THE PARTING.

The signal from the distant strand
Streams o'er the waters blue—
It bids me press thy parting hand,
And breathe my last adieu;
But oft on fancy's glowing wing
My heart will love to stray,
And still to thee with rapture spring,
Though I am far away.

Oh, when the rising dawn shall blush
Through night's empurpled shroud,
And all its changing glories rush
Along the eastern cloud,
Remembrance brighter charms will fling
Upon the youthful day,
And touch affection's dulcet string,
Though I am far away.

And, when pale Evening's raven hair,
Streams o'er the fading West,
And her blue wings are hovering there
Upon the Ocean's breast;
My spirit in that holy hour
Will yield to passion's sway,
And own thy dear resistless power,
Though I am far away.

With thee I've wandered oft to hear
On summer's beauteous eve,
The wild bird's music soft and clear,
Borne through the whispering leaves,
Or see the moon's bright shadow laid
Upon the waveless bay—
Those eyes—their memory cannot fade,
Though I am far away.

My life may know hope's withering blight,
Yet Fancy's fearful eye
Will turn to thee—the dearest light
In retrospection's sky;
And still the memory of our love,
While life was young and gay,
Will sweetly o'er my spirit move,
Though I am far away.

Yon showery bow, with silent power,
Is bending to the sea,
And thus in sorrow's darkest hour,
My soul is bent to thee;
Thy youthful spirit sheds on mine,
Its bright, undying ray;
And as it shines, it still will shine,
Though I am far away.

'Tis hard, when spring's first flowers expand,
To pass it coldly by,
Or see upon the desert sands
The gem unheeded lie,
The gentle thoughts, that bless the hours
Of love, can ne'er decay,
And thou wilt live in memory's bowers,
Though I am far away.

The sun has sunk with fading gleam
Down evening's shadowy vale,
But see—his chastened glories stream
From yonder crescent pale;
And thus affection's softened light
Will memory still display,
To silver o'er affliction's night,
Though I am far away.

FOP AND FARMER.

Where lies the path to honor, ease and wealth?
FARMER.
Leave that to fools—but mine the path to health.
I trace the plough, and like the Chinese king,
Set an example worth man's following.

Who guides the plough? who but the vulgar race?
With dirty hands, old clothes and sun-burnt face.
FARMER.
Let me be vulgar—fond of industry,
This I esteem the true nobility.
Be my hands tarnished and my conscience clean,
Old be my clothes, they're not so old as sin.
Will summer suns the manly skin disgrace?
Let men be men, and spurn the infant's face;
The thought of tanning scarcely would affront
The mates of freemen, tho' too fond of white.

Well, you may toil and sweat, who must and can;
I must not, cannot—I'm a gentleman!
FARMER.
Well, we will keep the good old honored track,
Nor gentle sloth nor pride shall turn us back.
Good-bye, dear sir, if wisdom finds me now,
She'll smiling ask, why 'Lisha left his plough.

The Hermit and the Vision.—It is told of a religious recluse, who in the early ages of Christianity, betook himself to a cave in upper Egypt, which in the times of the Pharaohs had been a dispository for mummies, that he prayed morning, noon and night, eating only the dates which some neighboring trees afforded, and drinking of the water of the Nile. At length the hermit became weary of life, and he then prayed still more earnestly.

After this duty, one day he fell asleep, and the vision of an angel appeared to him in a dream commanding him to rise and cut down a neighboring palm tree, and make a robe of fibres, and after it was done the angel would appear to him again. The hermit awoke, and instantly applied himself to obey the vision.

He travelled about from place to place, many days before he could procure an axe; and during his journey, he felt happier than he had for many years. His prayers were short and few; but what they wanted in length and number, they outmeasured in fervency.

Having returned with the axe, he cut down the tree, and with much labor and assiduity during several days, prepared the fibres to make the robe; and after a continuance of daily occupation for weeks, completed the command.

The vision that night appeared to the hermit, as promised, and thus addressed him. "You are now no longer weary of life, but happy. Know then that man was made for labor, and prayer also is his duty; the one as well as the other is essential to his well being. Arise in the morning; take the cord, and with it gird up thy loins, and go forth into the world and let it be a memorial to thee, of what God expects from man, if he would be blessed with happiness on earth."

