

GOAL SITUATION TO BE GONE OVER

Nominees to Meet Governor to Fix Definite Policy.

A definite policy regarding the supplying of coal for the various penal and correctional institutions of the state will be fixed at a conference to be held between Gov. James P. Goodrich, Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch, and Warren T. McCray, gubernatorial nominees of the democratic and republican parties, respectively, and Major C. Shelton, secretary of the joint purchasing committee of the state, if the plans of Mr. Shelton are carried to completion.

The extreme difficulty met by the purchasing committee of the state to supply coal for the state's institutions has made some action necessary, but only through a definite fixed policy will it be possible for the state to overcome this difficulty, according to Mr. Shelton.

The proposed plan of the purchasing committee to obtain about 200 coal cars, which would be used exclusively in transporting coal from the mines to the state institutions, will be brought before the conference, as well as the idea of purchasing a mine to be used exclusively in mining coal for the state.

The plan for the purchase of the coal cars was announced Monday by Mr. Shelton, but at the conference between members of the public service commission, the superintendents of the coal-carrying railroads of Indiana, and several mine officials, it was decided this plan would be used unless the state purchased and operated its own mine.

The attendance of Dr. McCulloch and Mr. McCray at the conference is believed by Mr. Shelton to be imperative, as one of these men will be elected next November to the position of chief executive of the state, and it is desired that a fixed policy be adopted now, with the consent of the incoming governor, which would be following after the change in administration.

The difficulties of the purchasing committee will be laid before the conference, and it is thought highly probable that the purchase of the cars and a mine by the state will be sanctioned.

Mr. Shelton is now engaged in gathering all possible data pertaining to the coal situation, and the future course of the committee's actions would be guided by the results of the proposed conference.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS

—And What They Mean—

Did you dream of dice?

The general significance of a dream of playing at dice is one of doubts and risks, but if you should dream that you win it is a sign of an inheritance soon to fall to you from an unexpected source.

The higher the points thrown in your dream game the larger will be the legacy.

Most mystics are of the opinion that one who dreams of dice will be deceived by supposed friends and will have to guard himself carefully if he would avoid business losses.

One special significance of such a dream is to beware of men who will try to do you an injury by underhanded means.

A young and unmarried woman who dreams of dice is warned to look carefully into the conduct of her lover—if she has one—for he is apt to turn out to be a gay and thoughtless fellow, who will stand considerable reforming before being married.

Another thing about dice:

If you dream of these the probabilities that your own conduct needs mend—Copyright, 1920.

PUSS IN BOOTS JR.

By DAVID CORY.

CHAPTER XLVI.

You remember in the last story that Puss Junior drew his sword to frighten the Dog that worried the Cat, who had run up to the inn kept by the kind old Dame Trot. Well, as soon as that dog saw how fierce 'our little Puss' looked, he turned right around and ran away. "I'm glad you made him go," said a voice close by, and Puss turned and saw Goosy, Goosey Gander.

Now it had been a long, long time since Puss had seen his old friend, and had been flying through the air almost as swiftly as a swallow, and by and by they crossed a meadow where a big round dish was chasing a silver spoon.

"Hey, diddle, diddle,

The Cat and the fiddle,

The Cow jumped over the Moon,

The little dog laughed to see such sport.

While the dish ran away with the spoon."

And then the cat began to play a lively tune on her fiddle and the little dog to laugh, so Puss asked Goosy Gander to stop for awhile and see the show.

And wasn't it lucky he did, for just at that moment a beautiful spotted cow came across the meadow and the big white moon came down from the sky and stood still right overhead, not so very high up, you know, about as high as a church steeple.

Good morning, exclaimed the cow, as she passed Puss Junior. "Would you like to see me jump over the moon?"

And then she let the cat eat to play faster, while she pranced around keeping time to the music. Suddenly, she exclaimed, "Faster! Faster! I'm going to get a flying start!" and in another minute she rose gracefully from the ground.

"Please be careful," warned the Man in the Moon. "Don't run your horns into the green cheese."

"Don't worry," she moaned, as she went over the moon in a graceful curve. And then she landed safely in a clover patch at the other end of the meadow.

"Great! You did it splendidly!" cried Puss.

"Oh, that's nothing," she replied, and without another word she began eating the clover tops just like an ordinary cow. So Puss climbed up on Goosy Gander's back and set off once more upon his journey of adventure.—Copyright 1920.
