

SEVENTY-SIX.

BY WILLIAM C. BRYANT.

What herons from woodland sprung,
When, through the fresh awakened land,
The thrilling cry of freedom rung,
And to the work of warfare strung
The yeoman's iron hand!

Hills hung the cry to hills around,
And ocean-mart replied to mart,
And streams, whose springs were yet unfound,
Pealed far away the startling sound
Into the forest's heart.

Then marched the brave from rocky steep,
From mountain river swift and cold;
The borders of the stormy deep,
The vales where gathered waters sleep,
Sent up the strong and bold.

As if the very earth again
Grew quick with God's creating breath,
And, from the sods of grove and glen,
Rode ranks of lion-hearted men
To battle to the earth.

The wife, whose babe first smiled that day,
The fair, fond bride of yestereve,
And aged sire and matron gray,
Saw the loved warriors haste away,
And deemed it win to grieve.

Already had the strife begun;
Already blood on Concord's plain
Along the springing grass had run,
And blood had flowed at Lexington,
Like brooks of summer rain.

That death-stain on the April sward
Hallowed to freedom all the shore;
In fragments fell the yoke abhorred—
The footstep of a foreign lord
Profaned the soil no more.

BLACK AND BLUE EYES.

Black eyes most dazzle at a ball;
Blue eyes most please at evening fall.
Black a conquest soonest gain;
The blue a conquest most retain;
The black bespeak a lively heart,
Whose soft emotions soon depart;
The blue a staidier flame betray,
That burns and lives beyond a day;
The black may features best disclose;
In blue my feelings all repose.
Then let each reign without control,
The black all mind—the blue all soul.

THE GIPSY'S PROPHECY.

It was in the year 1822 that I visited the prisons of Rome. Among the unfortunate creatures brought hither by distress or guilt, I observed in the corner of a dungeon a young female seated on a handful of straw, nursing her infant. Her complexion was swarthy, and in her large black eyes glowed the fire of the sun of Italy. The relics of her apparel indicated that previous to her imprisonment she had worn the garb of a Roman peasant. Her expressive physiognomy and her bold look seemed calculated to excite curiosity. I approached, and begged her to relate to me through what misfortune she found herself in this place of horror.

"St. Francis!" exclaimed she; "what interest can the narrative of my extraordinary misfortune have for free and happy people? My name is Maria Grazia. My mother lost her life in giving birth to me. My father, devoted to his own pleasures and caring but little about my education, placed me, while yet very young, in a convent. The older I grew, the more irksome this kind of life became to me; for my inclinations, my disposition, and the vivacity of my character, all seemed to urge me on to a future full of trouble.

A circumstance, which I never could account for, had a powerful influence upon my fate. On some particular occasion, a gipsy-woman was admitted into the convent for our amusement. All the sisters were allowed to hold their ears to the tin-speaking trumpet of the old sibyl, who moreover gave to each of us a slip of paper, on which was written what the hag termed the decree of heaven. Thrice I went up to her for the purpose of enjoying the like favor, and thrice the oracle became mute. This refusal of the old woman excited partly my anger and partly my curiosity. I begged, I intreated, I wept; at length the gipsy was moved by my tears.

"You insist upon it, unhappy girl," said she; "well then, know that you will be the wife of a robber, who will murder your father, and that your hair will turn gray in a dungeon."

At the age of fifteen such predictions make no very deep impression. I laughed heartily on the subject with my companions, and loaded the old prophetic with ridicule. At night, however, when I was alone, my mind became, against my will, a prey to apprehensions. I passed the hours in anxiety and painful reverie, the prediction of the fortune-teller incessantly haunted my waking dreams.

My father took me out of the convent, but only to shut me up again with an old housekeeper at his country-seat, about five miles from Rome. One night the weather was very tempestuous. I could not sleep. I fancied that I heard a confused sound of voices under my window, which looked into the garden. I awoke my sister, who never went to bed without her weapon, which was a large carving-knife. Presently we heard the outer window-shutter broken open. We concealed ourselves behind the curtain; I had armed myself with the knife. A pane of the window was cut, and a hand was protruded through the aperture to fasten the shutter. I seized the opportunity and struck so effective a blow that the hand dropt at my feet. A sigh of agony and the sound of footsteps succeeded, and then all was quiet again.

