

THE FAMILY SEPULCHRE.

Close by a grave three mourners prayed,
When the day was almost done;
And on a tombstone newly laid,
Beamed the departing sun.

One wore a recent widow's dress;
Her face was pale and fair,
And very sad; but there was less
Of grief than patience there.

Two youths were kneeling at her side
In early boyhood's flush;
And through their veins, in life's first pride,
The pure blood seemed to rush.

His arms were reverently crossed
Upon each striding breast:
The father they had lately lost,
Was in that place of rest.

Their prayer was ended—as they rose,
The widow joined their hands:
"My sons!" she said, "let this world's woes
"Draw closer friendship's bands."

"We three have prayed upon the grave
"For us and our's designed;
"It holdeth one so true and brave,
"His like is not behind.

"I feel I have not long to stay
"Before I, too, shall be
"Reposing here—then come and pray,
"My children! over me."

Years passed away, and in that time,
The brothers were estranged;
And mutual doubt and conscious crime
Each clouded spirit changed.

Two old men, in a burying place,
Kneeling by a moss-clad stone;
One in his hands concealed his face,
And thought himself alone.

But wistfully the other gazed;
Hoped—dreaded—hoped again:
The downcast eyes at length were raised;
They knew each other then.

Those aged men had both returned
From countries far away,
Because their softened souls had yearned
Upon that grave to pray.

They prayed—and thought of her that slept
The sepulchre within;
And heart to heart, the brothers wept
O'er years of pride and sin.

Together in that tomb they lie,
And mingle dust with dust:
They lived too long in enmity—
They died in love and trust.

OLD WINTER IS COMING.

BY HUGH MOORE.

Old Winter is coming again—alack!
How icy and cold is he!
He cares not a pin for a shivering back,
He's a saucy old chap to white and black,
He whistles his chills with a wonderful knack,
For he comes from a cold country!

A witty old fellow this Winter is;
A mighty old fellow for glee!
He cracks his jokes on the pretty sweet Miss,
The wrinkled old maiden unfit to kiss,
And freezes the dew of her lips—for this
Is the way with such fellows as he!

Old Winter's a frolicsome blade, I wot;
He is wild in his humor, and free!
He'll whistle along for the 'want of his thought,'
And set all the warmth of our furs at naught,
And ruffles the laces by pretty girls bought,
For a frolicsome fellow is he!

Old Winter is blowing his gusts along,
And merrily shaking the tree!
From morning till night he will sing his song;
Now moaning, and short—now howling and long—
His voice is loud, for his lungs are strong—
A merry old fellow is he!

Old Winter's a wicked old chap, I ween;
As wicked as ever you'll see!
He withers the flowers, so fresh and green—
And bites the pert nose of the Miss of sixteen,
As she trippingly walks, in maidenly sheen!
A wicked old fellow is he!

Old Winter's a tough old fellow for blows,
As tough as ever you'll see!
He will trip our trotters and rend our clothes,
And stiffen our limbs, from our fingers to toes—
He minds not the cries of his friends or his foes;
A tough old fellow is he!

A cunning old fellow is Winter, they say,
A cunning old fellow is he!
He peeps in the crevices day by day,
To see how we're passing our time away,
And marks all our doings, from grave to gay;
I'm afraid he's peeping at me!

THE ORPHAN'S HYMN.

Alas—"O, no, we never mention him."

BY JOHN NEWLAND MAFFITT.

Cold blew the north wind bleak and wild,
The snow was on the ground,
When a poor houseless orphan child,
By charity was found.

Pale was its brow with suffering,
His hollow cheek was wan,
And plaintive was its murmuring,
For parents dead and gone.

Its bitter tears were flowing fast,
Until the fount was dry—
And when the last lone drop had past,
Came tearless agony:

Dark, dark, upon the Orphan's soul,
Earth's heaviest shadows gloomed,
And sorrow's ocean seemed to toll,
O'er one to misery doomed.

The lonely orphan longed to die,
And on its mother's breast,
Within the drearier grave, to lie,
In its eternal rest:

It longed to hear a father speak,
Though hoarse his voice in death,
It longed a mother's love to seek,
Though wasted was her breath.

Hark, voices called thee, lovely one!
Come from the searching cold;
From the chill night-wind quickly run
Sweet lamb, within the fold;

Angelic woman's silver tone,
Now thrills within thine ear—
And mothers, lovelier than thine own,
Are gathered round thee here.