A Cow and Calf.—A certain lawyer of this city was the other day telling a story, how once on a time a sleigh had run against a cow, knocked up her trotters, and upset her into the vehicle. "Were you in the sleigh?" "Yes," answered the lawyer. "Then," replied the wag, "there was a cow and a calf together."

A Flower Garden. judiciously laid out, and tastefully arranged, is one of the loveliest objects in nature or art, and a pretty girl looks still prettier when training up a wild honey suckle, or, with a hoe, drawing fresh earth around the roots of a favorite flower. A cottage, by the wayside, with dahlias near the door, and geraniums and roses in the windows; conveys to the passing traveller the idea of purity, innocence and refinement—and he whispers to himself as the coach wheels roll rapidly along, "there's happiness in that cottage."

A Good Proposition.—A debtor being confined in a jail, sent to his creditor to let him know that he had a proposal to make, which he believed would be for their mutual benefit. The creditor called on him to hear it. I have been thinking, said the debtor, that it is a very bad thing for me to lie here, and to put you to the expense of one dollar and twenty-five cents per week. My being so chargeable to you has given me great uneasiness, for God knows what it may cost you in the end—therefore what I would propose—you shall let me out of jail and allow me one dollar a week, and let the twenty-five cents go towards discharging the debt.

An old lady, who was apt to be troubled in her dreams, and rather superstitious withal, informed the Parson of the parish that on the night previous, she dreamed she saw her grandfather who had been dead for ten years. The clergyman asked her what she had been eating. "Oh, only a half of a mince pie!" "Well," says he, "if you had devoured the other half you might probably have seen your grandmother!"

Attack of a Bear.—The following account of an attack of a bear, on a person at Bayou Lafourche, Louisiana, which occurred on the 15th ult. we have translated from the Donaldsonville Republican:

A young man residing on Bayou Lafourche gives the following particulars of a recent encounter he had with a bear. The animal, it seems, was in the habit of committing depredations on his corn fields, and in spite of the vigilance of the planter, always made good his retreat. All attempts to put a stop to the depredations of the enemy having failed, the planter spread a gun in the path by which the bear usually approached the field, and placed himself at some distance for the purpose of watching. Weary with waiting, our hunter wrapped himself in a blanket, and fell into a slumber. He had not been long in this situation, when the bear made his appearance, and falling into the snare that had been laid for him, caused the gun to go off, the report of which frightened him, and he turned to run away. The young man, whom the noise had aroused, started up, seized the gun by his side, and followed in pursuit. He soon came up with the bear, fired at, and wounded him, when the animal rushed furiously upon him, clasped him with his paws and attempted to choke him; when the hunter, though closely hugged, succeeded in inflicting two or three severe stabs upon the bear, with a knife. This so enraged the animal that he became desperate, and tore the young man with his feet and claws, in the most dreadful manner; while the latter applied his knife so frequently that the bear, mortally wounded, staggered about fifteen paces and then fell down and died. The hunter, bleeding from his wounds, and his strength exhausted, sunk fainting to the ground, where he lay for several hours nearly in a state of insensibility. His life, however, is not considered in danger.

It is stated that this combat took place during the wonderful display in the Heavens on the morning of the 13th ult. To be engaged with a bear at such a time, and in the woods too, must have been a very unpleasant affair.

More Gold in Virginia.—It is stated in the Richmond Whig of the 12th, that a Gold mine has been discovered in Louisiana, which, with only two washers, yielded in one day, recently, four thousand penny weights of gold, besides a good deal laid aside imbedded in quartz to be pounded!

Governor Hayne has sent another long message to the Legislature of S. Carolina, relating solely to the vast military preparations made and about to be made to put the State in a posture of defence.

James Findley, has been appointed Secretary of State by the Governor of Pennsylvania.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania seem determined to abolish, entirely, capital punishment in that State.

Wonderful Mistake.—Some persons make a mistake, and think it is the editor, and not his newspaper, that they buy for 3 dollars a year.

WOOD! WOOD! Cold types and frosty fingers are as uncomfortable companions as old age and poverty. Those who have promised us wood, and others who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of making payment in this seasonable article, are advised that the roads are tolerably fair. MASONIC MIRROR AND COLONIZATION ADVOCATE. It is very philosophically observed by Addison, "that our greatest pride arises from doing good to each other," or in other words, being individually serviceable to society.

