

TOM BOLIN.
Tom Bolin was a Scotchman born, His shoes were worn out and his stockings were torn,
His jacket was short, his shirt was thin,
This is my summer dress says Tom Bolin.
Tom Bolin had no stockings to wear,
He got his mother to knit him a pair;
The calf of his leg came down to his shin,
I'm a delicate fellow says Tom Bolin.
Tom Bolin had no breeches to wear,
He bought a sheep skin and made him a pair;
The flesh side out and the wool side in,
They are charming and cool says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin had no boots to wear,
He bought a calf-skin to make him a pair,
The hair side out and the flesh side in,
Look at my boots says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin bought an old grey mare,
Her back humped up, her bones all bare,
Her legs were long and her body was thin, She's a willacious jade says Tom Bolin.

His saddle was made of an ox's tripe,
His bridle was made of a bull's wind pipe,
His cap was made of a woodchuck's skin,
I'm a terrible fellow says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin mounted his old mare to ride,
With his sword and buckler by his side;
Away he rode through thick and thin, I'm going a courting says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin came to a Dutchman's hall,
And in he went among them all;
You impudent fellow how dare you come in,
I'm come here a courting, says Tom Bolin.

Sit down, sit down, you're a welcome guest,
Which of my daughters do you like best?
One for beauty the other for kin,
I'll marry them both says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin's wife and his wife's mother,
All went over to the priest's together,
The door was shut and the string pulled in,
The devil! no priest says Tom Bolin.

The priest then took out of the door,
He saw three people but saw no more;
Good morning fair people, want you come in?
I'm come to be married says Tom Bolin.

After wedding they must needs have a dinner, (Though nothing provided that's fit for a sinner), Neither fish, flesh, nor any such thing—
But be of good cheer says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin, his wife, and wife's mother,
All went over the bridge together,
The bridge it broke, and they all fell in,
The devil! go with you says Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin's wife being a very thick squat, Out of the water soon she got;
Away she went through thick and thin, Inquiring for delicate Tom Bolin.

Tom Bolin crept into an old hollow tree,
And very contented he seemed to be;
The wind did blow and the rain beat in,
Better than no house says Tom Bolin.

From the Works of T. Moore.

THE SNAKE.
My love and I, the other day,
Within a myrtle arbour lay,
When near us from a rosy bed,
A little snake put forth its head.

"See," said the maid, with laughing eyes—
"Yonder the fatal emblem lies!
Who could expect such hidden harm,
Beneath the rose's velvet charm?"

Never did mortal thought occur In more unlucky hour than this;
For oh! I just was leading her To talk of love and think of bliss.

I rose to kill the snake, but she In pity said, it might not be.

"No," said the girl—and many a spark Flash'd from her eyelid, as she said it—
"Under the rose, or in the dark, One might, perhaps, have cause to dread it;

But when its wicked eyes appear,
And when we know for what they wink so,
One must be very simple, dear,
To let it sting one—don't you think so?"

THE FACTORY GIRL.
Although I am a Factory girl,
And summoned by the bell,
I will not curtsy favor,
For I'm independent still—
And my liberty is precious,
As the fibres of my heart,
In bonds we are united,
And never more will part.

For I cannot be a slave,
No I will not be a slave;
I am so fond of FREEDOM,
That I cannot be a slave.

Like the little birds in summer,
That sport among the trees,
And warble sweetest melody,
To swell the sinking breeze—
So I'll rove at my leisure,
Like the zephyrs on the strand,
And I'll tune my heart to pleasure,
For I'm at my own command.

For I cannot be a slave,
No I will not be a slave;
I am so fond of FREEDOM,
That I cannot be a slave.

Let oppression shrug her shoulder,
And a haughty tyrant frown,
And little upstart ignorance,
In mockery look down—
Yet I value not the feeble threats,
Of Tories in disguise,
While the flag of Independence,
O'er our noble nation flies.

For I cannot be a slave,
No I will not be a slave;
I am so fond of FREEDOM,
That I cannot be a slave.

Boiled Cat.—A few years ago, a farmer who was noted for his waggery, stopped at a tavern which he was in the habit of calling at on his way from H— to Salem.

The landlady had got the pot boiling for dinner, and the cat was quietly washing her face in the corner.—The traveller thinking it would be a good joke, took off the pot lid, and while the landlady was absent, put grimaldine in the pot with the beef and potatoes and then pursued his journey to Salem.

The astonishment of the landlady may well be conceived, when on taking up her dinner, she discovered the unpalatable addition which had been made to it. Well knowing the disposition of her customer, she had no difficulty in fixing upon the aggressor, and determined to be fully revenged.
Knowing that he would stop on his return home for a cold bite, the cat was carefully dressed. The wag called as expected, and pussy was put on the table among other cold dishes, but so disguised that he did not know his old acquaintance.

