WHEN A GIRL MARRIES
A New Serial of Young Married Life

By ANN LISLE

CHAPTER LXXVIII.
A telegram came for Jim the next morning just after he had gone to work. My husband and I never opened each other's letters. But this was different; and, after pondering over the matter for several minutes, I decided that a telegram demanded immediate attention—so I opened it.

And because of what I read there I set about dusting and scrubbing and putting my little home in such marvelous order that I had actually just finished with the four rooms when Jim came home.

"Tired, dear?" I asked sympathetically. I was a bit tired myself.

"A little. But an hour or two alone with you in this little nest of ours would rest me all right," answered Jim, tilting up my chin for his kiss.

Then I remembered the telegram. I gave it to Jim, and he read it quietly. He looked up with eyes aglow.

"Virginia and Phoebe get in from Chicago at 10:10."

"I know, dear—I opened the message. I thought I ought to. I hope you don't mind."

Jim dismissed that as trifling—unimportant in the face of his news.

"Virginia's coming!" he said, looking at me as if to see whether I understood how much that meant to him. Then his glance eluded me. It seemed to travel away where I could not follow—back to the youth he had shared with his sister.

"Virginia, I suppose, I slipped into the kitchen and left him to his dreaming. Neal did not come home until after 7. He brought with him a faint aroma, but I dared not ask him if he had been drinking. My face betrayed me, however, for he glanced at me impishly and said:

"Don't preach, Babbie. Every called round at the office for me. We took a little spin and then stopped for a 'cup of tea'—only the 'tea' was a mint julep for mine. It gave me an appetite, too. Dinner ready?"

"It will be in a little while, dear. Jim's shaving now and putting on clean linen. His sisters are coming this evening."

"His sisters? Didn't know he had any folks." Neal replied indifferently. It was just on the tip of my tongue to tell him that Pat Dalton was Virginia's husband, when Jim came in, fairly beaming.

"Hear the news, Neal? Virginia and Phoebe came in tonight."

It was the first time he had called Neal anything except "Hyland"—and the boy responded to his jovial tone with delight.

"Great! I'm tickled to death to hear it. I'll be glad to show the girls the town."

Jim laughed.

"Virginia is a married woman—29. Neal—a bit old for you, eh? And Phoebe is a kid. But thanks just the same, lad. Jim's friendliness gave Neal courage to advance a bit further. And when we had finished serving up the dinner and were cheerfully devouring our real chops and baked potatoes he suddenly burst out:

"Say, Jim, could you lead me a fever. I'm pretty near stony."

Jim scowled.

"Out of cash already, Neal? This is only Tuesday. Saturday's payday, isn't it?"

"Yep," replied Neal tersely, ready to be on the defensive.

"Well, you're dining money around pretty fast. Sorry, but I can't encourage you in this extravagance."—Copyright, 1920.

KIWANIS HEAR
STUART WALKER

Player Says City Is Not 'Dead Theatrical'

That Indianapolis is not a "theatrical graveyard," but one of the most important producing centers of the theatrical world was the high note of a speech by Stuart Walker at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Severin hotel.

Interesting reminiscences of his own life and those of members of his company of players now at the Murat theater were told by Mr. Walker.

According to word from Cecil Crabbs, secretary of the club, who is in Los Angeles, that city will follow the example of the Indianapolis club in building a "hut" for the Boy Scout organizations of the city.

Another distinguished guest at the weekly luncheon was Warren Kimsey, food representative of the International Kiwanis clubs.

This Is the Time to Buy
Your Vacation Trunk

For that trip to the lakes or that month in the country, for your pilgrimage to the historic east or the glorious west, a trunk is an absolute necessity. Don't try to struggle along with a lot of small luggage when a convenient trunk secures you pleasant traveling.

Just here we want to give you a tip on a new trunk. We placed this order for trunks over a year ago, before the prices began to feel dizzy. There were two carloads of them, and now the trunks and the reasonable prices are at your disposal.

The names of the makers assure you of quality—Likly, Bolter, Beals and Selkirk. They have strength with the minimum weight.

A wide range of styles and prices as listed—Twenty-one styles and sizes of steamer trunks, $9.00 to $37.00.

Seventeen styles and sizes of general purpose trunks, $17.50 to $65.00.

Thirty-two styles and sizes of wardrobe trunks, $37.50 to $175.00.

A Strand of French
Pearls

At such an invitingly low price no one need hesitate to indulge their holiday whim. Pearl beads are so lustrous, so richly mellow that even the simplest summer frock is complimented and a new charm added through their influence.

These imported pearls are strung in opera length, of the graduated French filled beads. They are 27 inches in length, the spring ring clasp being of solid gold. They were indeed much more costly, but slight (practically invisible) imperfections condemn them as "seconds," making the price indeed appealing at $1.95.

Swagger Bags Are Inviting

They do not lag far behind the pearls in their cordiality to be purchased, for they are of pin Persian leather, very neat in size and shape. They are made in one piece and fitted with an inside compartment, a coin purse that one can't lose try as she may. It's quite novel how they are fastened in—and there is a separate mirror; the lining is of moire silk, the frame of nickel silver; 6 or 7-inch sizes. You may choose between bags of black, brown, navy or gray.

Each Priced at $2.95

THE CIRCLE STANDS TODAY FOR TWO BARGAINS IN DRESSES

The buyer went to New York last week and scoured the market for the very best dresses at the lowest possible price, to be sold at retail accordingly. There is no mistaking nor misstating; the values are extraordinarily high. Read:

COTTON VOILE FROCKS

100 to Sell at $10.50

And very few of each style, they are beautifully made and smartly cut, and embrace many of the highest price cotton frocks. Light and dark color effects and combinations of plain and dotted materials. Particularly suitable for "over the Fourth" wear.

ORGANDIE AND SWISS FROCKS

Specially Priced at $17.50

All in light and pastel colorings. The Swiss frocks in white grounds with tiny colored dots or hairline stripes forming checks, and trimmed daintily with rows of Valenciennes.

The organdie modes in single tints, tucked and ruffled, and embroidered, resulting in frocks of exquisite loveliness.

On the Fourth Summer Playthings Bring Fun Without Fireworks

The boy of a few years ago spent the Fourth of July in frightening his mother, tormenting the neighbors and risking constantly a permanent injury; the while explosives sounded all around him, and the smell of powder filled the air. The boy of today celebrates the holiday with sane and healthy frolic; running gaily up and down the sidewalk on a scooter or in a coaster wagon; pounding out martial rhythms on a vibrating drum; launching into the air a graceful model airplane. Make his heart glad with one of these summer playthings.

The Ayres Toy Shop

has a full line of these joy-bringers to boyish hearts. Coaster wagons and scooters in abundance are to be found there.

The Ampico, an all-steel, rubber-tired coaster wagon at $8.50, and Skypalongs, two and three-wheel scooters at $1.50 and $2.00, are especially good values.

Drums, which all boys delight in, come in many types and sizes, ranging in price from 65c to $9.00.

Model airplanes are at 95c, $1.75 and up, while popguns, the pride of very small boys especially, sell at $1.25.

The Daisy Liquid Pistol

This delightfully realistic looking little "weapon" is being offered as a special for Friday and Saturday only at 47c. Satisfy the boy's love for a gun with one of these "safe and sane" liquid pistols.
