—“THIS IS THE YEAR”—

A HEADLINE says “Mayor Calls on City to Observe American Day.”
We hope he will call again to enjoy the speedway races.

TIME WAS when Harry Hendrickson could see no reason why his political opponents should not be represented on the election board.

IF WHITESIDE can come home on a vacation when he wants it, what assurances have we that Ray will not also pay us a visit some day?

DEMOCRATS of Marion county ought to realize that it is up to them to nominate a ticket as widely different from the choice of the Goodrich-Jewett machine as it is possible to make it.

THE PEOPLE of Indiana want good government. It is up to the democratic party to nominate men who are capable of giving good government. No other kind of candidates deserve election.

SOLEMN ASSURANCE has been given that there was no connection between the turning of the body of Louis Williams over to the medical school and the parole of Arthur Whiteside.

WHY SHOULDN'T Goodrich continue Paul P. Haynes on the public service commission? He has never failed to agree to raising the rates of Goodrich-owned utilities and he never sought to force an evaluation of any of them.

Why Be a Republican?

There is just one reason why a republican should go to the polls in the primary next Tuesday.

That reason is the necessity of registering a protest against the high-handed manner in which the Goodrich-Jewett machine is attempting to perpetuate its ignoble hold on the republican party of Marion county.

The primary vote on the preference for president has been robbed of all its significance by the manipulation of the party bosses. It makes no difference who gets the plurality, the state's choice will be registered in accordance with the desires of those who control the convention and it will not, under any circumstances, be registered for Gen. Wood, the military menace of the country.

The party's choice for governor will not be expressed at the polls, but at the convention, thanks to the elimination by the republican bosses of the features of the primary law that made a primary choice possible.

There remains then, only the choice as to the county candidates.

A vote for Merrill Moore for congress is a vote cast to keep a harmless old man in office until Mayor Jewett can arrange to supplant him.

A vote for Luke Duffey is a vote to send to congress a man of one idea, good roads, and the present unsatisfactory highway commission in Indiana is an evidence of how well Duffey knows his one subject.

A vote for William E. Relley for prosecutor is a vote for a clean young man who is both capable and energetic and who deserves the support of those members of his party who honestly believe in having a prosecutor of irreproachable character.

William P. Evans, who opposed Relley, is personally clean and most likable. His candidacy, however, is tainted by his association as a deputy with Claris Adams, the spineless prosecutor who has shown so little interest in anything that did not add to the enormous total of the fees he has collected while in office. The voter has no assurance that, if elected, Evans would not repay Adams by retaining him in the prosecutor's office as his fee-collecting deputy.

Frank C. Riley is merely the tool of those politicians who hoped that similarity in names would attract to him some of William E. Relley's supporters and thereby help Evans. He is wholly unfit for the position he seeks.

The republican race for sheriff is a delusion and a snare. Starting as an “anti-machine” candidate, George Snider has agreed to support the machine in return for assistance from it and has “ditched” his earlier supporters. A man who does not keep faith politically can not be depended upon to keep faith with the public. Clarence J. Ullery and Morris D. Moss are opposing Snider and either is more acceptable as a candidate.

There should be no difficulty in making a choice between Henry M. Cochrane and Ralph A. Lemcke, the two candidates for treasurer. Lemcke is the present incumbent whose first day in office was marked by the collection of fees to which the state board of accounts says he is not entitled. He is the same Lemcke who promised before election to turn interest in Barrett law money over to the taxpayers and has not done so. Cochrane is a former employee of the office and knows how it should be run. He is not expected, if elected, to be so bound to the negro politicians of Indianapolis as to be willing to employ a number as deputies in the treasurer's office.

There is absolutely no reason why Paul F. Robinson, present coroner, should be retained. By his inefficiency in making coroner's investigations and his attempts to “cover up” official investigations he has been of immense assistance to the ring that runs Marion county. He openly opposes publicity in regard to his conduct of office and has on several occasions instructed his office force to prevent the press from obtaining reports of evidence that he does not want made public.

