

TROOPS QUIET DULUTH WHEN MOB LYNCHES 3

Crowd Storms Jail and Takes Six Negroes Held in Attack on White Girl.

DULUTH, Minn., June 16.—Minnesota state militiamen restored order in the streets of Duluth today, following a night of mob rule which resulted in the lynching in one of the main streets of the city of three negro circus roustabouts who had been arrested for attacking a 17-year-old white girl.

The girl was reported to have died as the result of her experiences. Following the news of the attack, which spread quickly through the city, the mob, numbering some 5,000 men, broke into the jail where the negroes were confined, and took them from the cells.

Six negroes had been arrested in connection with the crime. Three of the accused were found "not guilty" at a mock trial before the lynchings. Not a shot was fired in the mob demonstrations. The three negroes hanged were Isaac McGhie, Elmer Jackson and Nate Green.

Hoosier Is Boosted for Rotarian Chief

Indianapolis will be represented by about thirty-four Rotarians at the annual convention of International Rotary clubs, to be held at Atlantic City next week.

Some of the wives and other members of their families will accompany some Rotarians to the convention. Indianapolis Rotarians are boosting John N. Dyer of Vincennes, Ind., as president of the international organization.

attempted to clear himself, but also did not involve Chief Schmitt, but admitted that he heard that liquor had been transported into Evansville.

Both Freidie and Trautwein testified they made an attempt to catch the booze runners.

"How many catches did you make in the police boat?" the court asked Freidie.

"One," answered Freidie.

Trautwein admitted that a tip came to headquarters from a minister at Henderson, Ky., that a shipment of booze was coming into town by a certain road.

Trautwein stated that the chief ordered him to remain at police headquarters instead of going out and hunting for the booze runners.

"You were to arrest them if they happened to come to headquarters?" asked District Attorney VanNuy.

The witness was silent.

CONGRESSMAN USED AS CHARACTER WITNESS.

O. R. Lühring, congressman from Evansville, appeared as a character witness for Fred Osenberg.

On cross-examination by District Attorney VanNuy, Lühring admitted that Osenberg's place of business is in the colored district and that Lühring and Osenberg often had conferences.

"You mean that Fred Osenberg is a political boss down there?" asked the district attorney.

"Not a boss from the standpoint of being corrupt," snapped Lühring.

VanNuy asked, "if a political boss means a man who can control enough votes to swing an election, then Osenberg is a political boss?"

"Yes," answered Lühring.

Lühring explained to the court that he was just a visitor and was suddenly called as a witness.

Those introducing a defense in an attempt to refute the evidence introduced by the government are Edgar Schmitt, police chief of Evansville and the central figure of the alleged conspiracy are:

Fred Osenberg, republican factional leader at Evansville, who is alleged to have influenced the sheriff of Vanderburg and his deputies not to interfere with the "whisky" runners between Henderson, Ky., and Evansville.

Herbert Males, sheriff of Vanderburg county, whose alleged obedience to Osenberg allowed the favorites of Chief Schmitt unmolested access to roads leading to Evansville.

Abe and Moses Klyman, former wholesale liquor dealers of Henderson, Ky., whom government witnesses claimed they purchased whisky from for transportation into Indiana.

Charles J. Ruhl, deputy sheriff, alleged to have been a part of the whisky transportation conspiracy.

Andy Freidie, captain of police; Enoch Weir, William Fuchs and James Trautwein, all members of the police department at Evansville, and according to the government witnesses made no interference with the alleged wide open transportation of liquor into the state.

Carl Dreisch, inspector of weights and measures.

Arthur R. Booth, city councilman.

Charles Smith and William Morris, police officers.

(By the Reference Department, Indianapolis

When was Indianapolis first connected by telegraph with another city?

In 1848, to Dayton, O.

Where does Indianapolis foster its art?

In the John Herron Art Institute the city has one of the noted art museums of the United States. It was organized by the Art association of Indianapolis in 1888, and incorporated the same year. In 1898, John Herron, an Indianapolis millionaire, left a bequest of $200,000 with the stipulation that an art museum should be built and an art school conducted which should bear his name.

For what fine piece of art is Indianapolis noted?

The Soldiers' and Sailors' monument, which is recognized as one of the most noteworthy monuments in the United States. It is said to be the greatest monument in the world erected to commemorate the services of its citizen soldiery and the first ever erected directly in honor of the private soldier. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, it was erected at a cost of more than $500,000 and dedicated in 1902.

the state laws or any injunctions issued by a state court to prevent the prosecutor from enforcing the state prohibition law.

The last dozen witnesses for the government were introduced for the purpose of corroborating previous testimony given by the principal witnesses for the government.

Richard Pennington, a defendant who pleaded guilty, testified to buying whisky from the Klyman Brothers at Henderson, and of seeing Fred Osenberg, Circuit Judge Gould, Ben Bartlett, a police officer and others together.

Charles Thompson, a defendant, who has pleaded guilty, testified to having had others bring whisky into him and testified that he gave $50 while a case was pending in the city court against the "whisky" runners.

Efforts of the defense to meet the evidence of the government are centered in an effort to refute evidence submitted against Chief Schmitt, Osenberg, the Klymans, Sheriff Males and Deputy Ruhl and Enoch Weir.

Arthur Booth, during the trial cross-examined a government witness in his own behalf and this examination apparently cleared up the situation in the opinion of Booth.

