

Indiana Daily Times

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Daily Except Sunday, 25-29 South Meridian Street.
Telephones—Main 3500, New 28-351

MEMBER OF AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS.

Advertising Offices—Chicago, New York, Boston, Detroit, G. Logan Payne Co.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Indianapolis, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Subscription Rates—By carrier, Indianapolis, 10c per week; elsewhere, 12c.

By mail, 50c a month, $1.25 for three months, $2.50 for six months, or $3.00 a year.

SURE, we're going to have a new courthouse some day. But when will we pay for the one we now have?

SHREVEPORT also appears to have a stubborn council that just will not undertake to regulate the clock for anybody.

Two Political Markets?

Looking at the matter wholly from a political standpoint, it is not difficult to understand why the county of Marion is listening to a plea to turn the courthouse yard into a market house.

The politicians who control the county business have for many months looked with longing eyes on the political machine that the city has built up through control of the city market place. It is only natural that a certain amount of envy creeps into that gaze.

Therefore, when there is a misguided demand for the creation of a market place under the control of the county, it is not strange that the county officials should take the opportunity thus offered to create a market machine of their own.

There is no denying that the county market project is supported by some producers who honestly desire opportunity to market their wares, which opportunity is practically denied them by the city in its zeal to protect the peddlers and politicians who are waxing fat in the city market.

But the establishment of two politically controlled markets will not right the market evil. It will merely enhance the advantages of the politicians at the public expense and for that reason the project of establishing a county market should be abandoned.

What is needed is not another market place, but a cleaning of the old. Those who are advocating the establishment of a county market under conditions that would make it no better than the present city market, would accomplish much more if they would devote their energies to forcing the politicians in control of the city market to let go of their special privileges and transform the city market into the institution which it was first intended to be—a place where producers and consumers may meet each other face to face.

Zoercher Corrected

Phil Zoercher, appointed by Gov. Goodrich to fill the place on the state tax board which should be filled by a democrat according to law, has been repudiated by the other two members of the board, and just when he was going good as a "defender" of the law, too.

Mr. Zoercher was probably the only man in Indiana who was willing to pose as a democrat and at the same time defend the indefensible Goodrich tax law. He was willing, for the consideration that goes with the job, to travel over the state and expound the virtues of the law against which his party intends to make the 1920 campaign fight. He has been doing the same to the very best of his ability and by all the rights of common decency should have the support of the tax board members, if of no one else.

But in the course of his ridiculous defense of the indefensible, Mr. Zoercher ran across a great deal of opposition to the scheme of his fellow workers to make every household list the number of pillows in the house and pay taxes on them while others with $5,000 automobiles avoided taxes by keeping the title to the said automobiles in the name of the wife.

Mr. Zoercher realized that this scheme to make the poor man carry the burden of taxes was unpopular. He tried to dodge it by the assertion that the additional listing, requiring information as to pillows, etc., was only to be filled out in event of disputes between the assessor and the assessee. For a few days it looked like Phil had quashed a good argument against the tax law.

But the other members of the tax board, whose skins have become too tough to be punctured by the thrusts of the poor man, had other ideas on the subject.

So they gathered in the regal chambers of their autocratic power and framed a letter to all assessors telling them not to listen seriously to Phil, as Phil was only making a noise like a defense of the tax law anyhow, and was not speaking officially.

In short they allowed their colleague and doughty defender to stand before the public corrected, gently slapped on the wrist. In other words they completely repudiated his statement about the lack of necessity of listing the pillows.

Mr. Zoercher will probably continue to defend the tax law in the future as he has in the past. His salary seems to depend on it.

But the people who foregather for the purpose of listening to Mr. Zoercher stultify himself will remember that Phil was wrong in regard to the pillows. And knowing that he was wrong in this matter of minor importance they will be amply justified in doubting his ability to give them correct information in matters of graver import.