He made a hearty meal and washed it down with a glass of gin. After paying his bill, he acked the landlady if she had a cat she could give him, for he was plagued almost to death with mice; she said she could not for she had lost hers. "What?"
says he, "don't you know where it is?" "O yes!"
replied the landlady, "you have just eat it?"

He never was known to boil a cat afterwards.—

ELOQUENT EXTRACT.

How different is the scene we this day behold from that of fifty years ago. The traces of havoc have been erased by the hand of time. The happy farmer's boy sips the wine cup this day beside the blue streams once crimsoned with human gore.— Where banners and plumes went down amid the shock of battle, now the golden harvest waves its yellow sheaves. Where rolled the purple wave of blood, is now beheld the gambols of childhood, the frolic of youth. The angel of peace now hovers over our domestic alters, with outspread wings.
The hills.

"Which Freedom's share has ploughed, Still nurse a race that have not bowed,
Their knee to aught but God.

"The laurel wreaths their fathers won,
The children wear them still;
Proud deeds these iron men have done,
They fought and bled at Bennington,
And bled at Bunker Hill.

"By the mounds their ashes made,
By the altars where the prayed,
By our own right hand and blade,
Still we will be free."

If the time shall ever come when this mighty fabric shall totter; when the beacon of joy that now rises in a pillar of fire, a sign and wonder of the world, shall wax dim, the cause will be found in the ignorance of the people. If our union is still to continue to cheer the hopes and animate the effort of every nation; if our fields are to be untrod by the hirlings of despotism; if long days of blessedness are to attend our country in her career of glory; if you would have the sun continue to shed his unclouded rays upon the face of freemen, then educate all the children in the land. This alone startles the tyrant in his dreams of power, and rouses the slumbering energies of an oppressed people.
It is intelligence that reared up the majestic columns of national glory; and this alone can prevent them crumbling to ashes.

Byron on the Immortality of the Soul.—"Of the immortality of the soul," says Lord Byron, in a paper written toward the termination of his life, "it appears to me that there can be little doubt, if we attend for a moment to the action of the mind; it is in perpetual activity. I used to doubt of it, but reflection has taught me better. It acts also so very independent of body. In dreams, for instance; incoherently and madly, I grant you, but still it is mind, and much more mind than when we are awake. Now, that this should not act separately, as well as jointly, who can pronounce? The stoics, Epictetus and Marcus Aurelius, call the present state 'a soul which drags a carcass'—a heavy chain, to be sure; but all chains, being material, may be shaken off. How far our future life will be individual, or rather, how far it will resemble our present existence is another question; but that the mind is eternal, seems as probable as that the body is not so. But the whole thing is inscrutable."

Perseverance.—"I recollect," says Sir Jonah Barrington, "in Queen's County, to have seen a Mr. Clark, who had been a working carpenter, and when making a bench for the session justice at the Court House, was laughed at for taking peculiar pains in planing and smoothing the seat of it. He smiling observed, that he did so to make it easy for himself, as he was resolved he would never die till he had a right to sit thereupon; and he kept his word. He was an industrious man—honest respectable, and kind-hearted. He succeeded in all his efforts to accumulate an independence; he did accumulate it, and uprightly. His character kept pace with the increase of his property, and he lived to sit as a magistrate upon that very bench that he sawed and planed."

Qualification for Congress.—"Why do you not present yourself as a candidate for Congress?"
said a lady the other day to her husband, who was confined to the chair by the gout. "Why should I, my dear?" replied he, "I am not qualified for the station." "Nay, but I think you are," returned the wife; "your language and actions are truly parliamentary. When bills are presented, for instance, you either order them to be laid on the table, or you make a motion to rise; though often out of order, you are still supported by the chair; and you often poke your nose into measures which are calculated to destroy the constitution."

A spot on the Sun.—M. Von Pastoriff, a Danish astronomer, has remarked, in a letter to his brother astronomer, Schumacher, that he has of late frequently observed a small round spot about the sun, from which he is inclined to infer, as the spot always disappears in a short period of time, that it may be some body which moves round that planet.

Col. Crockett's Last.—"Well," said the Col. the day after a heated debate in the House of Representatives, "a man may get so full of pizen here, that if he bite himself he'd die."

Curious Custom in Sweden.—It is an almost universal custom in Sweden during the Christmas holidays, to expose a sheaf of unthrashed corn on a pole in the vicinity of their dwelling, for the poor sparrows and other birds which, at this inclement period of the year, must be in a state of starvation.

Mankind Classified.—Mankind may be divided into three classes. Those who learn from the experience of others—they are happy men.—Those who learn from their own experience—they are wise men. And lastly, those who learn neither from their own nor other people's experience—they are fools.

