

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

A New Serial of Young Married Life

By ANN LISLE.

CHAPTER XXIII.

After I applauded my own decision, when Capt. Winston talked about going "back to the front" after three months' recruiting work over here and fairly included Jim in his plans, I could see how joyously, how hopefully my husband responded. Only one incident marred the delightful dinner. Capt. Winston asked about "Mrs.—er—er Bryce—" and then looked at me in evident embarrassment. But I managed to seem unconscious of that. Home at 11—happy, pleased with each other and the world. The incident of the keys forgotten. For a while I had forgotten the letter and the pain just came Jim. But now the time came when I must give that letter to him. I tried to find words to help

Jim—lad, I've a letter for you— from the war department. Whatever it is, dear, remember that I love you. I'm going to stand by Jim, and be a wife—the kind of a wife a soldier needs."

Jim took the envelope with fingers that trembled. He tore open the envelope, and brought out a single typed sheet and

4 Men, 1 Woman Held on Liquor Charges

Four men and one woman are under arrest on billed liquor charges today. John Irish, Lewis Elise, his wife, Mary Elise, were arrested at 2631 West Walnut street by Sergeants Russell and Sheehan.

A still and five gallons of whisky were found, the officers said.

When the home of Steve Skrlane, 31, a Serbian, living at 722 North Holmes avenue, was raided, twenty-five gallons of raitin whisky were found, the police said.

Police also say they found a quantity of liquor in the home of Arthur O'Donnell, 129 West Regent street.

'Pious Thief' Steals Sunday School Fund

Help—a pious burglar! He piles his trade in the Calvary Baptist church, Roosevelt avenue and Stewart street.

Rev. Alonzo Slaughter, pastor, overlooked his acts on several occasions. Forgiveness was not forthcoming, though, when the Sunday school bank containing a small amount of collections disappeared.

Rev. Slaughter reported that on a previous visit the thief carried off a quantity of Sunday school buttons.

Corn Oil Said to Be Beneficial to Body

The average family has not yet learned the health-giving properties of crisp, green salads with their mineral salts and the "fat soluble B" vitamins, which Prof. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university showed in his experiments to be so necessary to proper functioning of the human body, according to Dr. Edwin F. Bowers, noted health expert.

Corn oil, he says, had been proved by scientific experimentation and by experience of dietetic and culinary experts to equal the finest olive oil in both palatability and food value.

Two Missing Girls Found in Kentucky

Mary J. Bailey, 16, 1141 North Delaware street, and Cecelia May Barnes, 15, 1040 South Mount streets, who disappeared in this city March 25, were found several days ago working in a candy store at Louisville, Ky. They were located through a letter written to a girl friend.

"I'm not sure that they'll take me. I think I'm fit—" began Jim.

I interrupted—I wanted to scream with protest—but Jim looked so calm and steady that I felt I must at least pretend to be.

"Why, they won't take you, dear; they couldn't. Any one can see that you aren't fit to serve. My Jimmie has done enough."

I meant to comfort him. Then Jim came a step nearer. There were red stains high on his cheekbones. His eyes flashed—but I was so caught in the turmoil of my own pain that I didn't understand.

"You think I'm a cripple, Anne? Suppose I am—even men on crutches have served at their country's need!"

Even then I couldn't believe what I heard. I hung my arms around Jim as if I could hold him against the world. I hadn't realized that I couldn't hold him—against his own desire.

"They can't take you—it would be too cruel! You'll be able to get out of it—won't you?"

"Anne!" he cried; and again, "Anne! You said you would help me like a soldier's wife."

Then I understood. My arms fell helplessly at my side. They were powerless to hold Jim—but they must be strong enough to support me, as I swayed back against the bureau and felt a sharp corner pressing against me.

I cried aloud in frightened protest: "Then you want to go? You want to leave me? Perhaps—perhaps they aren't forcing you at all! Perhaps you—asked them to take you!"—Copyright, 1920.