Same Old Germans Still

When the Germans violated their treaty with Belgium and overran that little country in their mad dream of world conquest, they snapped their fingers and said treaties were mere scraps of paper, anyhow. More than four years of war, during which the civilized nations joined hands to convert Germany to the belief that treaties between nations are not scraps of paper to be torn up at will, apparently did not succeed. Germany's professed repentance was all a sham. She is the same old Germany still. The treaty of peace which she signed is only a scrap of paper to her and she has not yet got rid of her dream of ruling the world. The men who have seized the government of Berlin belong to the same gang that broke their word in 1914 and are getting ready right now to break Germany's word with the allies as given when the peace treaty was signed. It is too early to tell whether this revolt is on the square or whether Ebert and his fellows are a party to it in an effort to get out of the terms of the peace treaty. When you deal with the Hun you are dealing with a treacherous customer who has no regard for his own laws or constitution or contracts with others.

Those who declare that the allies stopped too soon when they agreed to the armistice are not so far off. Having failed to keep the war going until Germany was so soundly beaten she couldn't play false again, the next best thing was a league of nations in which the whole world served notice on Germany and others like her that all the cards must be laid upon the table in future dealings between nations. Such a league was formed, but the United States senate so far has kept the United States out of it. Without the moral support of the United States and her representatives in the league it is not powerful enough to be effective. As long as the United States has held aloof the German has not been afraid of the league of nations. With the United States in and ready to back it up with all her power, Germany long ago would have settled down into an honest effort to get on her feet, go to work and pay her debts. It isn't at all certain now that while the senate fiddled with the peace treaty and the league of nations Germany hasn't been quietly fomenting trouble for the allies in Asia Minor and everywhere else she could, hoping that if a new conflict were started she would find her chance to tear up the peace treaty. Germany never has intended to abide by the treaty if she could squirm out of it. The new revolt may be a typical German step in a plan to do this.—W. D. Boyce in the Saturday Blade, Chicago.

What, Indeed!

Chairman Will Hays of the republican party on April 9, 1919, said: "There is one thing that I can not help feeling strongly about and that is that it is the business of the congress elected last fall to be at work on important matters of legislation. The senators and congressmen elected last fall received a mandate from the people. They are morally charged with the task of reconstruction, so far as legislation affects reconstruction."

It has been nearly a year since Mr. Hays prated of the "mandate of the people."

The congress has been in session the greater part of that time. What legislation has it enacted that affected the "reconstruction," with which the senators and representatives were "morally charged?"

RISK'S PLATFORM AND SOME BULLSEYES HIT AND MISSED

—An Editorial in The South Bend News-Times—

While we are holding no brief for any democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in Indiana—McCulloch, Iseburger, Niblack or Risk—we are frankly impressed by a letter by the latter, James K. Risk of Lebanon and Lafayette, to Democratic State Chairman Salles, some parts of which incline to give our disapproval even though we may not be disposed to endorse the candidacy of the author. Mr. Risk is very naturally in bad with a lot of democrats in Indiana. In the fact of his record, fraught with long years of effort to reform the democratic organization, upon the coat-tail of which the bulk of the party appears to hang, evidences a great deal of nerve in entering the race for governor at all. Even though with the passing of time much of which he has stood has come to pass, proving that he was in most respects right, it is, indeed, expecting too much of poor, weak human nature, to anticipate surrender of those whom he has fought, and is fighting still, or that they will do anything to elevate him to the highest office in the state's gift.

Rugged is the road of the pioneer of new ways. Even the forests have seemed to despise the first settlers. The man who reaches out and pursues untrodden courses must, as a rule, be content for his reward with the consciousness of having done a good work—this, and whatever may be vouchsafed to him when he gets beyond this vale of tears. Still Mr. Risk is suggesting, at least, as we see it, exactly the course the democratic party needs to pursue, and some of the principles that it needs to adopt, if it ever hopes to become a vital force in Indiana again—regardless of whether its leader is Risk, Niblack, Iseburger, McCulloch or any one else.

