

SENATE PASSES BUCK TO HOUSE ON SOLDIER AID

Readers Predict Favorable Action if Lower Body Enacts Measure.

CAN'T AGREE ON PLAN

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Passage of soldier aid legislation in the senate, providing favorable action is taken on the question in the house, was predicted today by senate leaders.

"No group of men seems to be unanimous in their opinion as to what should be done," Senator Townsend, republican, Michigan, said.

"It is the general opinion among members of the senate, however, that soldier aid legislation will be approved here if passed in the house."

SENATE NEXT WEEK.

"The house ways and means committee having the legislation in charge will meet next week to consider ways of raising the money."

"Members of the committee are divided on the means by which the money can be raised."

"Some organizations are asking a cash payment, according to the time spent in the army, navy and marine corps."

"Others are opposed to such action. COMES BACK TO OLD QUESTION OF METHOD."

"The house is giving careful thought to the question and the attitude of the senate will be based in a large measure on the result."

OPEN COUNTRY—UNBROKEN HORSES—UNBROKEN MEN

Dulberger Takes Too Much Liberty

It doesn't always pay to advertise.

Elmer W. Dulberger, attorney who has announced himself as a candidate for state representative subject to the republican primary, has found this out.

He was passing out his cards on which appears the statement: "I stand for personal liberty and favor a wet platform."

"I'm the wet candidate," Dulberger announced.

"If it's the case, you'd better keep your card," Davis said.

"I'm a federal prohibition officer and I believe in law enforcement and don't want to see liquor back in this country."

"You won't get my vote."

ure on the house conclusions, I feel," Senator Townsend said.

"I believe a great majority of the members of congress feel there should be something done for the former service men."

"The nature of this aid is the question that may cause delay."

Restaurant Manners

There are certain little faults in table manners that crop out in restaurants that do not make themselves apparent in the private dining room.

For instance there is that little habit some squeamish folk have of wiping off the table and spoons and knives with the hankie before beginning to eat.

I have even seen them go so far as to wipe off the edge of the tumbler and the glass before drinking.

If you just stop to think you will realize that any possible danger that might come from this could be done away with by this dry wiping.

Nothing short of scalding would do any good.

As a matter of fact, dishes are usually scalded more carefully in the restaurants than in the average home.

There are persons who, if they eat among strangers at a restaurant, seem to think it doesn't much matter what their manners are so long as they are comfortable.

For instance, they sit so as to make the shortest possible distance from plate to their own mouth, and then they play their fork like a shovel.

They prop their paper up before them and eat while they read, scarcely looking at their plate in their eagerness to read the news.

Remember that if you let down in your table manners when you are eating in a restaurant it will be that much harder for you to get back into good manners at your own home or another's.

WHAT READERS ASK.

"The other day I took a fellow I know to call on a girl I liked. The fellow is all right and I knew him in camp. Later the girl told me she thought it was rude of me to bring him without asking her permission. I told her she was putting on airs. What I want to know is whether it was all right. I know what I think about it and will think, but I would like to tell her that she is dead wrong and that any fellow is privileged to bring his friends to call if he wants to and that she ought to have been glad to have me."

Strictly speaking, you should have asked her permission, for it is regarded as an honor for a man to call on a young woman and you were rather overstepping your privileges. However, if the girl has no fault to find with the young man in question I think she is very foolish to argue with you about it. It was not a very vital matter in any event.—Copyright, 1920.

Public Utilities Ask Aid as State Grows

"Growing pains" trouble the Indiana business world," said Charles C. Perry, president of the Indianapolis Light and Heat company, today.

But the "growing pains" hurt public utilities worse than manufacturers, according to Mr. Perry.

While factories can increase prices on the basis of supply and demand, utility companies are facing a greater demand than ever for service and can not charge the prices they could command, he said.

Relief must be afforded utility companies, if they are to keep pace with the development of Indianapolis and other cities, Mr. Perry said.

To Remove Shine

When a suit becomes shiny from wear, one way to freshen it is to bring a thin piece of muslin out in clear witch hazel and lay this on the right side of the material. Steamed with a flat iron, the material then should be turned on the wrong side and the muslin pressed dry.

D.S.C. AWARDED TO ROOSEVELT

For 'Extraordinary Heroism Near Cantigny.'

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt has been awarded the distinguished service cross for extraordinary heroism in battle on the western front in 1918, the war department announced this afternoon.

The citation says that while in action near Cantigny, May 28, 1918, Col. Roosevelt, after the completion of a raid, exposed himself to an intense machine gun and rifle fire and the explosion of hand grenades in going forward and assisting in the rescue of wounded members of the party.

