

DR. BUTLER OUT OF G. O. P. RACE, BARNES STATES

Inform New York Delegates They Need No Longer Cast for Him.

FREES ABOUT 20 VOTES

CHICAGO, June 12.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has withdrawn from the race for the republican presidential nomination, according to an announcement made today by William H. Barnes of the New York delegation.

Dr. Butler has informed the New York delegation that he is no longer a candidate and that the delegation from New York is no longer under obligations to vote for him, Barnes stated.

The withdrawal of Butler from the race will release about twenty votes on the fourth ballot last night, all from New York state.

It is reported that the bulk of the Butler votes will go to Lowden on the early ballots today.

ELWELL MURDER Baffles Police

Suicide of Sportsman Scouted When Pistol Is Missing.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Two baffling crimes that contain all the elements of a "Sherlock Holmes" mystery confronted the New York police today.

There were: The murder of Joseph B. Elwell, international authority on bridge whist and owner of a great racing stable, who was shot to death in his luxurious home in West Seventeenth street, yesterday; and the robbery of $40,000 worth of jewelry from the summer home of Enrico Caruso at East Hampton, L. I.

Three women, who were said to possess keys to the Elwell home, are being sought by the police.

It was first thought that the whist expert might have committed suicide, but the absence of the automatic pistol with which the shooting had been done convinced the officials to the murder theory.

Elwell was separated from his wife four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lewicki, who attended a theater with Elwell, said he was cheerful when they left him Friday.

Elwell on reaching his apartment unplaced, neatly folded his evening clothes and placed them on a bed with a roll of about $400 in bills and jewelry worth $7,000.

These were untouched when the police entered the place, showing that robbery was not the motive.

Beside Elwell were found several letters which the postman shoved under his door at 7:30 a. m.

He was reading one of the letters when shot.

Two painters working near the place said they heard a sound like a shot about 8 a. m.

There was no sign of a struggle.

A reward of $40,000 may be offered today in the Caruso case.

CAR SHORTAGE HITS BUILDING

'Situation Desperate'—Truck Shipments Being Made.

The tying up of several large building operations in Indianapolis because of the inability of building contractors to obtain cement through car shortage has resulted in the shipment of cement by truck from Lima to Indianapolis and other points.

"The situation has been desperate," said C. N. Elliott, local representative of the Lima plant.

"In the last few weeks we have been compelled to turn down orders for thousands of barrels from failure to get the necessary cars, and we have been unable to take care of our open contracts."

"There is plenty of cement to be had if we could secure the cars."

"There must be 300,000 or 400,000 barrels in the bins at Lima, and probably 800,000 at the Burlington plant."

"We have been delivering cement by truck to some points near Lima for re-shipment by rail."

"C. W. Sedwick has arranged for shipment by truck from Lima of several hundred barrels, to be used in the erection of the plant for the United Butchers' association, and E. R. Ray is arranging for a truck shipment from Lima to the stockyards, arrangements having been made through Tom Snyder of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce."

Mr. Snyder said that the highway transport division was also arranging for a shipment by truck to go from Lima to the stockyards, and that a resumption of building operations there, since Sheridan is entirely out of cement. He said shipments would also be made by truck next week from Lima to Ogdenville, Cambridge City, New Castle and other points.

"We are now in position to offer the building contractors of Indiana almost unlimited service in motor truck transfer," said Mr. Snyder. "Since the recent congestion in freight traffic the chamber has been able to render great assistance in moving goods in and out of Indianapolis by truck, averaging hundreds of tons weekly."

Shelby County Will Receive No More Fish

Unless Shelby county officials enforce the fish protection laws of Indiana, their streams will not be restocked from the state hatcheries.

This was the ruling of the Indiana conservation commission, which met today.

"Inasmuch as sentiment in Shelby county is against the enforcement of the state fish laws, no fish will be planted in the streams of that county," the commission declared.

It was declared that dynamiting and selling of fish had been prevalent in Shelby county.

HARDING LEADS DARK HORSE LINE

would be the nominee of a majority of the convention before many ballots were taken today.

Visits were paid by some of the senators to the Wood and Lowden headquarters, as well as to those of other presidential aspirants, while the conferences were on.

Several of the conferences were held in the room of Senator Brandegee on the fourth floor of the Blackstone, which became eventually the headquarters of the conference.