Mr. Risk has advanced about the first real platform with an appeal to it that we have seen. He is not content with a line of wholesale railing against the Indiana tax law, just because it was passed by a republican legislature, and signed by a republican governor; perhaps, with a few amendments, throttling the iniquitous tax commission, and smoothing out some other kinks, the best tax law Indiana has ever had. We have no more use for the democratic denunciation of the new tax law, for the main reason of such denunciation, than we have for the majority in the United States senate and its opposition to the league of nations; opposition merely because the league was brought about under a democratic administration, and by Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Risk has at least suggested to State Chairman Salles, some other things for the democratic party to think about besides taxes.

And among those suggestions, the main one that appeals to us, and which we believe would make something of an appeal to the masses of people, is the one that we get into the handwoven of progressive states; reinstate the democratic party in Indiana as the progressive movement that Woodrow Wilson, in spite of the party, made of it in the nation. Mr. Risk puts it pretty well when he says that the main reasons for the lack of democratic spirit in Indiana is the lack of alcoholic spirit. We have too many democrats, and too many democratic leaders in Indiana, who have been trained, and have learned to think, only in channels that run amber with beer and bronze with booze.

Naturally the president who signed the District of Columbia dry bill, approved the federal prohibition amendment and passed it out to the states, attached his signature to the prohibition law—though vetoing the Volstead enforcement act—is in bad with democrats of such caliber, likewise Bryan with his grape-juice, Daniels with his dry navy, and Baker with his "five mile limit," but, just as Mr. Risk asserts, there are other issues, good for an intelligent democrat, besides championing the peevish of the sets. He wants a progressive, constructive program for the democratic party, rather than a reactionary, destructive program. He is not charging this latter against his opponents, but he

DOG HILL PARAGRAPHS

Ellick Helwanger, who used to could walk the foot-log across Gander creek with a jug of hickory in each hand, was almost pulled off into the creek yesterday by a bucket of buttermilk.

Slim Pickens has bought himself a new cap and he is now the same size from head to foot.

The Excelsior Flinding Band is making extensive preparation to furnish music for the ice cream suppers during the coming summer, but they will not be allowed the free rein they were last season, when they kept passing their saucers until there was not any ice cream left for any of the guests.

sulted in deserved convictions. Gov. Ralston was to Indiana what Woodrow Wilson has been to the nation, a new, progressive, constructive force, leading his party aright by serving the public first, for which he is naturally being somewhat damned-by those who regard public office as a private snap.

Mr. Risk, if he wishes to run for governor, might do worse than to take up the Ralston administration right where Mr. Ralston left it, and promise a resumption with improvements perhaps, due to changed conditions, and having a regard for new issues that have arisen—but he can hardly expect the democratic party to step in solidly behind him on the assumption that no good ever came out of it, nor ever can, except with him at the helm. Democracy with all its faults, and its limited years of active service, still has more to its credit in the way of constructive legislation and administration, than has the republican party with all its boasted superiority, and excess of years in the active service.

Indeed, we desire to call Mr. Risk's attention to the fact, which he admits as to the nation, that the republicans were no further than the democrats in Indiana, in proportion to numbers, whether in the enactment of prohibition or the advancement of woman suffrage, neither in 1917 or 1919. We are for reform in the democratic party, but in heaven's name do not commend the republican party to us as an example. We said, "We are for reform," not for "degeneracy."

CONCERNING McADOO

We do not know whether former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is a candidate for the presidency or not, but one thing is certain, when he opens his mouth he says more than any other candidate. We read the platitudes of all the candidates. All refer to the just distribution of wealth between capital and labor, but none tells how it is to be done. We read of other candidates shouting for "Americanism," but do not define it in a way which does not include all classes. Others engage in the use of idioms, but none get down to earth, none literally "light" anywhere. In this connection it can be said of McAdoo, whether right or wrong, he has the courage to take sides in a controversy. He is no trimmer in things. He daily forms estimates of men and things and is not afraid to express his convictions. If there was a middle of the way path in life he never would take it. It is just not the McAdoo way of traveling. He could not be true to himself if he did not occasionally "talk out in meeting." If he should be nominated the voters would be treated to a campaign of frankness, and this would be a rarity.—Exchange.