At daybreak I repaired to Rome, where I related my adventure to my father; he admired my courage, and permitted me to leave the lonely villa. He was by this time thinking of marrying me, and even hoped that my adventure, which was soon rumored abroad, would forward his design.

Among my suitors there was a young cavalier, the beauty of whose handsome features was heightened by a delicate paleness. He gave himself out for a Florentine, and carried his arm in a sling, in consequence, as it was said, of a slight wound which he had received in an affair of honor. His kind attentions and amiable manners soon made a deep impression upon me. He solicited my hand. My father, with his usual levity, gave his consent, and we were united.

The day after our marriage my husband was no longer the tender lover; his looks were wild, his voice was harsh, and his smile sarcastic. Distressed at this melancholy change, I asked, with tears, after the cause of it.

There my husband bethought himself of his former comrades. He sought them out, discovered them, and a cavern of banditti was now his dwelling. His companions welcomed him with joy; but he had violated one of their laws, which forbids any of the members of the band to marry, and enacts that if a woman shall fall into their hands, she shall belong exclusively to the captain. No sooner had the latter set eyes on me than he rudely insisted on his right. His daring hand had already grasped me, when a ball from my husband's pistol extended the wretch on the ground. Disliked as he was by the band, his fall was a signal for a shout of joy from his comrades, who unanimously elected my husband their leader.

So completely was I possessed by that wild spirit which must have betrayed itself in my looks to the gipsy at the gate of the nunnery, that I was quite proud of my husband's elevation. I now wrapped myself in the coarse habiliments of a peasant, of which these rags still cover me, and with equal courage and pleasure accompanied my husband in his expeditions. Town and villages rang with his exploits: fate at length overtook him. He fell in a conflict with the horsemen who were sent against us and discovered our retreat. At the moment when I saw my husband drop, I sought shelter in a cavern for my infant; there I was seized and dragged to this dungeon, where I anticipate with horror the fulfillment of the latter part of that fearful prediction.

Such was the narrative of Maria Grazia, the widow of the bandit chief. In pity for her situation I offered her some pieces of gold, but she refused them, at the same time caressing her child, which had fallen asleep at her bosom.

From the New York Mirror.
HOPE AND MEMORY.

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

A little babe lay in its cradle, and Hope came and kissed it. When its nurse gave it a cake, Hope promised another to-morrow; and when its young sister brought a flower, over which it clapped its hands and crowed, Hope told of brighter ones, which it should gather for itself.

The babe grew to a child, and another friend came and kissed it. Her name was Memory. She said, "Look behind thee, and tell me what thou seest." The child answered, "I see a little book." And Memory said, "I will teach thee how to get honey from the book, that shall be sweet to thee, when thou art old."

The child became a youth. Once, when he went to his bed, Hope and Memory stood by the pillow. Hope sang a melodious song, and said, "Follow me, and every morning thou shalt wake with a smile, as sweet as the merry lay I sing thee."

But Memory said, "Hope, is there any need that we should contend? He shall be mine as well as thine. And we will be to him as sisters all his life long."

So he kissed Hope and Memory, and was beloved of them both. While he slept peacefully, they sat silent by his side, weaving rainbow tissue into dreams. When he woke, they came, with the lark, to bid him good morning, and he gave a hand to each.

He became a man. Every day Hope guided him to the table of knowledge.

But, at length, Age found him, and turned his temples gray. To his eye, the world seemed altered. Memory sat by his elbow-chair, like an old and tried friend. He looked at her seriously and said, "Hast thou not lost something, that I entrusted to thee?"

And she answered, "I fear so; for the lock of my basket is worn. Sometimes, I am weary and sleep, and then Time purloins my key. But the gems thou didst give me when life was new—I can account for all—see, how bright they are."