In offering a new enterprise to the notice of the public, the subscribers are aware of the obstacles to be surmounted; but they deem it a reflection upon the intelligence of a free people, to specify the advantages arising from the existence, in the West, of a well conducted publication on the two leading subjects of the Mirror and Advocate.

Sketches of the eloquence of the bar, of the sacred desk, and of popular assemblies, shall occasionally flash in our pages. To these, our poetical column will and another recommendation.

PROPOSALS
For publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist," a semi-monthly newspaper, in the town of Batavia, Clermont county, Ohio, by SAMUEL MEDARY.

WHEN I presented the following proposals for publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist," a semi-monthly newspaper, in the town of Batavia, Clermont county, Ohio, by SAMUEL MEDARY, it was under extreme doubts, as regarded its success; knowing that such works were commonly confined to the patronage of the sciences. Determined, however, to try the experiment at all risks, and several agriculturists having pledged themselves to use their influence in giving it circulation, I commenced issuing a prospectus. I am already satisfied that the proposed publication will meet with an extensive patronage, and the decided approbation of those who are engaged in the various branches of Agriculture, and the Mechanic Arts.

I expect, and am already promised the assistance of several pens, the wielders of which possess the necessary requisites, to make any periodical interesting and useful. This work being devoted to the interests of the "Great West," and treating on subjects characteristic of the Mississippi Valley, will be either beneficial or interesting to every portion of the Union. Raising and improving stock—diseases of animals—elementary culture of silk—orchards—Field and Garden seeds—Improvements in mechanic Arts—Botany—Geology and Mineralogy, and sales of valuable public lands, are all topics, which will be noticed, and investigated, in a manner both amusing and instructive.

In addition, the editor is about commencing an experiment with the grape in this region, in connection with a nursery of fruit and ornamental trees, and he is anxious to obtain all the information upon these subjects, which science and experience have brought to light, and which he will convey to his readers for mutual advantage. He considers a location an advantageous one; although comparatively new, the surrounding country is densely inhabited with a thriving and industrious population, almost exclusively agricultural, sufficiently adjacent the Cincinnati market, (the best west of the Alleghany,) to give a stimulus to improvement in every variety of products; added to which is a soil, highly fertile and productive.

The Bank note list will be as extensive as possible, suited to any portion of the country, with a notice of the counterfeits on each. The review of the markets will be rather a condensed survey of the whole, and the state of trade, than confined to any particular point.

At the end of every volume, an extensive and complete index and title page will be furnished.

Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist. Owing to the solicitations of several friends of Agriculture, I propose to issue a paper from this place under the above title. A work to promote the cause of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, published in a cheap and compendious form, and taking a general view of the condition and resources of these branches of industry in the West, is considered an object of general utility, and interest, especially at this time. It is true, several works, partaking in a measure, of the same nature, already exist; but by a law of the State Legislature, passed February, 1833, for the encouragement of Agriculture—societies are shooting up in every direction. As these increase, the demand for information will increase in a corresponding ratio. Knowledge begets improvement and industry, and these, wealth; for it is a fact well known to the intelligent observer, that the wealth of the farmer increases in proportion to the improvements made in the stock and culture of his farm.

The labour saving machines, invented by the ingenious mechanic, have done much to facilitate the business of the Agriculturist where introduced; and the improved breed of animals, that fatten upon his well tilled soil, add luxuries to his table and riches to his store.

Subjects which come appropriately under the head of Horticulture, will, as the title of the paper designates, be interspersed through the work.

This paper will endeavor to excite a proper spirit of rivalry and ambition among the Western tillers of the soil; and will contain a regular record of the most interesting proceedings of the numerous Agricultural Societies that may come under the editor's notice. It will also contain, at least quarterly, a general list of solvent Banks in the Union—and review of the markets.

Much might be said on the importance of such a work, but the limits of a prospectus do not admit of it; the foregoing will give a general outline of its object.

The OHIO FARMER AND WESTERN HORTICULTURIST, will be published semi-monthly on a medium sheet with new type, and in quarto form, suitable for binding at $1 50 per annum in advance, or on the reception of the first No. All notes on solvent Banks, received in payment.

Any person, obtaining five subscribers, shall receive the sixth copy gratis, and in the same proportion for a greater or less number.

The first No. will be issued on the first day of January, 1834.
