and weeps.
But friendship, heavenly plant, it charms While other charms betray,
In heaven it glows on earth it warms,
And blooms without decay.

STANZA.

Oh tell me not my soul is sad, Oh say not that my brain is mad, Say not my mind is always clad In sullen gloom!
Is there a philanthropic eye,
Can coldly view—without a sigh, Life's fairest flowers droop and die, Sink in the tomb?
Our life is but a fevered dream,
A transient, evanescent beam,
That swiftly glides into the stream Of dread eternity!

Our dearest ties are rent in twain, Our hopes are wrapt in death's domain, Alas! what more can we sustain Since all are lost? No friends remain, To cheer infirmity.

I've seen the lovely blooming boy,
His widowed mother's only joy, While blest with him no ills annoy Hope's general ray;

A chilling frost has nipt the flower, (The fairest one in Eden's bower.) It bloomed, it blossomed for an hour, But ah! the fell destroyer's power Wept it away.

I've seen the love inspiring maid By hellish artifice betrayed; I've seen her charms her beauties fade Alas too soon!

So fell Cordelia, young and good, Stung by the fiend ingratitude!
Her sun had set in solitude Ere life's fair noon.

Companions of my youthful days,
Who basked in hope's unclouded rays, Sought happiness in folly's maze, Where are they now?

I'll to the monumental stone, Peruse their fate, and mark my own—There make my plaint to whom alone
The angels bow.

EDWIN.

BATTLE OF NEW-ORLEANS.

The following is a copy of the Prize Poem, spoken in the new American Theatre on the 8th of January, 1825 by Mr. CALDWELL, written by Mr. WELLS, of Boston, the successful candidate out of fifty-six Chill was the breeze—nor yet the herald light, Had chased the lingering shadows of the night, O'er still expanse of lake, and marshy bed, Gloomy and dense the mantling vapours spread;
But soon the battle flash that darkness broke,
And soon that dread repose, the peal broke Of loud artillery, and the dire alarms Of mingling conflict, and the clash of arms.

Fate gave the word! and now, by veterans led,
In pride of chivalry, to conquest bred, The foe advanced—intrenched, the champion band

Of freemen stood, the bulwark of the land; Fearless their stars unfurled, and as the rock, Storm-proof they stood, impervious to the shock;

The patriot Chief—with patriot ardour fired—Nerved every hand, and every heart inspired; Himself, in peril's trying hour a host,
A nation's rescue and a nation's boast

As near the bastioned wall the invader drew A storm of iron hail, to greet him, flew;
On havoc's wings the mission'd vengeance rode.

And whole platoons the scythe of ruin mowed; Through paths of blood, o'er undistinguished slain Unyoked the hungry war-dogs scoured the plain.

Borne on the blast the scattering besom kept its course, and ranks on ranks promiscuous swept
The trophied Lion fell—while o'er his foes Unscathed, in arms supreme the towering Eagle rose

Sublime in majesty—matchless in might—Columbia stood unshaken in the fight;
From lips of adamant, amidst volumed smoke And catenacts of fire her thunders spoke Triumph to the skies, from shore to shore Old Mississippi shook, and echoed to the roar.

High on his acceperched o'er mountain bird, Amidst the din the shout of victory heard, Exulting heard and from his eyry came Through clouds of rolling dun, and sheets of flame;
Renown's immortal meed he bore, and spread His ample pinions o'er the conqueror's head—
"THE HERO OF THE WEST"—to him assigned The glorious pal—round his brows the guerdon twined.

THE LADIES FRIEND

Historical Extract—and application.

The Roman Republicans were plain men and women accustomed to daily labour, and quite unaccustomed to finery of apparel, or luxury of living. A Roman of even noble blood titled his little field with his own hands, and was proud of tilling it with superior industry and skill; whilst his lady, if lady she might be called, made it her chief ambition to be an excellent house wife. While this state of things lasted, and a very long time it did last, the Romans were eager enough to get themselves wives.

They married generally, and they married young; for they thought and well they might, that who so found a wife, found a good thing—a real helpmate as well as a dear and faithful companion. And what is singularly remarkable if true, it is recorded by a Roman historian, that there had not been known, in the city of Rome, a single instance of divorce during the whole space of 500 years; though the law had put it in the power of the husband to repudiate his wife almost at pleasure.

Unfortunate for the Roman republic, and more especially for the female part of it, a great and splendid event quite changed the morals, the taste, the habits, and the whole of the country. One hundred and ninety years before the christian era, the Romans for the first time, entered into Asia with an army, which under Scipio defeated and conquered Antiochus the Greek King of Syria; and from thence they brought home such a taste for the luxuries of the East, as promoted and hastened the ruin of their commonwealth; and in no way more directly, than by a practical forbiddance of marriage.

The Roman woman once so plain, frugal and industrious, became ensnared of the costly finery that was brought from the East.
One of them named Lullia Paulin, when dressed in all her jewels, is said to have worn to the value of three hundred and thirty-two thousand pounds sterling. And though this was the most extraordinary instance of the time, yet it is reasonable to suppose that, of the rest of the ladies every one strove to get as near the top of the fashion as she could; and that with all the females who thought any thing of themselves, the rage was to be fine and fashionable.

