

CASTLE BRINGS SAD ENDING TO ITS MARRIAGES

Society Wonders Who'll Be Next in Mansion Known for Its Heart Aches.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The "Curse of Castlewood" has claimed another victim. The million-dollar mansion, built at Cold Spring Point, New York, number of years ago by Louis Brigrule, and eventually sold to pay off the mortgage upon it, is said to bring bad luck to its occupants, the last of which was the late Mrs. John Hannan, who died recently.

Castlewood, the Brigrules; wealth and romance—how many memories they recall!

Many people remember the sensational exploits of the Brigrules at Newport. "The wonderful Brigrules, what will they do next?" was the general comment upon the ventures of the native sons.

Louis—in those days nicknamed by Nation Rives "Louis le Grand"—was the youngest of the four sons of Emile Brigrule, millionaire of Newport, to storm the gilded gates of Newport. He became a favorite of such social arbiters as the late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. He gave charming bachelor dinners and finally he bought a piece of land on Cold Spring Point and built "Castlewood" at a cost of $1,000,000.

When the new home was nearly completed Brother Emile, poet, musician and satirist, appeared on the scene and produced an opera, called "Baroness Fiddlers," ridiculing well known persons of the set in which Louis le Grand was anxious to shine. This had disastrous results for "le Grand's" ambitions.

"FISCO FIRE STARTS DOWNFALL."

Debts and financial embarrassment due to the slump in the Brigrule fortunes after the San Francisco fire made it necessary to mortgage "Castlewood" and finally the home had to be sold to meet demands. It was said at this time a society "band" supposed to be interested in Louis—became quite frigid.

Newport had been very kind at one time to Louis and his mother, the widow of Emile Brigrule, a "forty-niner," who left her almost $10,000,000, although it was known that their fortunes were ebbing and they were deeply in debt.

And it was about this time that Mrs. Pedar Brigrule, now divorced from her husband, came to Newport. Her mother and brother did not seem to care for the lovely Mrs. Pedar and other women were afraid of her greatly.

She had been married to a very wealthy man, but without means. She was the granddaughter of Gen. Hall, of the confederate army. Her marriage with her husband did not last long. The birth of their son Pedar got a divorce at Reno. She then married Stewart Denning, a broker, and this marriage was soon annulled. Her reported engagement to W. P. Burdett, a senator, was made greater by her sudden departure to Europe without explanation. Burden had been the husband of Natica Rives, who gave Louis his fortune and whose death shocked society.

That summer at Newport Peter Cooper Hewitt became interested in Mrs. Brigrule and has since become her husband. He is a descendant of the famous Cooper family, and is a distinguished scientist, having invented the Cooper Hewitt light. Mrs. Hewitt recently returned to New York wearing a diamond anklet.

EDDAR TAKES HIS THIRD WIFE.

But Pedar, too, had been busy and had married Nana Prince King, his third wife. He had been twice divorced previous to this.

When their financial situation made life at Newport difficult, Louis took his mother to France, where they lived several years. Mrs. Brigrule wanted to return to America, but after the beginning of the war, feared submarines, especially following the Lusitania disaster. She finally did sail for home on the Araba.

The vessel was torpedoed and Louis and his mother, Josephine Sather Brigrule, were among the last persons left on the promenade. A desperate effort was made by her son to save her, but the mother was drowned. And Louis went back to fight for France.

In 1916 a contest was begun among the heirs for the French estate, which had recuperated after the fire. Pedar, Louis, Francis and Emile were in the legal battle. Louis was the best known socially.

The Brigrules are descendants on the paternal side of Spanish dukes, which may account for the restive propensities displayed, and Mrs. Josephine Brigrule was the daughter of Pedar Sather, a Norwegian and pioneer San Francisco banker.

The mother of the "Brigrule boys" once said:

"We, as a family, have been cursed with beauty—too great a beauty. It was not ours by birth, but married into the family. And our sorrows have been many."

Emile, once knighted by the King of Portugal, had tried matrimony with Miss Vesta Shortridge, a western beauty, and with sad results, too. It was said that after they were divorced and she agreed to marry again Emile tried to negotiate with her for a renewal of their bonds, but without success.

Castlewood seemed to have brought bad luck to the Brigrules, its builders. Bankruptcy, divorce and a tragic death center about it.

Louis sold the house to Arnold Essex, a wealthy manufacturer of Providence, R. I. He occupied Castlewood only one season and died suddenly, leaving the house to a friend, who sold it to its last owner, Mrs. John Hannan.

No one believes Mrs. Hannan will care to occupy the house, and society is asking, "Who will want Castlewood now?"

JAIL GETS DAD AS SON IS OUT

Stepfather's Cash Saves Only One in Court Tangle.

Jail doors today closed on Jacob McLean, 48, for forty-eight hours when it was proved in criminal court that he appropriated for his own use $153 which was raised to pay a fine for his son, Oliver McLean.

Oliver was sentenced some time ago on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a girl, whom he afterwards married. The son spent sixty days on the Indiana state farm and was released when friends of young McLean raised $75 which was paid to the state.

This sum was turned over to the father. The fine was stayed for ninety days. The son testified that before this he gave his father $82 to pay his fine and that his father failed to pay the fine and costs. The fine was finally paid when the stepfather of young McLean put up the money.

Judge Collins sent the elder McLean to jail until Monday to "think the matter over behind iron bars."

CAVE MAN THIEF GOES FOR GIRLS

Makes Three Attempts to Steal Sleeping Ones.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 2.—The St. Louis police force has dealt with every possible kind of burglar. It has had its regular quota of ordinary burglars, and "stick-up" men, coupled with oddities in the form of whisky burglars, sugar thieves, candy robbers, second-story men who dealt only in women's negligees—thieves had stolen every possible thing there is to steal, the police thought, until a "new one" sprang up several weeks ago.