While they thus sadly conversed, Hope put forth a wing that she had worn, folded under her garment, and tried its strength in a heavenward flight.

The old man lay down at night, and when his soul went forth from the body, the angels took it. And Memory walked with it through the open gate of heaven. But Hope lay down at its threshold, and gently expired, as a rose giveth out its last odours. Her parting sigh was like the music of a seraph's harp. She breathed it into the bosom of a glorious form, and said:

"Immortal Happiness! I bring thee a soul that I have led through the world. It is now thine. Jesus hath redeemed it."

Incomparable Medicine.

DR. BLOODGOOD'S ELIXIR OF HEALTH.

IT is six years, since the proprietor, from investigating and seeking for a remedy for that formidable disease, Dyspepsia, discovered and prepared a remedy, to which he gave the above name. From its complete success in a number of other chronic diseases, and the earnest solicitation of many who had been relieved by the Medicine, he was induced, three years since, to publish and take measures to bring it into more extensive use,—determined at the same time that it should rise or fall by its own merits. Independent of the evidence in its favor, from the increased demand and rapid sales in every place in which it has been introduced, he has taken the utmost pains to learn its effect in the cure of diseases, and he is happy in being able to say, that it has far exceeded his most sanguine expectations, in relieving the afflicted. It has proved satisfactory in more than ninety cases out of a hundred, and he is not prepared to say, that no medicine ever offered to the public, has proved so salutary and efficacious as this Elixir, for curing all diseases which have their origin or primary seat in the Stomach, Liver, Spleen, Intestines, or any of the digestive organs.

It cures Dyspepsia, or Indigestion with its catalogue of Concomitants; such as pains and oppression of the Stomach after eating, pains in the Side, Shoulder and Head, sour Stomach, Heart Burn, Gurgling Sensations in the Stomach, when empty, Costiveness, or perhaps alternating with Diarrhoea, Dizziness in the Head, not unfrequently cold hands and feet, lowness or depression of Spirits, disturbed Sleep, Hysterics, Hypochondria, &c. &c. It also cures Liver Complaints, Jaundice, Bilious habits, Cough which proceeds from the Lungs sympathizing with a diseased Stomach, Dropsies from the same cause, or debility.

For Costive habits it is a never failing remedy. For delicate and weakly females and children it is well qualified to restore health. In ague and fever, if taken according to directions, it effects a permanent cure, thoroughly eradicating the disease from the system. It is a sovereign remedy in all those complaints for which Dr. Hooper's Female Pills are recommended—removing all obstructions and restoring blood to the silky and sallow cheek and plumpness to the meagre. It is highly valued as a preventive of all Bilious diseases. Its action is upon the Stomach, Liver, and Intestines, the prime regulators of the whole system; a diseased state of which causes most diseases. It removes all morbid bile and other morbid secretions from the system, restores all the secretions and excretions to health and activity, and promotes a healthy action in the stomach and all the digestive organs. From its power of cleansing the stomach and bowels from all morbid accumulations, it is adapted to a great variety of diseases on account of which it is highly valued as a family medicine, and as such is adopted by many of the most respectable families; who have so much confidence in its virtues, that they adopt it almost as an universal medicine. Persons residing in bilious districts will find it to their advantage to make a slight use of it through the sickly season, and those of bilious habit should use it during the Spring, as it excites the liver to a healthy action and purifies the blood from all gross humors.

It is entirely botanical in its composition, and may be taken by all ages and both sexes in every condition with perfect safety, without any alteration in diet.

For a full theory of the medicine see the wrapper on the bottle, where you may also find a great number of certificates of its unparalleled cures from the most respectable sources.

Prepared and sold whole sale and retail by H. EASTMAN, the sole proprietor, at his dispensary, Zanesville, where all orders will be promptly attended to, and by appointment, by J. R. LIPPITT & B. T. & J. WHITAKER.

For sale by the dozen or single bottle by E. FERRIS, Lawrenceburg, Ind.
