

VISIONS.

I dreamt that thou wert a beautiful dame,
Who lived in days of yore,
And I thought that a myriad of suitors came,
And knelt thy charms before;
Then I looked on a brilliant tournament,
And I heard the trumpet's strain,
And a number of gallant knights were bent
To strive on the martial plain:
There was a laurel crown, and the favored knight
Who bore that prize away,
Might claim the hand of thy beauty bright,
On the eve of that joyous day;
And I thought that I was a warrior bold,
And I won the laurel crown—
'Twas dearer to me than a wreath of gold,
At thy feet I laid it down.

Again I dreamt—and methought that I
Was a proud young cavalier,
Who lived in the glances of his lord's one eye,
And thou wert the one most dear;
We dwelt in the sunny land of Spain,
And a thousand gallants strove,
The heart of thy virgin breast to gain,
Yet thou gav'st to me thy love:
And I came to thy balcony's jutting shade,
By the light of the moon and star;
And I warbled a pensive serenade
To my lightly struck guitar:
I bore thee away in the dreamy night,
To the holy altar's side;
And there, in thy garments of snowy white,
I made thee my blessed bride.

I breathe to thy beauty my true heart's sigh,
And thou seem'st to my waking gaze,
As fair as thou wert to my dreaming eye,
When a nymph of the olden days;
And I love thee as well as I loved in my dream,
When I thought thee a maiden of Spain,
And sung by the light of the starry gleam,
To my sweet guitar the strain:
Though the dazzling pageants of vision had fled,
The star of dreaming is here;
And though fancy's illusions around it are spread,
'Tis as fair to my soul 'tis as dear:
If the spirit of life from my bosom should flee,
And unto you far heaven stray;
Though bright as the heaven of my dream it should
'Twould avail not if thou wert away. [Selected.]

A BARBER'S ADVANTAGE.

An Officer, armed with a whisker and sword,
A Barber's shop entered, and manfully roared,
As he laid his dread falchion so keen on the table,
"Now, Knight of the leather-strap, if you are able
To shave without bloodshed, I offer my chin,
But the terms I shall tell you before I begin:
If one drop of blood shall be shed, I protest
The point of this sword shall run whiz through your vest."
The Barber shaven without fear—not a speck
Of the blood of the Warrior was seen on his neck.
At length our great hero exclaimed with a stare,
As he coaxed up his whiskers with true martial air,
"Explain how you shaved, for I can't understand,
Notwithstanding my threat, with so steady a hand."
The Barber replied, "It's a very plain case—
If 'one drop of blood' had appeared on your face,
The razor drawn crosswise with force most untoward
Would have saved you the trouble of grasping your sword." L. M. S.

Practical Lesson on Health. From an unpublished Journal of a Physician—Founded on long experience, and not derived from books.—Authors, and literary and nervous persons, whose brains are subject to perpetual excitement and large expenditure of their energies, require longer sleep and repose to restore their exhaustion, than those whose lives are passed in laborious exercise of the body.

Those whose occupation render it necessary to lead a life of confinement, or of sedentary habits, should daily devote a portion of their time to athletic and robust exercises in the open air, which refresh and invigorate the mind, if not too laborious.

Those who smoke a great deal are never temperate. Drunkards, it will be remarked, always reject tobacco, when liquor obtains the mastery—because the stomach is so excited and irritated, that smoking acts like an emetic. For the same reason, on rising from their couch, the more sensitive and relaxed condition of the organ, at this part of the twenty-four hours, generally causes them to part with their breakfast. By this symptom a confirmed drunkard may be detected.

The best remedy for sea sickness is to keep on deck, and work with the crew. We never scarcely see sailors suffering from this distressing malady; for powerful exercise of the body enables the digestive functions to perform their duty. Hence, from inaction, fowls cooped up in cages are also much subject to it, while the pigs and sheep, &c. having a wide range in the long boat, escape.

One of the most prolific sources of liver diseases, is want of exercise, causing torpor and obstruction in the digestive organs. And one of the most fruitful sources of that prevailing kind of insanity which is called melancholy, are these same derangements in the liver, causing morbid and unnatural impressions upon the mind, which, in turn, aggravate the disease itself. Moderate and agreeable exercise—such as gardening, walks through beautifully laid out grounds, horseback riding, &c.—are the great remedies. Hence the efficacy of this moral treatment of late years in lunatic asylums, where it has caused a revolution, and substituted kindness and common sense for brutality and chains.

Persons who are disposed to be fat or corpulent, are always liable to be bilious or dropsical; because the same condition of the secreting or assimilating functions which produce the accumulation of oil or fat, or water in the body, cause also a redundancy of bile and enlargement of the liver. Lord Byron never made a truer remark than that "fat was an oily dropsey."

