

THIRD MANAGER IN THIRD MONTH

Wood Changes Jockies Often and Raises Clamor.

Special to The Times.
CHICAGO, March 12.—"You can't change jockies during a race and win." That laconic racing axiom is being applied gleefully by friends of Gov. Lowden, Hiram Johnson and other candidates for the U. S. P. presidential nomination to the situation created by the advent of Frank Hitchcock as the third campaign manager. Gen. Wood has had in three months.

First, there was John T. King of Connecticut. He was ditched for William Cooper Proctor, the Cincinnati millionaire soap manufacturer, after he had lined up more than 400 delegates for Wood by old-time methods.

That King had refused to let Hitchcock share the honors of delegating stables, had spent more than half a million dollars without keeping any votes and had refused to consult Wood before promising governors and state bosses cabinet positions and ambassadorships in return for support, were properly accepted reasons for his being unsaddled in favor of Proctor.

Proctor's reign as manager of Wood's campaign has been distinguished by greatly increased expense around the costly Congress hotel headquarters and success in getting his candidate and himself laughed at for ridiculous acts. Around Lowden headquarters they tell how Proctor ordered, as one of his first acts, that headquarters be doubled in size. It was explained that with King's departure the treasury was found to be empty.

Proctor is reported to have produced his personal check for $100,000 in order to get things going as he wanted them. At any rate the Wood headquarters doubled in extent and expense almost overnight with Proctor's arrival.

So Hitchcock is here with his famed rubber heels, quiet smile and quieter manner of lining up delegates, but the Lowden, Johnson and other boomers are still laughing over the triple change in jockies.

WOOD FOR PACT WITH CHANGES

startling or new. The more ignorant a man is the more prompt he is in passing out new advice and new ideas. We want to seek new ideas, but I think we ought to be careful now, because the whole world is alive with the spirit of unrest. We can control these conditions very easily, but we have got to control them by co-operation. The danger in this country is not the alien red. He is simply a nuisance, that is all. The danger is our own indifference. "Labor is not a chattel or a commodity. It has no special rights or privileges. The rights of property are sacred. We can never violate these. We have got to stand for the rights of property, the rights of the individual, and we have got to impress upon all people that the only way to succeed is to work, and in order for labor to work contentedly you have got to give a reasonable and decent wage."

"So we want to stand for America first and a long way first. Avoid loose-fibered internationalism as you would death, for it means national death. Try to build up a strong national spirit, a spirit which will make America helpful to a world in trouble, as we were in this war, only a spirit which will be a little more prompt in its reaction."

"We want no class legislation. We want legislation that is just for all. One flag, one language, one loyalty and an opportunity for every man and woman."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NANCY FINDS HER BLUE UMBRELLA.
THE twins were returning after a visit to the lost books when they suddenly found themselves in the lovely cool shade of the forest of Misad-Umbrellas. There were umbrellas and parasols of every shape and hue, from Japanese paper ones to the kind the circus man jumps out of the balloon with, up in the sky.

But right on the edge of the wonderful woods was a dear little dark blue silk umbrella with a tassel on the stick.

"Why, you are mine," cried Nancy in delight. "I got you for my birthday and lost you in Sunday school."

"No," said the little umbrella, "you thought you did, but you didn't. You left me standing against a fence on your way home; then Mrs. Brown's cousin's daughter's friend found me on her way to the train, and then forgot all about me when she got to town. Next a soldier found me and took me home to his little sister; she lost me in school and the teacher put me in the cupboard where she forgot me. The janitor found me in vacation and gave me to his little girl, who loaned me to her friend who dropped me down—"

"Oh, stop, stop, stop!" cried Nancy. "I'm getting dizzy. 'Did you really belong to all those people?'"

"Yes!" sighed the pretty little dark blue silk umbrella. "And I got so tired I came here to The Land of Lost-Things to stay."

"Oh, I'm sorry," said Nancy. "I thought perhaps I could take you with me when I go home."

What the little umbrella was going to answer we'll never know, for the magical mushroom whisped to the green shoes that it was time they were returning for tea.

And, whisk! Away they went. Quick as wink Nancy and Nick were back in their house in Peach-Can Town.—Copyright, 1920, N. E. A.

"A Store—and More"

TOMORROW!

First and Biggest Day of the Great Carload Lot Sale

The Big Demonstration and Sale starts tomorrow—Saturday. Don't fail to be here. Come and see how this famous oil-burning range will roast, boil or fry—ANYTHING—as perfectly and quickly as a city gas range, and quicker than any coal or wood range. See how this wonderful range makes its own gas from cheap kerosene. And how, because of its famous patented features, all smoke and odor is positively eliminated. See how, in fact, "Red Star" for the first time brings farm and town homes the efficiency of the city gas ranges—and at a fuel cost far cheaper. You'll be surprised at its amazing convenience and economy. All the drawbacks of ordinary oil-burning ranges are ended.

Come in and get the secret of this stove's wonderful success in thousands of homes. Its success is due to its patented 8 1/2-pound "double-ring flame" burner, which is entirely different from the burner on any other oil burning stove. No wicks—no asbestos rings—no substitutes of any kind. It is made to concentrate a "double-ring flame" directly beneath your cooking utensil. Then, too, the iron burner gets red hot—giving perfect vaporization of even cheapest kerosene—preventing smoke or odor—and making possible at least 30% more heating efficiency. In fact, you get 19 hours of perfect cooking or baking heat from each gallon of kerosene.

But, remember, there will not be enough "Red Stars" in this Carload Lot Sale to supply our customers. There are

Only 150 Offered

—and the factory can not promise us another "Red Star" for this Sale. This means that it is to your advantage to come to our store tomorrow if possible. For when these 150 "Red Stars" are gone, the Sale must be withdrawn.

And remember, probably never again will we be able to make you an offer on a "Red Star" to equal this one.

This offer is made in co-operation with the factory, under whose supervision this Sale is being held.

Special Offer!

Good Only During This Sale

Free This $3.00 pure Aluminum Roaster, big enough for 6-pound chicken. Positively for this sale only.