Richard A. Poole has a long record for fearless investigation of criminal offenses. He has stood steadfast against efforts to make murders appear as suicides, and his work as coroner was always a great assistance in the enforcement of law in Marion county.

It is hardly to be conceived that the republicans of this county are willing to return to the legislature the men who helped Gov. Goodrich enact the present tax law. Yet these men are seeking re-election and will be renominated unless the republican party determines to repudiate their acts and selects candidates from a long list of men who did not have a part in the misfit legislature of the last session.

There isn't much use of the republican who has the interests of the home at heart calling for a republican ballot at the primaries. His only real excuse for voting will be the casting of a ballot against the republican ring that has misgoverned the state, county and city. Perhaps the vote will be counted. There is reason to believe that the old crowd will do all it can to prevent the counting of sufficient votes to break it up.

Hendrickson Responsible

Harry Hendrickson, republican county chairman, has ignored the pleas of the republicans who oppose the Goodrich-Jewett ring in Marion county for representation on the primary election boards and recommended only organization members for these positions.

With a few exceptions little fault can be found with the men named to act on the boards, but the refusal to accede to a proper request, properly made, for representation when such representation could not possibly have harmed any candidate is beyond understanding.

It will be viewed as a suspicious decision. Those republicans who have long been acquainted with machine methods will have a basis for their suspicion that fair play is not to predominate in the primaries.

Those republicans who bolted their ticket in 1912 and formed the progressive party because of such tactics will have hard work reconciling the ideals they had then with the relinquishment of fair play ideals which they are now called upon to make.

Harry Hendrickson was one of the republicans who fought such machine domination in 1912. Today he is one of the machine that seeks to perpetuate its existence and its unfair methods in Marion county.

Carlin Shank, republican county commissioner, is another who hopes to continue his name on the county pay roll by the maintenance of the machine. When he becomes the candidate for recorder the record of his attitude will be remembered.

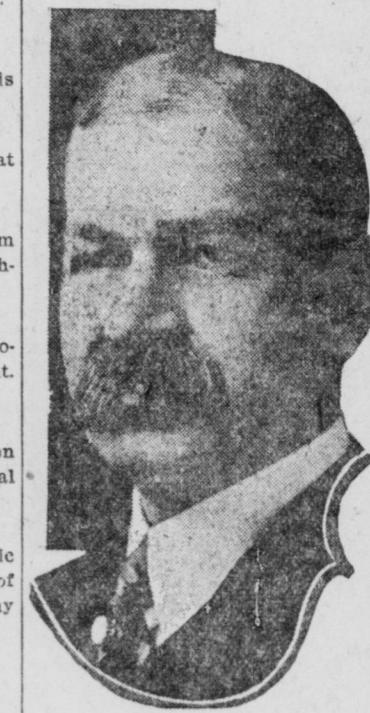

As we have said before, we can see no reason why the “antis” should not be represented on the election boards unless it is proposed so to conduct the primaries that the “antis” are not to have a fair deal in the counting of the ballots.

At any rate Hendrickson has taken the full responsibility for the election boards.

Their conduct will show why.

TWO DEMOCRATS
MAKE CONTEST
FOR TREASURERGeorge M. Spiegel Has Support of Substantial Business
Element of Party.

WOOLLING IS CRITICIZED

GEORGE M. SPIEGEL.

The most interesting primary fight under way in the democratic ranks is that between George M. Spiegel and Frank F. Woolling for the nomination for treasurer.

When the democrats were seeking candidates for county offices, before it became apparent that the democratic ticket would be elected, both Mr. Spiegel and Mr. Woolling were asked to make the race and both consented to make it in the belief that there would be no contest for the nomination.

Before the time for filing expired Mr. Woolling determined to become a candidate on his own responsibility, regardless of whether or not there were other candidates.

He had his own declaration and went to win the nomination on his responsibility.

Meanwhile, Mr. Spiegel's announcement had been made public, and his friends insisted that he remain in the race.

The result is that the two men are contesting for the place on different platforms and from entirely different motives.

