

New York Publisher Visits Old Home Here

On a literary tour of the country and here for a few days with old acquaintances, Robert C. Holaday, editor of the Bookman, New York, finds the Hoosier capital greatly changed since his previous visit four years ago.

This is his home city and he was a student at Manual Training High school. "I am making a study of the literary tastes and trends of the people of various cities," said he.

"The policy of the Bookman, which is devoted to books, writing and the news of authors, is to get into more intimate touch."

Eggs Come Down With Easter Near

Biddy's getting ready for Easter. As a result, folk, eggs will be from 1 to 2 cents cheaper.

Herbert Glossbrenner of the Glossbrenner-Dodge Poultry Company is sponsor for that statement.

He claims the warm weather has brought the chickens out for their "spring training" and that already they have started to lay in close to season form.

Another contributing factor in the reduction in the cost is that egg raisers are more willing to come to the city to market "hen fruit" with agreeable weather.

Starr PHONOGRAPH

The Starr reproducer searches out the minutest tone shade in the record, and carries it in all its original sweetness and purity, through the Starr singing throat of silver grain spruce.

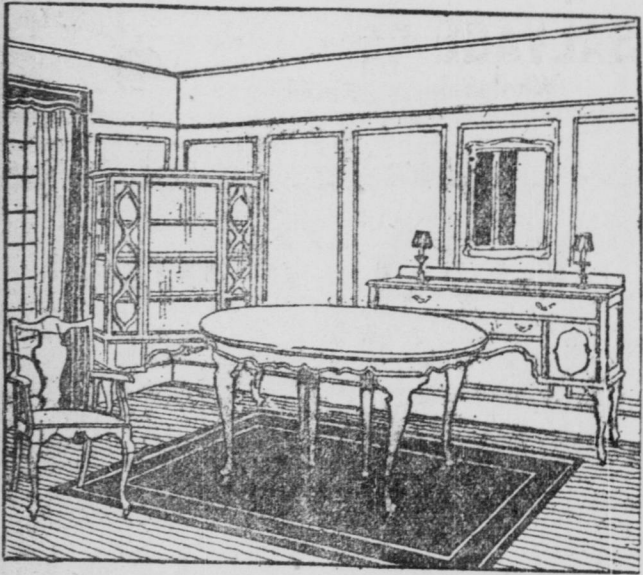

Tone waves are delicate and easily distorted. That's why Starr singing throat is made of silver grain spruce, the wood used in rare, old violins such as Stradivarius and Cremona, which are famous for their tone.

But why argue. Try the same good record on other phonographs and then on the Starr—the first few pure notes from the Starr will convince you. Starr's utmost musical delight, however, is expressed on Gennett Records. Hearing is believing.
