Any favorable change in prices of hogs on Thursday was not the result of an agreement among buyers, but all seemed willing to pay a little more for the hogs most suited to the requirements of orders and more or less of the business was 10c to 25c higher than the scheduled prices for the same kind of hogs on Wednesday. None of the hogs averaging less than 225 pounds sold lower than $15.75, and most of the sales were at $15.85 to $16, probably 10c higher in a general way than the same kinds sold on the day before. The competition for the heavier grades was not as keen and they were slower sellers, but finally were practically steady. A few transactions were 25c higher than the mid-week schedule, but this did not affect the general average on the hogs that sold from $14.50 to $15.50. The pig market was steady at $15 down, and sows as high as $13.25 were a little higher, but most of the sales were from $13 down. There were only 5,000 fresh receipts and a good clearance was made.

Cattle.

There was an active market for a run of only 800 cattle on Thursday and prices, instead of being lower as the trend in affairs on Wednesday indicated, were strong with some of the female butcher cattle higher. An unexpected support from outside buyers changed the adverse sentiment among the local killers, but they followed the pace rather reluctantly and promised to attack prices whenever the supply equaled the demand. Since the close of last week there has been a gain of at least 25c in prices of the better kinds of cows and heifers and the best steers are showing considerable strength, but medium cattle are slow sellers at prevailing prices. After a steady start the demand for calves was keen and finally the sales from $19.50 down were 50c higher than for the day before. The demand for feeding cattle was fair for Thursday and prices were steady.

Sheep.

There was quite a decrease in the receipts of 200 sheep and lambs and the quality was of a lower standard than it has been heretofore this week. There were no western lambs sold higher than $19.
