

WOMEN TO PICK G. O. P. NOMINEE?

Claim Balance of Power in Chicago Convention.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Women delegates to the republican national convention here in June may hold the balance of power in selecting the presidential nominee, women leaders of the party predicted today.

One hundred women are expected to be elected to the convention, according to Mrs. G. W. Heinicke, Chicago, secretary of the women's section of the G. O. P. national committee, and these women, she said, will be prepared to fight all the way for equal rights with men and will demand "fifty-fifty" representation on the national committee. Delegates already elected to the convention total 237. Of these fourteen are women.

States which have elected women delegates are: Minnesota, one; Missouri, twelve; and Kentucky, one.

Women delegates from the following states are claimed as certain: New York, three; South Dakota, one; New Mexico, one; California, five; and Illinois, one.

"Altogether we expect to have at least 100 women delegates at the convention," said Mrs. Heinicke. "There were only nine at the last convention."

URGE UNITY ON ZONING OF CITY

All Citizens Asked to Boost Planning Committee.

Co-operation from all citizens of Indianapolis in a move to secure a city planning committee is asked by members of the park board.

James H. Lowry, superintendent of parks, has sent letters to all civic organizations asking that they aid in the campaign to protect residential districts from invasion on the part of industrial and commercial buildings.

The controversy which arose over the proposed building of the Craig-Hunt Motors company factory at Thirty-eighth and Meridian streets has led to much agitation for legislation protecting residence sections and it is desired to prevent similar cases in the future by establishing residence and industrial zones in the city.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS

—WHAT THEY MEAN—

Did you dream of angels?

To dream of angels, is, according to the mystics, a general "all round" omen for good. And when you dream of angels you are warned to try and remember correctly the rest of your dream, for it will turn out that subsequent events will correspond pretty closely to what you dream. Should you dream simply that you see an angel, or angels, the omen is one for perfect happiness, riches and—if you are married—many children who will be a credit to you. If you are unmarried and in love nothing could be more lucky than such a dream. It means that all your undertakings will prosper.

Some oracles say that a dream of angels means a change in your conditions in the near future and foretells good news and a possible legacy at no distant date. If in your dream the angel seems to keep away from you it is a sign that your private life needs reforming and is a warning to set about the reformation.

Almost all authorities agree that an angel seen in a dream foretells good news. The omen is an especially favorable one for young married women. The psychologists, exploring the unconscious psyche of man and seeking there for the interpretation of dreams, laugh, of course, at these interpretations of the mystics.

The scientists find sound psychological reasons for the appearance of angels in dreams and say such dreams may arise from several causes. Among others Freud mentions the idea of wish fulfillment, which according to his theory, attaches to all dreams. "Many people," he says, "dream of being an angel at night because they have not been called one during the day." And the "I want to be an angel" desire is with us all at times, however disguised. The dream angel may be the result of some primitive infantile wish which may not have been at all that the dreamer in infancy wanted to be an angel, but that he wanted some one else to be. Or the dream angel may merely be the instigator of the dream—a picture seen, something about angels read, or thought of, or heard during the preceding day. (Copyright, 1920.)

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL S. DUFFEE.

The Troublesome Hat

The boy who is not taught the simple rules governing our present-day etiquette of hat tipping is rather to be pitied. For this is one of the details of good manners that is apparently entirely arbitrary. Just plain inherent courtesy will not guide you in this regard. The man of natural good breeding will know, whether he is taught by his parents or not, that it is bad form to crowd roughly through a congested street car or subway train, to push past women, to let his umbrella drip against other people and to run his automobile regardless when there are deep mud puddles that can not help but splash upon pedestrians. But the etiquette of the hat is a little matter of social ceremony that is not so easy to master. That is why every mother and father ought to take pains to instruct their son concerning it. It is really unkind to him to let him grow up without acquiring this ceremony as a sort of second nature.

In this country the rule is that a woman recognizes a man first. That is, it is a woman's privilege to speak or not to speak. However, among friends of whom you are in no doubt as to their recognizing you the man raises his hat practically simultaneously with the woman's bow of recognition. The small boy should therefore be taught to be ready to doff his cap or hat when he sees any of his parents' friends.

SOME SIMPLE RULES TO FOLLOW.

A man does not lift his hat to another man under ordinary circumstances. To be sure, it is customary to raise your hat when passing a priest and it is courteous to do this if you are acquainted with the priest even though you are not of his religious persuasion. Especially is this respect due him if he is a man of venerable years.

When a man is walking with a woman he raises his hat when he passes another woman known to both or only to himself. He also raises his hat if his companion bows to a woman passing even though he himself does not know her, and he likewise raises his hat if he passes a man alone whom either he knows or to whom his companion bows. A man alone who passes a friend with a woman whom he does not know likewise lifts his hat. One thing the boy should be taught and that is that it is just as important to raise his hat to his mother or sisters or other members of his family as to any one else.

Now suppose a man meets a woman acquaintance who stops him to speak. Of course he lifts his hat in greeting her. Should he remain with his hat in his hand during the entire interview? According to the old-fashioned rule this was entirely up to the woman in question. She was expected to ask him to put his hat back on again. "Pray do not remain uncovered" was the phrase advised by all old-fashioned books of decorum. But the average young man of today would hardly know what was meant by such an expression. Nowadays the courteous man doffs his hat on meeting and again on leaving a woman outdoors.

Some men never seem to acquire the knack of removing their hats promptly when they go indoors. It seems burdensome to them to carry a hat and so when they see no women about they leave their hat on until they find a convenient place to put it. But a man should learn the rule of removing the hat at once when he enters any sort of residence, a church, public library or museum or inside the entrance of an office. He should not, however, remove the hat when he enters the public entrance of a hotel or an office building.
