DOG HILL PARAGRAFSCity Schools Pass MacMonnies Quota

Indianapolis school children have contributed more than their quota toward the MacMonnies statue for America's gift to France, the total of collections having reached $1,235.95, according to William Taylor, in charge of the fund for Indiana.

The largest fund donated according to enrollment was turned in yesterday from the William Bell school No. 69, which, with only 920 students, contributed $106.54, an average of more than 11 cents per student.

Eighteen Indianapolis schools are yet to be reported, among them being Manual Training High school. The statue is to be erected on the Marne battlefield.

Cricket Hicks observes in a beauty column where a high collar will retard the progress of an Adam's apple.

Washington Hocks is working on a patent that, if perfected, will be a great boon to parents. It is some simple device that can be operated with a lever and that will keep all the children covered up at nights during cold weather.

Early every morning a flock of crows may be seen wending their way eastward over this vicinity, at exactly the same hour. In the evening, just about sundown, they may be seen coming back. Sid Hocks has been watching them almost clocklike regularity each day for several months, and thinks they ought not to take life so seriously.