This new order of things while it precipitated the republic into the abyss of ruin brought marriage almost into disuse; inasmuch that Augustus, the first Roman Emperor finding among the men a general disinclination to marry, was fain to pass severe penal laws, to force them as it were into the bonds of matrimony. But it was all to little purpose. Despot and tyrant as he was, he found it impossible to compel the bachelors to marry, as Peter the first, long since did, to compel the Russians to shave off their beards.

Was it owing to the licentiousness of the men? Considerably it was, no doubt; but not altogether. It was partly owing to their prudence. A Roman bachelor naturally enough would commune with himself thus; "these extravagant fashions of whose attire a single article costs more than one of them would earn in her whole life-time, are fit only for show. I like right well to be in their company at routs and assemblies, but the gods save me from an union with any of them! If I marry, unless she bring me a fortune, with her she will quickly devour me. Wherefore I will look out for number-one only, in spite of the edicts of the Emperor." Consider, ye AMERICAN FAIR that, in all times and countries the like course will produce the like effects.—[Host. Eu Gaz.

Militia Trainings.—We do not object to a militia, but to the present militia system and practice. Our militia trainings are a mockery of every thing military, a burlesque upon the military order and character, and an open and public violation of all order and decency. The feelings of society would be outraged by describing upon paper the scenes enacted at these gatherings. We should like to see the man of whom it can be shown, that he has been benefited in moral or military order by these trainings; for every one such we fear we could readily find one thousand that have been trained to vice, immorality and disorder.
We know nothing of the feelings of others, but we feel it to be our duty to expose and oppose whatever we believe to be vicious in itself, or to have an injurious tendency upon society. After having done our duty, we have no other feeling but an approving conscience. It is idle, however, to waste words upon these military trainings.—They are rank and offensive schools for vice. No moralist can approve of them, and by the returns made to the war department of the general government, there is not a military officer from one end of the Union to the other, but has denounced them as inefficient, demoralizing and useless.

Miners' Journal.

The Carlisle Volunteer tells the following good story.—A brother of the type, named John Winter, an eccentric character, formerly published a paper in Fredericktown, Maryland. It happened one 4th of July, that he did not, from some cause, attend the general celebration; he was determined, however, not to let the day pass unnoticed by him, and accordingly prepared a glass of punch and a number of toasts, which he drank in his office.—One of the toasts was—"May those who don't take my paper, never have a friend to lend them one, but remain as ignorant as that man on Bennett's creek, who never knew that there was an Indian war in America." One would suppose there could be no man in our country, (where newspapers are so plenty) so ignorant; yet an occurrence took place, a few days ago in Mr.
Lane's store in this borough which goes some length in justifying the belief, that we have at least one man who is a match for the other. 'Tis this:—Two gentlemen of different notions as respects the two candidates for the next presidency enquired of a countryman which he was for, Jackson or Adams? The man for a moment hesitated to reply; at length he said, "he thought he had heard of Jackson; but as for Adams he did not know there ever was such a man."

Bursting a Hoghead.—It is justly affirmed by some writers on natural philosophy, that a certain quantity of water, however small, may be rendered capable of exerting a force equal to any as-signable one, by increasing the height of the column and diminishing the base on which it presses. Dr. Goldsmith observes, that he has seen a strong hog-head split in this manner. A small but strong tube of tin, twenty feet high, was inserted in the bung-hole of the hog-head. Water was then poured into the tube till the hoghead was filled, and the water had reached within a foot of the top of the tin tube. By the pressure of this column of water, the hoghead burst with incredible force, and the water was scattered in every direction.

Dreams.—To dream, and to remember your dream, is a forerunner that you were not awake nor very sound asleep, when you dreamed. To tell your dreams, prognosticates that you might be better employed. For a young lady to dream, very particularly of any certain young gentleman, foretells that she purchased her last flat to attract his attention. To dream of happiness shows that you will probably be disappointed when you awake.

Signs. To hear a death-watch, denotes that there is a little insect near you.
To see strange lights is a sign that there is something to cause them, or that your head is disordered. To see an apparition or to be bewitched, is an incontestible evidence that you are lacking in common sense.

MAXIMS OF AN OLD BACHELOR.

Never take snuff from politeness, until you have ascertained there is a handkerchief in your pocket.

Never sit on a carpet, unless there is no getting over it.

Cut your meat as fine as possible. Never wear your teeth and digestive powers, when your knife will do the service better.

A bowl of warm gruel taken at bedtime is infinitely better for a cold, than a horn of spirits, or all the mixed slops in the world.

Never eat in a hurry: it is extremely perilous.
Give a decided No, where you hesitate about answering Yes.

Get in the habit of looking after your own domestic conveniences and comforts: it will save you a world of vexation.

Never give that in charity which you owe to another. Discriminate charity is a great virtue, but injustice is a great crime.

Never discard an old friend to receive a new comer, although he may present never so pre-possessing an exterior.

Singular notice.—Appended to a notice of the intended celebration of the 4th of July at a spring near the town of Milton, in this State, we find the following expressive Nota Bene:—We have been requested to state that the services of Jacob Thomas and wagon have been engaged to carry home all who may become intoxicated on the occasion. We hope their services will not be called for.
Fayetteville, N. C. paper.

Pulpit Eloquence.—A few days since, a zealous clergyman, not fifty miles from Madison, in the midst of his sermon, made the following laconic hit at the absurd fashion of wearing corsets:— "My dear sisters, I have no doubt but that there are corset boards enough in this congregation, if collected together, to shingle a hen roost." Vevay Guest.