Clothed, fed, and sheltered here at last,
Let orphan voices sing,
Of gloom and danger overpast—
Of ended sorrowing:

Sing of celestial Charity,
Of Woman's deathless love;
Till, robed in Christ's bright purity,
You shout your praise above.

From the Female Advocate.

VISITING.—Few persons are so secluded as to be debarred from occasional visiting, and fewer still would wish to live a life so solitary as to know nothing of the social pleasures. To give and receive visits, constitutes, with many, the chief occupation of life. Those who keep a proper medium between the extremes, on either hand, pursue the wisest and most pleasant hours, and taste the sweets of society, without forfeiting the benefits, or neglecting the duties of useful occupation.

Social visits, like most of our enjoyments, may be made subservient to purposes of virtuous improvement and enlarged benevolence, or, if prevented, may be rendered the means of mutual contamination, and the corruption of manners.

It becomes important, therefore, to understand the things to be done, or avoided, in order to render social visits at once profitable and pleasing to ourselves and others.

Conversation forms an important branch of this subject. And perhaps, one of the most common vices of social intercourse, is the habit of detraction and slander. It is not my purpose to enlarge on this item. But surely one would think the topics of rational and pleasing conversation, at the present day, sufficiently numerous and varied, without indulging in so vile and narrow minded a propensity.

There is one thing respecting social visits, whether in town or country, that seems to require a radical reform, and I do not recollect to have seen it discussed to any extent or scarcely alluded to, by any of the essayists in the prints, though I wonder how it could have escaped the watchful moralists of the times. I allude to the custom which prevails to such an extent that one might be tempted to suppose eating and drinking were the sole pleasures to be desired from the meeting of friends, and the gratification of a gluttonous appetite the only object and occasion of their assembling together. Time would fail to enumerate the rational objections of this custom.

It is a waste of property. Many families expend in this way, in obedience to the tyranny of custom, what they really need to render themselves comfortable, and to educate their children.

It is a waste of time. Notice of the intended visit must be given a day or two before hand, that the thrifty housewife, in addition to her other labors, or in the necessary neglect of them, may have sufficient time to adjust the needful preparations.

It is an intolerable drudgery. I appeal to my female readers for the truth of this statement, and call on the 'Female Advocate' to relieve them from this burden.

It destroys the pleasure of visiting, by the consciousness of being burdensome, on the one hand, and the fatigue and lassitude, so difficult to conceal on the other. And when taken by surprise, or on short notice, the fair visitor is cumbered with such serving as scarcely find time to exchange a civil word with her visitor for whole hours together.

It excites a vain emulation among neighbors, to excel each other in the costliness and luxury of their feasts, and thus tends to encourage prodigality and all the connected vices of the age.

It fosters dielectric habits, prejudicial to the health, and calculated to counteract the benevolent efforts of the age, in favor of the promotion of temperance.

To bring this short lecture to a close, I hope my friends, whenever I visit them, will make no extra parade of cookery, and give me the plainest fare in their houses. And I give them notice, that if they visit me, they will find a friendly reception, but no luxuries.

Coming to the Point.—A young lady while walking with a gentleman stumbled; and when her companion, to prevent her fall, grasped her hand somewhat tightly. "Oh, sir!" she simpered, "if it comes to that, you must ask my Pa."

Heavy timbered lands.—"Is the land well timbered?" enquired a person of a Vermont, who was offering a tract of land for sale. "I vum," replied the vender, "it is most almighty piece of land and so heavily timbered that a humming bird could not fly through it. As I was going upon the road alongside of it 'tother evening I heard a loud cracking and crashing in the trees. I looked to see what it was, and I'm darned if it war't the moon trying to get through the branches, but it was so tarnation thick she couldn't do it, so down she went again, and I had to come home in the dark."

Married.—On the 26th Sept. at St. Mary's, Islington, Francis Budd, Esq. to Miss Mary Ann Little.

"Though autumn's come, this Budd's of use,
And blooms as if 'twere noon;
And nine months hence it may produce
A Little Budd—in June."

MASONIC MIRROR AND COLONIZATION ADVOCATE.

It is very philosophically observed by Addison, "that our greatest pride arises from doing good to each other," or in other words, being individually serviceable to society.

In offering a new enterprise to the notice of the public, the subscribers are aware of the obstacles to be surmounted; but they deem it a reflection upon the intelligence of a free people, to specify the advantages arising from the existence, in the West, of a well conducted publication on the two leading subjects of the Mirror and Advocate.