Brandegee was a visitor to the Blackstone, but he denied he had participated in any of the conferences.

He said he had gone to the hotel to confer with Johnson.

The conference did not reach an agreement on Harding, it was said, until by a process of elimination they had discarded all other candidates except Wood and Lowden, neither of whom was considered seriously.

It was the belief of the conferees, it was reported, that both Wood and Lowden would begin to weaken after the first few ballots today, although the campaign managers of each were said to have refused to enter into any "deal" to swing to any other candidate.

EXPECT TICKET WILL BE READY.

It was the consensus of opinion among delegates who talked with the group of senators afterward that by the time the convention reconvened there would be a ticket ready which republican leaders seeking to prevent the nomination of Johnson would unite in trying to put across.

That ticket would most certainly be headed by Harding, it was stated positively by one senator favorable to Harding's candidacy.

The situation looks very favorable to my candidacy," was the only statement Harding would make.

It was then 2 a. m. and Harding and the other senators appeared worn out by the long hours they had spent in the effort to develop a "deal" a majority of the convention would accept.

If the Harding deal failed it was said, a "dark horse" would be nominated, it also was learned.

Another bit of information permitted to trickle from the conferees was that Senator Penrose, from his sick room in Philadelphia, had communicated his approval of the choice of Harding as a compromise candidate.

SPROUL'S IMPRESSION GENERALLY FAVORABLE.

Gov. Sproul said he was gratified with those delegates he has personally met, and his name was freely mentioned around the Blackstone while the conferees were on.

"Lowden is able to develop considerable strength on the first few ballots today," one conferee said.

"His greatest strength probably will come on the first two or three ballots and he may receive as high as approximately 400 votes, but that will be his maximum and then taper off."

It was admitted, however, by even the most optimistic of the "deal" men that Johnson would not be sidetracked by them without the possibility of a bitter fight on the convention floor which would plunge the crowded building into a turmoil precipitated by Johnson personally appearing and joining with Borah in hurling defiance at the old guard leaders entrenched on the platform.

BRYAN THINKS SPROUL LIKELY

standing leaders of extreme conservatism, has his hand on the throttle.

His delegation showed its knowledge of practical politics by dividing its vote between Wood, Lowden and Harding.

At this writing it seems unlikely (remember this is only a guess) that the convention would be nominated.

The large expenditures disclosed by the investigating committee would seem to bar his progress toward the Whitehouse.

He is also handicapped by the fact that the convention failed to endorse the compulsory military training policy, of which he had been the leading champion.

His vote has risen from 257½ on the first ballot to 314½ on the fourth—a small increase for a leading candidate.

Gov. Lowden will probably be the choice of the reactionary element if they dared to risk his nomination.

But his financial connection with big business, added to the large sum that he admits to have invested in his campaign, makes his nomination highly improbable.

His vote has risen from 211½ on the first ballot to 280 on the fourth, but his increase has already commenced to slow down.

Senator Johnson's vote rose from 132½ on the first ballot to 148 on the third, and then fell to 140½ on the fourth.

There seems no likelihood of his vote reaching a much higher figure.

Senator Harding started at 64½ and has reached 68½.

He may receive some votes from both Wood and Lowden when they drop out, but there is no reason to believe that his vote will ever reach what theirs is now.

If Mr. Hoover had not entered the California primary he might have had a chance as a compromise, but there seems to be no enthusiasm for him among the delegates.

At present Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania has the lead among the dark horses, although Justice Hughes is frequently mentioned.

Gov. Coolidge and Dr. Butler may be considered for the vice presidency if a western man should receive the first place.

Judge Pritchard of North Carolina and Gov. Morrow of Kentucky may have a chance for the second place if the convention decides to go south for the vice presidential candidate, but no southern state is close enough to Wall street to give one of its citizens much chance for either place in this convention.

We shall soon know the worst.

G. O. P. CAN'T WIN WITH WOOD OR LOWDEN-BORAH

Idaho Senator Asserts Dark Shadow of 'Big Money' Will Trail Either.

MUST BE HI, HE WRITES

By WILLIAM E. BORAH, United States Senator from Idaho. (Copyright, 1920.)

CHICAGO, June 12.—The balloting yesterday disclosed unmistakably no enthusiasm but rather on the other hand, a great reluctance upon the part of the delegates to accept either Wood or Lowden as their candidate.