BUSINESS HERE.

Mr. Spiegel, who has lived in Indianapolis since 1889 and has been in the insurance business here seventeen years, has pledged an administration of the treasurer's office that will be a direct reversal of the methods used here under republican rule.

He is a business man with ability to give such an administration, is a democrat whose loyalty has never been questioned, and the kind of a man who will lend strength and stability to the democratic ticket.

He has two sons active in democratic politics, one of whom has been president of the Indiana Democratic club, while the other also has served his party in an organization capacity.

Mr. Spiegel is a member of the First Lutheran church, of Oriental Lodge, F. and A. M., and Oriental chapter, R. A. M.; was elected commander of Knights of Pythias in 1908, and belongs to the Shrine, and now is deputy master of the Lodge of Perfection, Scottish Rite.

Mr. Spiegel has the earnest support of the substantial business element of the party and his nomination for treasurer can only be prevented by the success of appeals to facts of the party having a greater regard for personal interests than for the party itself.

WOOLLING'S ACTION

Frank F. Woolling is an Indianapolis native, a son of Joseph H. Woolling, who long was a member of the Marion county council.

He has been active in the building of apartment houses in this city and in other parts of the country.

He is a member of the First Baptist church, Oriental Lodge No. 509, Scottish Rite and Murat Temple, Delta Tau Delta fraternity and the Indianapolis Canoe club.

He has been active in democratic organization work, and is president of the Democratic club, whose by-laws provide that no officer shall be a candidate for office.

Mr. Woolling pledges himself if elected treasurer to “take no funds except those to which the treasurer is legally entitled,” to spend his time systematizing the treasurer's work so that taxpayers will know in advance what their taxes are and will not have to wait

HUNGRY THIEVES
DINE ON THE JOB

Fill Up and Load Up in Round-up of Five Places.

Burglars broke into Max Sattiger's grocery, 2029 Madison avenue, early today, spread a big feast and ate, then carried away $1,000 and twenty-five pounds of cheese.

The thieves broke into a blacksmith shop in the neighborhood before going to the grocery, where they cut a panel from the rear door.

They ransacked a barber shop, a dry goods saloon and a hardware store connected with the grocery.

Then they took milk, cakes, meat, bread and other food for their lunch.

Motor Policemen Flinney and Lansing investigated.

PLEADS MOTOR
FUEL ECONOMY

Speaker at Engineers' Banquet.

Points to Growing Crisis.

Automotive production is following a straight line upward, while fuel production is heading away in a line that will very shortly take a downward bent, so it is necessary to meet the fuel problem as one of vital concern to them.

C. F. (“Boss”) Kettering, president of the Dayton Engineering Laboratories, told members of the Society of Automotive Engineers at a banquet in the Riley room of the Claypool hotel last night.

“There are two ways out of this difficulty,” said Mr. Kettering.

“One is to expand to increase the production and the other is to make our motors do what the sales department says they will do.”

Great economy may be accomplished, the speaker said, by a more minute perfection of motor parts, to do away with friction and to prevent waste of fuel in burning.

“I began to puzzle over this fuel problem five years ago, but it is only in the last two years that gasoline producers and automobile makers have been looking upon it with concern.

“Before that time the automobile was sold as fast as he could make it, and the oil man said the same thing, so they could see nothing to worry about.

Now, with many refineries idle and the demand for gasoline far greater than the production, both oil men and motor makers are balking at the seriousness of the situation.”

PRO RATA SUPPLY.

Mr. Kettering said that the supply of gasoline today is about one and three-quarters per mile, per automobile, and hundreds of factories are turning out new automobiles to bring that average still lower while the gasoline supply is not on the increase.

scientific goal to engage the attention of engineers, Mr. Kettering predicted that in a short time methods will be discovered for changing material from one form to another as it has been the proved practice in the past.

Mr. Kettering expressed the opinion that means to utilize the enormous power embodied in atoms will soon be discovered.

That, he said, will solve fuel problems finally.