Before the defense began introducing evidence, Judge Anderson had repeatedly stated that no irrelevant matters will be allowed to be introduced as defense, as the case is being tried solely under federal law with no consideration of replied Thompson. Thompson testified that he considered the $50 he gave Schmitt money for "killing trouble."

Charles Schave, formerly of the Evansville police department, testified an employee of the police station came out of the chief's office and gave him a check for $150 and told him to have it cashed.

Text Roberts testified that Chief Schmitt called him to his office and stated that he (the chief) understood that Roberts wanted to give $50 to the family of James Boner, who was then serving a sentence imposed by the federal court for violating the federal liquor laws.

"I had it cashed and came back and gave it to the chief," said Schave, "and the chief asked me what it was for, and I told him I was instructed to have it cashed."

"The chief then said it was a check that Boner had left," testified Schave.

REDUCED TO TELLING PRESS.

Schave testified that a woman, alleged to be the operator of an immoral house at Evansville with Boner at headquarters at the time the check was written.

Schave stated that he was afterward reduced from the rank of a fan officer after he had told the press about the transaction and that Chief Schmitt afterward reduced from the rank of an officer but talked too much.

Schave was not indicted and was only a witness of the government.

Roberts testified that Schmitt told him to give the $50 to John Boner, a brother of James Boner, and stated that he did. John Boner substantiated the evidence of Roberts and said the money was used in the interest of the family of his brother.

David Wolf, former saloon keeper, testified that Chief Schmitt "borrowed" $50 from him to go to Hot Springs, and that he talked to Schmitt about transporting booze into the state.

SAYS CHIEF DOESN'T PAY BILLS.

Abram Cohn, who operates a grocery at Evansville with his brother, Sol Cohn, admitted having been brought into the state in large assignments and testified that Chief Schmitt ran a grocery bill at his store and never paid the bill during 1918 and 1919.

On cross-examination, Attorney John W. Spencer attempted to force Cohn to admit that Schmitt paid his bill every Saturday night.

"No, he didn't," answered Cohn.

"Why last Saturday night didn't he come in and buy two chickens and pay for them?" asked Attorney Spencer.

"Schmitt asked me for two chickens but I didn't let him have them," answered Cohn.

A colored boy was introduced as a witness and testified to hauling a truck said to contain whisky from the L. & N. depot to a lonely country road and then leaving it there on instructions from some officer at headquarters.

Fred McDaniels, assistant inspector of the L. & N., who was not indicted, testified seeing the truck containing whisky and seeing City Judge Ireland of Evansville and Enoch Weir drive up to the station.

McDaniels testified that he and Weir, who is a police officer under indictment, followed the truck containing the trunk full of whisky, to police headquarters.

"At police headquarters," testified McDaniels, "Weir told me that I was no longer wanted."

McDaniels said that this remark made him so angry that he forgot to watch where the truck went to with the whisky after it left headquarters.

J. Carvin, a police officer, who was not indicted, testified that he saw the trunk containing the whisky at the depot and reported the fact to Captain of Police Andy Freidie.

"Freidie over the phone told me 'not to see too much, as I knew what tomorrow was.'"

"And what was tomorrow?" asked Mr. Slack.

"Election day," answered Carvin.

Carvin testified that he "didn't see any more," left the station and when he returned the trunk was not there.

FINAL ARGUMENTS LATE TODAY.

Clarence Wilhelm testified that he at one time engaged three taxicabs to bring whisky into Evansville for Otto Klein and maintained that he saw as high as ten to fifteen automobiles loaded with whisky going to Evansville.

Frank J. Diehl, Ed Scheerer and others testified for the government.

There is every indication that final arguments will begin late today or early in the morning.

OVER THREE SCORE YEARS OLD BUT IS FEELING FINE NOW

Indianapolis man suffered from rheumatism, kidney trouble, constipation and loss of sleep.

Dreco gave him prompt relief and he now claims it to be the best medicine in the world.

Mr. Geo. W. Matthews, who lives at 900 W. Maryland Ave., has lived in Indianapolis, Ind., all his life. When he was a little boy, during the Civil war, he said papers on the streets. He worked for the Big 4 R. R. (where he is still employed) as brakeman in 1888, before air brakes were invented.

"For some time I've suffered from rheumatism of the joints and muscles. I could not bend over except with great pain and my joints would snap and pop with any quick movement," said Mr. Matthews. My kidneys troubled me a great deal and I frequently had to get up during the night, my back ached almost constantly.

"My bowels were so badly constipated that I had to take some kind of medicine all the time. My nerves were on edge so that I hardly knew what a night of sound refreshing sleep was like."

"One bottle of Dreco has brought about a great change in me. The rheumatic pains are gone; I never have a headache, can stoop and bend over like I was a boy again, my sleep is sound and I rise in the morning feeling full of vim and vigor. Dreco did for me what other medicines failed to do, and I gladly praise it."

The old-fashioned remedies, made from roots and herbs, are the best for any one to take. Dreco is made from twelve different roots, herbs, barks and leaves. These act on the stomach, bowels and kidneys and purify the blood. Dreco knocks rheumatism out shortly; relieves catarrh of the head and stomach; makes you sleep soundly and creates a good appetite. As a blood purifier nothing can equal Dreco. It puts a stop to boils, eczema and other blood affections.

Mr. Williamson, the well-known Dreco expert, has headquarters at Clark & Cade's Claypool Hotel Drug Store, to meet the local public and explain the merits of this great remedy. See him today.—Advertisement.