Both of these candidates have been in the field for a year.

Each has carried a thorough campaign in many respects.

One of them—Wood—has made a thorough canvass of forty-seven states.

And yet there was no enthusiasm among the delegates for either Wood or for Lowden.

Today—as the convention assembled again—you hear upon every hand, "We ought to name another candidate—we ought not to name Wood or Lowden—we ought to nominate Mr. Johnson," whose election, in my judgment, is already assured.

The thought seems to haunt the minds of the delegates who are voting for either Wood or Lowden that they may be carrying the republican party to disaster and defeat in November.

DOUBT IF EITHER COULD BE ELECTED.

It does not require much trouble to find a supporter of either Wood or Lowden—I mean a supporter in the sense that he is voting for one or the other of them at the present time—who will refuse to say that he seriously doubts if either can be nominated, or if either were nominated, he could be elected.

No candidate and no supporter of any candidate has a right to demand—unless he desires his loyalty to the republican party to be questioned—that his particular candidate be accepted as the nominee of the convention.

But every republican and every good citizen has a right to demand that whoever be the choice of the convention for president shall be a man whose integrity and honesty, and the manner in which he secured his nomination, cannot be questioned.

The republican party—every good republican and every good American citizen—has a right to demand that whoever the convention names for president is a man who is clean.

It isn't enough that he be individually clean.

The method by which he secured his nomination must be clean.

The perfectly brutal and shameless use of money which characterized the pre-convention campaign—and which is, for that matter, still characterizing the campaign—notwithstanding the startling disclosures of the lavish use of money before the senate committee appointed to investigate pre-convention campaign expenditures and contributions makes it imperative that when the convention ends the questionable employment of "slush funds" shall have been so completely exposed that no man can be nominated once and for all by the character of the nominee that it cannot be raised again during the campaign—at least so far as the republican party is concerned.

SHADOW WOULD FOLLOW EITHER.

If either Wood or Lowden were to be nominated by the convention there would be an interrogation point placed opposite either of them in the mind of every voter in the United States as to how he got his nomination.

It is simply inconceivable to me that with a number of men of high standing—either of whom would make a clean candidate—from which the convention may choose there should be a determination apparently in certain quarters with which we are all too familiar to put over men like Wood and Lowden who are already under investigation by a senate committee and who will still be under investigation when the committee resumes its hearings in Chicago in July.

What a pitiable, miserable mess it would be for the republican party to be led by a candidate who would be asked to stand before the nation and to whom has been traced the use of money to buy the nomination for president of the United States?

It is a condition about which good American citizens can not be too much concerned and to which the convention must pay heed unless it wishes to invite defeat for the republican party in November.

REPUBLICANS TIRE OF FIGHT

Lowden today, but this was discounted by other New Yorkers. There is little chance of New York's getting together on the candidate, according to the views of most of them.

The "old guard," what is left of it, was in a quandary today, switching about and unable either to decide anything or to get a majority.

The old guard proved by the adjournment that it was in more or less control of the parliamentary situation on the floor, but it has not shown that it can pick a man from out of the ruck and make him the 1920 candidate for president.

The old guard leaders are frantically engaged in trying to find an open road on which to get out of this delicate situation. It is a delicate situation, so delicate that even a crude movement may send Hiram Johnson and Senator Borah into the van of a new political party.

Above all else, the party managers want to avoid a repetition of 1912.

The most generally accepted plan of the old guard leaders this morning was this:

To muster all the strength possible on the early balloting today, kill off both Lowden and Wood by showing them the hopelessness of their respective situations without organization support, and then get behind either Harding or Sproul.

Both Harding and Sproul are acceptable to the "organization."

The old guard frankly does not want Wood or Johnson, but they can't possibly get out of it. The same is true of Hiram Johnson. Lowden it would like to have, but there is always the fear that even if nominated Lowden could not get elected because of the mud which has clung to the skirts of the Illinois governor of the "Missouri mess."

Ever present in their repining delirium was the admonition of Boileau Penrose, coming over miles of telephone wires, that whoever the candidate is he must be a man who can move into the Whitehouse.