SPARE THE BIRD!

Birds are the greatest little food-savers in the world. They save billions of pounds of food for humans to eat. They do this by preying upon food-destroying insects, in fields and gardens.

The Kansas State Horticultural society has just published some interesting bird facts. In that one state alone 100,000,000 birds every year eat enough insects to fill 450 trains of fifty box cars each—24,000 cars of a minimum weight of 24,000 pounds to the car.

Kansas birds each year eat 574,000,000 pounds of insects. Each bird will average 100 insects a day.

A flock of birds in your garden will keep plants clean of insects.

Cats and dogs, and little boys, sometimes, shoot birds away. They shouldn't! And big men kill such insect-destroyers as well. Killing of the quail is costing the wheat growers of the United States $100,000,000 a year. Quails are foes of the chinch bug. Quails are foes of potato bugs.

Don't kill a bird, advises the Kansas society. "If the destruction of birds goes on, in a comparatively few years insect life will have multiplied to such an extent that trees will be deprived of their foliage, plants will cease to thrive, and agricultural crops can not be raised."

Bargain Table

5c WAX LUNCH PAPER, 3 rolls for... 10c
5c INDIANAPOLIS SCHOOL TABLET (limit 5), 5 for... 15c
12 1/2c RE-NU-WALL PAPER CLEANER, 9c, 25c

INDIANA DRY GOODS Co.

305-312 E. Washington St., Just East of Courthouse.
Store Closes Saturdays at 6 p. m.

Toilet Specials

5c SWEETHEART SOAP... 6c
50c F. E. I. TOOTH PASTE... 37c
50c CHILDROX TOOTH PASTE... 25c
15c JAP ROSE TAL-CUM... 10c
25c MAVIS COLD CREAM... 39c

Pre-Easter Display

Fashion's Latest Modes Are All Shown Here

The styles for Easter and spring are beautiful as well as practical and emphasize the supremacy of American fashion authorities. This display includes all the charm of the new season fabrics expressed in original creations from the looms of the world famous style creators.

Suits Dresses Coats

$28.50 to $19.50 to $19.50 to $85.00 $69.00 $55.00

ALL ALTERATIONS FREE—This Means Another Saving of $2 to $5.

Petticoats in Colors That Harmonize Contrastingly With Easter Costumes

Fluffy or plain affairs that will be welcomed by women changing to their sheer summery frocks. An exquisite showing of models at prices women will be pleased to pay.

$6.95 to $10.00

Flower Decked or Simple Line

The New Hats

One after another they spell novelty and the element of the unexpected. And each and every one of them is different—as to crown, or brim, as to trimming, tilt or shape.

$4.98, $7.98 and $10.00

Here Are—DRESSES for Confirmation and Easter

Here are dresses for confirmation as pretty as we can find, fashioned of beautiful organdy and trimmed with rows of the daintiest lace. These are fine examples of our standards of quality in that they will serve as festive frocks for a long time after the great day itself—

At $4.98 to $17.50

Corsets

The All-Important Factor in Women's Dress

The new style requires new form in corsets—corsets that may be trusted to produce the right and correct figures. This can be had only in a new corset, yet a good corset is far the cheapest in the end.

We carry the following famous brands—Warner's, Royal Worcester, R. & G. Thomson's and P. N. Prices—

$2 to $6

Nemo Corsets

$5.50 to $9

PIANO TUNER GETS JIGGS IN BAD.

BRINGING UP FATHER.

ABIE THE AGENT.

JERRY ON THE JOB.

ABIE THE AGENT.

JERRY ON THE JOB.

ABIE THE AGENT.

JERRY ON THE JOB.

ABIE THE AGENT.

JERRY ON THE JOB.