The MIRROR AND ADVOCATE, will advocate the unsullied principles of Free Masonry and Colonization. Literature and the Arts shall find in it, an untiring and zealous friend. Sketches of the eloquence of the bar, of the sacred desk, and of popular assemblies, shall occasionally flash in our pages. To these, our poetical column will and another recommendation.

It is useless to be more explicit, as we presume the want the proposed journal is not only admitted, but generally relying upon their love of justice and of public virtue await their decision.

The Masonic Mirror and Colonization Advocate, is published every other Tuesday. The terms, are $1 25 per annum, payable in advance; $1 50 if not paid until the expiration of six months, or $1 75 if payment be delayed until the end of the year. Agents will be allowed ten per cent on all subscribers they should obtain. Care will be taken to have the work well packed when sent by mail.

A Title Page and Index of contents, will be furnished at the close of each Volume.

PROPOSALS.

For publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist," a semi-monthly newspaper, in the town of Batavia, Clermont county, Ohio, by SAMUEL MEDARY.

WHEN I presented the following proposals for publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist," it was under extreme doubts, as regarded its success; knowing that such works were too commonly confined to the patronage of the select few. Determined, however, to try the experiment at all risks, and several agriculturists having pledged themselves to use their influence in giving it circulation, I commenced issuing a prospectus. I am already satisfied that the proposed publication will meet with an extensive patronage, and the decided approbation of those who are engaged in the various branches of Agriculture, and the Mechanic Arts.

I expect, and am already promised the assistance of several pens, the wielders of which possess the necessary requisites, to make any periodical interesting and useful. This work being devoted to the interests of the "Great West," and treating on subjects characteristic of the Mississippi Valley, will be either beneficial or interesting to every portion of the Union. Raising and improving stock—disease of animals—the vine—culture of silk—orchards—Field and Garden seeds—Improvements in mechanical Arts—Botany—Geology and Mineralogy—and sales of valuable public lands, are all topics, which will be noticed, and investigated, in a manner both amusing and instructive.

In addition, the editor is about commencing an experiment with the grape in this region, in connection with a nursery of fruit and ornamental trees, and he is anxious to obtain all the information upon these subjects, which science and experience have brought to light, and which he will convey to his readers for mutual advantage. He considers his location an advantageous one; although comparatively new, the surrounding country is densely inhabited with a thriving and industrious population, almost exclusively agricultural, sufficiently adjacent the Cincinnati market, (the best west of the Alleghany,) to give a stimulus to improvement in every variety of products; added to which is a soil, highly fertile and productive.

The Bank note list will be as extensive as possible, suited to any portion of the country, with a notice of the counterfeits on each. The review of the markets will be rather a condensed survey of the whole, and the state of trade, than confined to any particular point.

At the end of every volume, an extensive and complete index and title page will be furnished.

Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturist.

Owing to the solicitations of several friends of Agriculture, I propose to issue a paper from this place under the above title. A work to promote the cause of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, published in a cheap and compendious form, and taking a general view of the condition and resources of these branches of industry in the West, is considered an object of general utility, and interest, especially at this time. It is true, several works, partaking in a measure, of the same nature, already exist; but by a law of the State Legislature, passed February, 1833, for the encouragement of Agriculture—societies are shooting up in every direction. As these increase, the demand for information will increase in a corresponding ratio. Knowledge begets improvement and industry, and these, wealth; for it is a fact well known to the intelligent observer, that the wealth of the farmer increases in proportion to the improvements made in the stock and culture of his farm.

The labour saving machines, invented by the ingenious mechanic, have done much to facilitate the business of the Agriculturist where introduced; and the improved breed of animals, that fatten upon his well tilled soil, add luxuries to his table and riches to his store.

Subjects which come appropriately under the head of Horticulture, will, as the title of the paper designates, be interspersed through the work.

This paper will endeavor to excite a proper spirit of rivalry and ambition among the Western tillers of the soil; and will contain a regular record of the most interesting proceedings of the numerous Agricultural Societies that may come under the editor's notice. It will also contain, at least quarterly, a general list of solvent Banks in the Union—and review of the markets.

Much might be said on the importance of such a work, but the limits of a prospectus do not admit of it; the foregoing will give a general outline of its object.

The OHIO FARMER AND WESTERN HORTICULTURIST, will be published semi-monthly on a medium sheet with new type, and in quarto form, suitable for binding at $1 50 per annum in advance, or on the reception of the first No. All notes on solvent Banks, received in payment.

Any person, obtaining five subscribers, shall receive the sixth copy gratis, and in the same proportion for a greater or less number.

The first No. will be issued on the first day of January, 1834.