Adding to the confusion of the situation, was the fear that many of these delegates, while bound to Lowden, to Wood or to Johnson or to Harding, are not bound to the extent that they can be delivered to another man like so much property. It is feared that comparatively few of the delegates, outside of the southern states, can be delivered and probably none of the state delegations in their entirety. It is doubtful if even the favorite sons can command their delegates to vote for another man.

As had been predicted for many weeks, the convention's first four ballots, taken at the conclusion of a day of oratory, failed to show anything except the presence of a large number of conflicting interests in the convention.

On the first ballot the vote was merely a confirmation of the opinion of every one—that no candidate stood out over another. In the scope of the four ballots there was little change of significance, the tendency to go to Lowden having been expected and regarded as too slight to have a material bearing on the result.

The gains of Wood and Lowden on the fourth ballot in the balloting are shown by the following tabulation of the vote for the principal contenders on each ballot:

First, Second, Third, Fourth.
Wood 257½ 289½ 303 314½
Lowden 211½ 226½ 282½ 289
Johnson 133½ 146 148 140½

"Lowden and Wood are through," was the consensus on the floor of the convention upon adjournment. The only hope of either, it had been conceded, was in success on either the third or fourth ballot.

A dark horse was the general opinion. Indiana's delegation voted 22 for Wood and 8 for Johnson on the first and second ballots.

On the third ballot Indiana gave Wood 15, Lowden 2, Johnson 2 and Harding 2.

On the fourth ballot Indiana's vote was, Wood 18, Lowden 3, Johnson 6 and Harding 3.

EXPECT G. O. P. TO FILL SECOND BY 'GEOGRAPHY'

Nominee for Vice President Must Cement Ticket, Leaders Say.

FOUR INDIANA SONS UP

By DAVID M. CHURCH.

CHICAGO, June 12.—A small army of possible vice presidential candidates are in the background today awaiting their fate.

Before night it is expected that the republican national convention will have chosen a man to run second for the G. O. P. ticket, but the nomination for vice president will hinge on the selection made for the leader of the ticket.

There is a wealth of vice presidential timber under discussion.

Senator Harding of Ohio is being prominently mentioned for the place in the event that he fails to secure the first place prize.

Gov. Allen of Kansas, Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts, Senator Kuyper of Iowa and Gov. Morrow of Kentucky all have their supporters.

Gov. Samuel I. McKelvie of Nebraska also is a candidate for second honors.

Geography is expected to play the trump hand in the selection of the vice presidential candidate.

The party leaders are striving to secure a runner-up who will be a close second who can help the ticket through the doubtful states.

If a western man is nominated for second place, the eastern man will run in second place, and vice versa.

Indiana, the usual source of vice presidential timber, is not lacking in candidates. Senator Watson, Senator New, Gov. Goodrich and ex-Senator Beveridge, all of Indiana, may be offered to the convention.

INDIANAPOLIS MAN DECLARES MOTHER IS MUCH BETTER

Suffered from lazy liver, dizziness, tired out, no account feeling, constipation and stomach disorder.

Claims two bottles of the new remedy Drecto has brought a big change in her.

"It is wonderful to see the big change in mother since she has been taking Drecto," said Mrs. C. C. Walker of 121 East McCarty street, Indianapolis.

"Mother lives in Marion, Ind., but is on a visit here. She had taken Drecto back home, so when she read in the papers that it could be bought in Indianapolis she had me make a special trip to the drug store to get some."

"For a long time she has been bothered with constipation and had to take medicine nearly every night for this trouble. Her liver was very sluggish, giving her bitter taste in the mouth, that tired, worn out feeling, dizzy spells and headaches. Her strength was very low and her sleep was broken."

"Two bottles of Drecto have made her like a different woman. She has a big appetite, sleeps sound all night long, never has a headache now, dizzy spells and the constipation has been entirely relieved. Really, Drecto has been a great blessing to her."

Drecto acts on the liver in a smooth, gentle manner, gradually working off the excess bile day by day. It is neither strong nor harsh, and does not excite the muscles of the bowels, as strong cathartics do. It tones up the digestive organs and relieves gas on the stomach; puts an end to constipation; increases the appetite; gives strength to weak kidneys; restores tired nerves, and induces sound sleep. Drecto is a great blood purifier and system cleanser."

Mr. Williamson, the well known Drecto expert, has headquarters at Clark & Cade's Claypool Hotel drug store, to meet the local public and explain the merits of this great remedy. See him today.—Advertisement.