He is the "girl burglar," specializing in stealing girls from their beds—rather attempting to steal them, for so far he has met with failure in three attempts, due to pursuit by irate parents.

POLICE CALL HIM MOST BAFFLING.

He is the most baffling burglar the police have yet had to deal with, and a city-wide dragnet has been spread for the man.

His latest attempt was at the home of Walter Rick, No. 3218 Dodder street, where, in the wee, small hours the burglar entered the bedroom and stole a girl from her bed and dashed from the house. The girl's screams brought her father in pursuit. Clad only in his night clothes and barefooted, the father pursued the intruder, who when on the verge of capture, dropped, a girl, wearing only her sleeping negligee, in a snowbank and disappeared up a handy alley.

STOLEN GIRL, 16, LUMPED IN SNOW.

The burglar pursued the same tactics in an attempt to carry off 16-year-old Mildred Bundin of No. 2328 Madison street. Mildred was dumped in a snowbank in the rear yard of her home when her father pursued a sensation.

The third victim was not so lucky. There being no snow when the burglar visited her home, she was dropped on the cold pavement when the pursuit became too hot for the "cave man" burglar.

London Has Branch of U.S. Hoboes' Union

LONDON, Feb. 2.—As all things, good and bad, percolate from America to England sooner or later, the establishment of a bona fide London branch of the American Hoboes' Union, of which James Eads How, the St. Louis millionaire, is patron and arch-hobo, should be chronicled.

The British G. H. Q. of the Hoboes' Union is now suitably housed in Harrow road, where 100 members met and swore by the wrath of Jack London and all other true road knights to uphold the economic principles which "aim at the emancipation of the dispossessed."

George B. Mason, secretary of the Hobo club, said:

"Our members are idealists, but victims of existing economic conditions; they are submerged in this world of materialism. They have ideals for a better system of civilization, but have neither conditions; they are submerged of giving practical expression of them."

Income Tax Tough on Alimony Club

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—The "alimony club" here is wailing shrill wails over what it terms the injustice of the income tax law.

The case of one man is typical. Being divorced, he is listed as a single man under the law, with an exemption of only $1,000. He pays $90 a month, or $1,080 a year, alimony. His three children, who live with their mother, but are supported by him, entitle him to exemptions of $200 each, making his total exemption $1,600. But, as alimony is not deductible, he pays his actual exemption at only $50, amounting to little more than one-half the minimum exemption intended by the income tax law to be allowed to every individual as the amount necessary to live on.

"There are thousands of others here in the same boat," said this man. "The income tax law sure is hell on us grass widows."

Boy Gets Long Term for School Shooting

Leverne Peeler, 17, was sentenced to serve from two to fourteen years in the Indiana reformatory on a charge of firing a revolver at Peeree Riedy, 800 Lexington avenue, who is a janitor at a city school at Virginia and Fletcher avenues, by Judge Collins in criminal court Saturday. The evidence showed that Peeler became angry at the janitor when ordered off the grounds when in company with a girl and that he obtained a revolver and fired one shot through a window of the schoolhouse. Peeree was not struck.

Peeler tried to obtain a suspended sentence because of illness, but the court refused to be influenced.

Stork Picks Button From Bride's Coat

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—Capt. Roy M. McKecher, an attorney, and his bride returned here recently from their honeymoon in Florida. While there they visited an ostrich farm. During their inspection they were followed persistently by a long-legged, long-billed bird much different from the others. It finally became so affectionate that it pecked a couple of buttons off the bride's coat, which McKecher decided was somewhat nervy.

"What kind of an ostrich is this, anyway?" he demanded of a keeper.

"That ain't no ostrich," replied the keeper. "It's just a plain stork."

Aged Parents Mortgage Home to Save Son From Prison Term

The love and devotion of an aged mother and father, who mortgaged their own little home in the hills of Virginia where they have lived for years, to raise $855 to make up the shortage of their son, today saved Allen G. Armstrong, 33, an expert accountant of Pittsburg, Pa., from going to prison on a plea of guilty to embezzlement.

Armstrong pleaded guilty in the criminal court to an indictment charging embezzlement of $505 from C. F. Neffie, 357 North Illinois street, of this city, who previously employed Armstrong as an accountant.

The money raised by the aged couple was immediately turned over to Mr. Neffie and Judge James Collins withheld judgment in the case.

"I'll send Armstrong to prison the mother and father, an aged couple, will lose the roof over their heads," said the court. "I will withhold judgment as long as Armstrong continues to make payments to his parents and leads the right kind of life."

Mrs. Armstrong, with their adopted baby, appeared in court and stood by her husband during the ordeal.

Allen G. Armstrong, who worked in his work in the east, but will maintain a home here.

SETTLE AMAZING LOVE DILEMMA

Immigration Authorities Lets Baby and Unwed Mother In.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The immigration authorities, it was announced, have decided to admit to this country Emily Knowles, 21-year-old English girl, and her baby, which is said to be the child of Percy Spiker of Baltimore. The admission, however, is temporary and at the end of three months the case will be taken up again.

If during the three months Miss Knowles marries Guy Spiker, brother of Percy, she will be allowed to remain permanently in this country. It was learned.

Miss Knowles, according to the decision of the immigration bureau, is to go to a family "in a certain northern state," where she will remain in the custody of old friends. She will be given an opportunity to see Guy Spiker, so the strange romance will have a chance to develop normally. She has already seen Guy, it was stated here, and has agreed to marry him. Both Guy and Miss Knowles, officials said, have fled after having been charged with the murder of a friend.