Fat persons are of a pituitous, watery and relaxed fibre. Lean persons of a dry, rigid, hard fibre. One is the harsher of the other, the other wound up to a high degree of tension. The former are subject to depositions and enlargements in the cavities and organs—the latter more liable to inflammations and fevers. Therefore, the diet of the former should be drier, less fatty, and more animal, and even slightly stimulating; while the latter may indulge more freely in juicy fruits and succulent vegetables, as their digestion is stronger and warmer, if we may use the term.

In health, the quantity of food taken should be sufficient to produce only a slight degree of distension, as this assists digestion, and the quality should be a due mixture of animal and vegetable dishes—not too great a variety of the latter, and the whole proportioned to the degree of exercise taken.

Every meal in winter especially, should be more animal than vegetable, and at this season the dinner should always be accompanied by more or less of vegetable pickles and salt to dilute the bile and blood, which are thick in cold weather, from the greater quantity of oily and animal food eaten—and every meal should be followed by preserves of fruits, or sugar alone, with water, as a purifier of the food and corrector of the digestion.

A small quantity of meat should be taken at breakfast in winter, and a larger quantity at dinner, which last meal should be deferred till late in the afternoon, when the labors of the day are finished. These two meals are quite sufficient.

Suppers are superfluous and injurious—but if taken never retire until two hours afterwards, or longer, if possible.

AFRICAN SPORTS.

The following graphic sketch of a panther hunt, is from a new novel called "Makanna, or the Land of the Savage," the scene of which is laid in the southern portion of Africa.

"Hold back! That howl betokens harm!"
"Yes, by Jove, the dog will bleed to death! That hind-leg's broken, and the throat torn to the shoulder-bone!"
"Stand back! The Hottentots are cowering; 'tis no common beast! Each look to his prime—firm heart, and steady eye, the death-shot takes the skin."
"A panther! Yes, by Jove, big as a tiger! That spring has cleared the jungle! Look! he's thrown himself betwixt the forked limbs of that old thundered oak, and like a wild cat, lies on his side at bay! Now—"

"No, massa! me say no fire, massa! No, no, let de beast play de fisty-cuff'ee wid de dogg'ee."

The voice of Gaspal sounded just in time for a reprieve, and three of the dogs ran gallantly in. The panther's eyes glowed red with a fiery intensity, but still he remained as motionless on his post of vantage as if an inanimate carcass.

The largest hound having warily measured his distance, now made a desperate snatch; but with the dexterity of a juggler, the savage pard struck him at once right and left with his armed paws, and the unfortunate lurcher fell, blinded, bleeding and howling to the earth. The second, cowed at the fate of his comrade, ran, yelping off; but a fourth, coming to succour the third, both sprang forward open-mouthed. As if amazed, the panther half raised himself for the encounter, and when the dogs closed, first striking his claws with a sudden blow into the brain of the lowest, he caught the other in his jaws by the nape of the neck, and slung him over his head, spinning through the air.

"Now, by the prince of the devils, that dog-bitcher would slaughter a pack! Stand back, Gaspal, I'll have a shot! Back!"

The elephant 'roar' of Drakenstein was brought to a level, his finger on the trigger, when, with the most provoking nonchalance, the wilful Gaspal perched himself on a fragment of rock immediately before the intended victim.

"No, not de massa fire! me teach'ee de beast von little trick'ee, de last he'll ebber wont to learn."

As if awake to the hint, but with rather an equivocal expression of gratitude, the lips of the panther retracted, until the glistening ivory of his fanged teeth was perfectly apparent: his back began to arch, as if he anticipated a leap, and his dilated tail grew restless as an angry serpent.

The Hottentot felt that time was precious, and whirling his glittering pole-axe round his head with a most intimidating flourish, he brought it down with the rapidity of a thunder-clap, as he supposed, on the skull of his adversary!

As he supposed! Gaspal had a keen eye, but the panther had a quicker, and thus, by a change of attitude, the agile animal gave the descending axe free way to bury its fury in the harmless wood.

Disconcerted by this unexpected failure, Gaspal forgot himself so far as to lean forward in attempting to withdraw his weapon. The panther caught the momentary vantage, and striking a tremendous backward blow at the head of the unfortunate Hottentot, he tore off the better half of his left ear, and ripped up a considerable portion of his scalp.

Cootie bit his lip with rage, and fired! Men do nothing well in a passion, and an excellent charge was villainously wasted.

The panther again crouched, as if preparing to bound on the wounded Hottentot, who, howling with pain, still staggered forward, when the strange smile, which has before been noted, played like a momentary gleam on the countenance of Laron; his small rifle was brought as it were instinctively to his eye, and in an instant, shot through the brain, the panther lay gasping on the sand."

