

NEWSPAPERS. The following apt description of the usefulness and variety of the Newspapers of the present day, we copy from the August No. of the 'Knickerbocker,' a New York periodical, which we take pleasure in recommending as entitled to a station in every respectable library:

"There is something exceedingly grateful in the country, when you can, as far as literature is concerned, enjoy the delectable urbs in rure; when you can get books, and especially newspapers; for whatsoever may be said by man or woman, as touching editors, they are famous ministers to our pleasure. We love to peruse their sheets; and even in times of political excitement, when a stranger to the country might be induced to believe that the greatest rascals in the Republic were rival candidates for the highest honors—when, among journalists, each one seems rempli de colere, and ready to pull every opponent by the nose—even then, we love to read their writings. We like to see the cut, the keen retort, the hot rejoinder, and the sequent quip. There is excitement in them.

Commend me to a newspaper.—Cowper had never seen one of our big sheets, when he called such four-paged folios, "a map of busy life." They are more—they are life itself. Its ever-sounding and resistless vox populi thunders through their columns, to cheer or subdue, to elevate or to destroy. Let a scoundrel do a dirty action and get his name and deed into the papers, and then go into the street—Broadway for example—and you will see his reception. Why does each passer-by curl his lip, and regard him with scorn? Why is he shunned, as if a noisome pestilence breathed around him? What makes every man observe him with a contemptuous leer? Because they have seen the newspaper, and they know him. So, in a contrary degree, is it with honorable and gifted men. The news-prints keep their works and worth before the public eye; and when themselves appear, they are the observed of all observers. Hats are lifted as they approach, and strangers, to whom they are pointed out, gaze after them with reverence. Success to newspapers? They are liable, it is true, to abuse—as what blessing is not? but they are noble blessings nevertheless. What an endless variety of subjects, too do they contain! Now we are entertained with original dissertations on numerous important subjects; and then, to use the quaint old catalogue of Burton, 'come tydings of weddings, maskings, mummeries, entertainments, jubilees, wars, fires, inundations, thefts, murders, massacres, meteors, comets, spectrums, prodigies, ship-wrecks, piracies, sea fights, laws, proclamations, embassies, trophies, triumphs, revels, sports, players; then, again, as in a new-shifted scene, treasons, cheating tricks, robberies, enormous villainies in all kinds, funerals, burials, new discoveries, expositions; now comical, then tragical matters. To-day we hear of new offices created, to-morrow of great men deposed, and then again of fresh honors conferred; one is let loose, another prisoned; one purchaseth, another breaketh; he thrives, his neighbor turneth bankrupt; now plenty then death and famine; one runs, another rides, wrangles, laughs, weeps, and so forth. Thus we do daily hear such like, both public and private news."

I have an attachment to newspapers, because I deem a kind of moral batture to be plaisance—or rail cars mayhap—wherein you can embark before breakfast, or after dinner, and survey the world, and the kingdoms thereof. It is a cheap and right wholesome way of journeying: indeed with the exception of few national jaunts, is about the only mode I have ever employed: "for I travel not, save in mappe and carde, in which my unconfined thoughts have freely expatiated, as having ever been especially delighted with the study of cosmogony." My bias for newspapers is at least an honest one. And I have been driven into it more perhaps from the worthlessness of the mass of republished books, than from the intrinsic merit of my hebdomadal visitors; for the name of these aforesaid books is legion; and most of them, if in sheets, would be fit only 'to put under pies, to rap spice in and keep roast meat from burning."

TROUBLE WITH THE FLORIDA INDIANS. The St. Augustine Herald of August 27th states that an express had just arrived at that place, from Fort King, with despatches for Brig. Gen. Clinch, commanding the United States troops in Florida, conveying information of the murder of Private Dalton, of the 3d artillery, who was employed in carrying the mail from Fort King to Tampa Bay. He was met on the evening of the 6th inst. near the Hillsborough bridge, by a party of six Micassan Indians. He approached them in a peaceable manner, when one of them seized hold of the bridle of his mule, and another shot him. He was then scalped, his bowels ripped open and thrown into a pond in the vicinity. The mule was shot, and the contents of the mail, and the saddle and bridle carried away by the murderers. The cause alleged for the outrage was, that an Indian had been killed in a skirmish with the whites, and his brethren were determined to sacrifice the first white man they should meet. A detachment was forthwith sent out in pursuit of the murderers but returned without apprehending them. A meeting was called by the Indian agent, and it is probable that the murderers will be taken and handed to justice.

N. Y. Times.

'Guess so.' There is not a more notorious or useful Yankeeism than these two words. Some English scribbler has said that 'it is almost impossible for a Yankee to talk without guessing,' and we 'guess,' he is more than half right. But the pith of the joke is, the real genuine Yankee always guesses what he knows to be certain. For ought we can conscientiously say to the contrary, a conversation like the following may have taken place, aptly illustrating our subject:

'What's going on up your way?'
'Can't you guess?'
'Guess I can't, what is it?'
'Nothing, I guess, only a train—aint you goin'?'
'Guess not.'
'Guess you'd better—have a fine time I guess.'
'Guess they will—but rather guess I'm engaged.'
'Guess you'll go?'
'Guess I shan't. Good day.'
'Good day.' [Exeunt ambo.]

ANECDOTE. A certain German, who had but a slight acquaintance with the English language was once invited to take tea with a married lady and her sister. Having observed previously when in company, that he was at a loss in pronouncing the word mistake, which in his dialect approached rather nearly mus-tick, he examined a dictionary containing many provincial definitions, he found mistake, 'to get the wrong sow by the ear.' He accordingly took tea and while sipping a cup of it, he cast a very knowing look towards the sister and said, 'I tink de American ladies are not so vont of coffee as de Germun ladies ish, Miss Mary.' At this, the young lady looked at her sister's name and said, 'my sister's name is Mary, mine is Jane. Ah! said the German, ah! pardon, I hat de wrong sow on de ear!'

THE LION'S STRENGTH. Well authenticated accounts prove, that a lion will carry off an ox or a horse with nearly as great ease as a fox would do a goose. A young lion has been known to carry a good sized horse a mile from the spot where he killed it, and an instance occurred in the Snouberg, where a lion carried off a two-year old heifer, and when his track or spoor was followed by the hunters for 5 hours on horseback, throughout the whole distance, the carcass only once or twice was discovered to have touched the ground. Sparrman says he saw a lion at the Cape of Good Hope take a heifer in his mouth, and, though the legs trailed on the ground, he carried it off as a cat would a rat, and leaped a broad-like without the least difficulty.

RETORT PROPER. Our devil a few days since, was interrogated by a man, who had provisions to sell, "with the question 'do you want to buy any flower here?' "No, we take eastern flour," replied the lad. The man with the bag started, and asked him what he meant. "Why," said the lad, when you were asked to subscribe for a Missouri paper you said you couldnt, because you took an eastern paper. So we took you at your word, and sent east for our flour." The man of grains looked confused for a moment and rejoined: "That was but right—those who won't encourage you, ought not to expect your custom—so you may send me the paper."—Western paper.