"What are you jumping after there?" said a schoolmaster to an urchin who stood up to his eyes in shirt collar.

"I wanted to spit sir," was the reply, "and I was jumpin' up to try to spit over my dicky!"

OFFICER'S GUIDE & FARMER'S MANUAL.

(By JOHN CAIN, Esq.)

JUST received and for sale at this office a few copies of the above named work, "containing a comprehensive collection of Judicial and business forms, adapted to the jurisprudence of Indiana, with an explanation of law phrases and technical terms both Latin and French; to which is prefixed the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and of the State of Indiana."
The Guide & Manual contains an abstract of the principal laws in force in the State, and correct forms for transacting legal business.—In short, it is a lawyer of its self, by the aid of which every intelligent reading person may be enabled to transact his ordinary law business correctly, without the aid of counsel.

PROPOSALS

For publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturalist," a semi-monthly newspaper, in the town of Batavia, Clermont county, Ohio, by SAMUEL MEDARY.

WHEN I presented the following proposals for publishing the "Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturalist," it was under extreme doubts, as regarded its success; knowing that such works were too commonly confined to the patronage of the select few. Determined, however, to try the experiment at all risks, and several agriculturists having pledged themselves to use their influence in giving it circulation, I commenced issuing a prospectus. I am already satisfied that the proposed publication will meet with an extensive patronage, and the decided approbation of those who are engaged in the various branches of Agriculture, and the Mechanic Arts.

I expect, and am already promised the assistance of several pens, the wielders of which possess the necessary requisites, to make any periodical interesting and useful. This work being devoted to the interests of the "Great West," and treating on subjects characteristic of the Mississippi Valley, will be either beneficial or interesting to every portion of the Union. Raising and improving stock—disease of animals—the vine—culture of silk—orchards —Field and Garden seeds—Improvements in mechanic Arts—Botany—Geology and Mineralogy—and sales of valuable public lands, are all topics, which will be noticed, and investigated, in a manner both amusing and instructive.

In addition, the editor is about commencing an experiment with the grape in this region, in connection with a nursery of fruit and ornamental trees, and he is anxious to obtain all the information upon these subjects, which science and experience have brought to light, and which he will convey to his readers for mutual advantage. He considers his location an advantageous one; although comparatively new, the surrounding country is densely inhabited with a thriving and industrious population, most exclusively agricultural, sufficiently adjacent the Cincinnati market, (the best west of the Alle-ghany,) to give a stimulus to improvement in every variety of products; added to which is a soil, highly fertile and productive.

The Bank note list will be as extensive as possible, suited to any portion of the country, with a notice of the counterfeits on each. The review of the markets will be rather a condensed survey of the whole, and the state of trade, than confined to any particular point.

At the end of every volume, an extensive and complete index and title page will be furnished.

Ohio Farmer and Western Horticulturalist.

Owing to the solicitations of several friends of Agriculture, I propose to issue a paper from this place under the above title. A work to promote the cause of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, published in a cheap and compendious form, and taking a general view of the condition and resources of these branches of industry in the West, is considered an object of general utility, and interest, especially at this time. It is true, several works, partaking in a measure, of the same nature, already exist; but by a law of the State Legislature, passed February, 1833, for the encouragement of Agriculture—societies are shooting up in every direction.
As these increase, the demand for information will increase in a corresponding ratio. Knowledge begets improvement and industry, and these, wealth; for it is a fact well known to the intelligent observer, that the wealth of the farmer increases in proportion to the improvements made in the stock and culture of his farm.

The labour saving machines, invented by the ingenious mechanic, have done much to facilitate the business of the Agriculturist where introduced; and the improved breed of animals, that fatten upon his well tilled soil, add luxuries to his table and riches to his store.

Subjects which come appropriately under the head of Horticulture, will, as the title of the paper designates, be interspersed through the work.

This paper will endeavor to excite a proper spirit of rivalry and ambition among the Western tillers of the soil; and will contain a regular record of the most interesting proceedings of the numerous Agricultural Societies that may come under the editor's notice. It will also contain, at least quarterly, a general list of solvent Banks in the Union—and review of the markets.

Much might be said on the importance of such a work; but the limits of a prospectus do not admit of it; the foregoing will give a general outline of its object.

THE OHIO FARMER AND WESTERN HORTICUL-TURALIST, will be published semi-monthly on a medium sheet with new type, and in quarto form, suitable for binding at $1 50 per annum in advance, or on the reception of the first No. All notes on solvent Banks, received in payment.

Any person, obtaining five subscribers, shall receive the sixth copy gratis, and in the same proportion for a greater or less number.

The first No. will be issued on the first day of January, 1834.