He also is cited for bravery at Soissons on July 19, 1918, when he personally led the companies of the battalion of which he was major in command, and although wounded in the knee, refused to be evacuated until carried from the field.

A distinguished service citation has been awarded to Capt. John A. Minnis, marine corps, for extraordinary heroism in action near Mezy, France, on July 9, 1918.

His home is at 209 Church street, Montgomery, Ala.

Francis B. Thrasher, deceased, headquarters company, Sixth marine, also was granted a distinguished service citation for extraordinary heroism in action near Viersey, France, on July 9, 1918.

His mother, Mrs. E. B. Thrasher, lives in Chicago.

Crusade on Brokers May Net Twenty-Five

BOSTON, March 27.—At least twenty-five arrests of Boston curb brokers are expected to be made before Attorney General Allen ends his crusade against the curb brokers, who are violating the statutes by advertising stocks for sale without filing a statement of conditions with the corporations commission.

Already nine brokers have been taken into custody.

Four were arraigned in municipal court today—John J. Ford, George L. Wires, Joseph Francis and Edward F. Wallace—all being charged with advertising silver issues illegally.

Tomorrow afternoon a musical program will be given by the Orlopp Trio.

Hoosier's Story Nips Alleged Fake Charity

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES.

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 27.—Mrs. Jennie Reed Barnes, known as a philanthropist here, has caused the roundup of an alleged spurious charity organization in Memphis.

She was invited to the home of a sect styling itself the "Pentecostal Tongues."

According to information this organization was providing live residence in their home, persons of philanthropic tendencies who would deed their property to the cause.

It is claimed the heads of the sect attempted to force Mrs. Barnes to sell her belongings to them.

Mrs. Barnes purchased the Coon hotel here and turned it over to the needy.

A jazz orchestra will play.

Confessions Of a Bride

Bob was even happier than I to settle down in our own little home once more. He liked it far better, I thought, than he did the night we came home first, the night he insisted on taking off my wedding veil with his own clumsy fingers.

"Your third honeymoon, my love—my love" was his brief comment, as he unfasted my big fur coat.

"It's a happy chance for us to find that our married life improves with time, isn't it, Bob?"

"Why, some of the young people who married when we did are already getting divorces!"

"Who, for instance?"

"Lucy Searle is suing Grant!"

Bob didn't look at me, although he has a habit of using his eyes a great deal when he talks.

Bob and Grant had been "buddies" over there and Grant was no saint, I knew, but that was not a reason why Bob should avoid my eyes when we discussed his friend.

I had not started the story with the least idea that I was going to be suspicious of my husband.

I tried to thrust the idea out of my mind, but I couldn't help noticing that Bob's voice was a little brittle when he said:

"Grant and Lucy had a real war romance."

"It lasted only for the duration of the war."

"Lucy isn't acting a bit too hasty, is she?"

"I don't see it so, dear."

"She told me she found the pictures of four queens in Grant's baggage."

"Then letters from the ladies began to arrive."

"She talked things over frankly with Grant."

"He insisted that he still loved her."

"He explained that the girls always began it and he didn't really know how he had managed to get in so deep."

"That made Lucy simply furious."

"She asked me if the disloyal husband always claimed he was tempted."

"I couldn't tell her, Bob," I said, putting my arm around my husband's neck. This little action cheered him remarkably.

Unfortunately every change in his expression began to look suspicious to me. "Well, she offered to divorce Grant on condition that he would marry one of the girls."

"What do you think he said?"

Bob shook his head.

"He said he would be perfectly honest—that he could be happy with any one of them and could be just as happy without the whole bunch."

"What did he mean, Bob?"

"What he said, probably."

"What do you suppose Lucy did next, Bob?"

"What?"

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS —WHAT THEY MEAN—

Did you dream of bathing?

To do so is a sign that you will do some one a favor who will be very grateful.

If the water of your dream bath is of long life and much happiness, provided the water is clear.

Should it be muddy it is a sign of the death of an acquaintance.

Should the bath be too hot you may expect a tiff with your wife (or husband) if you are married.

If the water is too cold those contemplating marriage should "look before they leap."

A very cold bath is also considered to be a warning to look closely after your business or you will meet with losses.

To dream of bathing in running water is not considered favorable, but a bath in a canal means assured financial success and a salt water bath signifies that you will attain to high honors.

If you dream that you undress to take a bath and then do not take it the omen is that you will meet with troubles, but that they will soon pass away.

It is considered to be a sign that you will achieve success and distinction if you dream that you see others taking a bath, provided the water of the bath is clear.

Thus say the mystics.