Gilpiniana. On Wednesday, as a young gentleman was taking an equestrian airing out of town, his horse took fright and ran at full speed towards the city. He had sped some two miles, when near the House of Refuge, he passed a gentleman and his daughter, also on horseback. The young lady's steed caught the enthusiasm, and joined the race. The father, alarmed for his child, applied the whip, but was soon left quite behind—the steeds which ran of choice, leaving the ground behind much faster than he who ran by compulsion. It was not long after the general race commenced, before the young gentleman was landed in the ditch, leaving the young lady mistress of the course. Her horse having distanced competition, ran down Broadway against time, the beautiful rider shrieking all the way with alarm, but maintaining her seat. Somewhere near the Park, the horse was stopped, and the tilt terminated without material injury to any one.

Indian Paradise. Red Jacket took part with the Americans in the war of 1812, and becoming attached to a Colonel, who was ordered on a distant service, took his farewell of him in the following speech:

"Brother, I hear you are going to a place called Governor's Island. I hope you will be a governor yourself. I understand you white people think children a great blessing, I hope you may have a thousand. And above all, I hope, wherever you go, you may never find whiskey more than two shillings a quart."

Irish Readiness. On a dispute between two officers on board a vessel whose crew were Irish and English sailors, one of them contended, that the English could not answer a common question with half that adroitness which was natural to the Irish. A bet being proposed, it was agreed to try the point immediately; and an English seaman was asked, what he would take to go up aloft blindfold in a hard gale: "I would take a month's pay," said the fellow. "And what would you take, Pat?" said one of the officers to an Irishman, "by St. Patrick! (said he,) I would take nothing but a fast hold."

A Swap. Mr. Snooks was asked the other day how he could account for Nature's forming him so ugly. "Nature was not to blame," said he, "for when I was two months old I was considered the handsomest child in the neighborhood—but my nurse, the slut, one day swapped me away for another boy, just to please a friend of hers whose child was rather plain looking."

"What is the future state?" said a clergyman, to a sprightly little girl. "Illinois, sir." "No, no," said the clergyman, "I mean what is the future condition of men and women?" "Why," replied the girl, hesitating—"I suppose they are to be married!"

SECOND YEAR OF

Parley's Magazine.

THE unexampled success of this juvenile Work which now circulates into every state and territory in the Union, has encouraged the publishers to renewed exertions in making it all that judicious parents could expect for the amusement and instruction of Youth.

It is important to remark that this Magazine has become a general favorite in Schools, and that judicious Parents and Teachers have discovered that its interesting matter, its spirited and appropriate engravings, its entire novelty, added to the circumstance of its coming every fortnight fresh from the press, in convenient and beautiful numbers, have all conspired to render it unusually attractive to young readers. It is read with avidity and pleasure; and the object of school education, so far as it relates to reading understandingly, acquiring at the same time valuable portions of knowledge, and an enduring taste for reading, is better accomplished by this interesting periodical, than by any means hitherto attempted.

There are now schools in every part of the country that take, some twenty, some thirty, some forty, and some as many as sixty-six copies of this Magazine; and the Teachers, one and all recommend its use; and importance in the most unequivocal manner, and are exerting themselves to increase its circulation.

To such as are yet unacquainted with Parley's Magazine, we would state some of the interesting topics it presents.

I. Natural History—Of beasts, birds, fishes, reptiles, insects, plants, flowers, trees, the human frame, &c.

II. Biography—Especially of the Young.

III. Geography—Accounts of places, manners, customs, &c.

IV. Travels and voyages, in various parts of the world.

V. Lively descriptions of the curiosities of Nature and Art—in each of the United States, and in other countries.

VI. Lessons on objects that daily surround Children in the Parlor, Nursery, Garden, &c. Accounts of Trades and Employments.

VII. Particular duties of the Young—to Parents, Teachers, Brothers, Sisters, &c.

VIII. Bible Lessons and Stories.

IX. Narratives—Such as are well authenticated; Original Tales.

X. Parables, Fables and Proverbs, where the moral is obvious and excellent.

XI. Poetry—Adapted to the youthful capacity and feelings.

XII. Intelligence—Embracing Accounts of Juvenile Books, Societies and remarkable occurrences.

Many of the subjects are illustrated by numerous and beautiful engravings, prepared by the best Artists, and selected not only with a view to adorn the work, but to improve the taste, cultivate the Mind, and raise the affection of the young to appropriate and worthy objects. We would make them better children, better brothers, better sisters, better pupils, better associates, and in the end, better citizens.

The Magazine comes out every other Saturday, and is sent to any part of the United States by mail.

—Price $1 a year, in advance,—6 copies for $5; 20 copies for $15; or 25 quarterly parts for $5—postage 1/4 of a cent, if under 100 miles, and 1/4 cents for the greatest distance.
