

OLD COMPETITION IDEA GIVING WAY

Credit Man Bespeaks Business
Co-operation.

"The old idea of vicious, cut-throat competition among businesses in allied lines has given way to a broader and saner plan of friendly co-operation," said Lawrence G. Holmes, general secretary of the Indianapolis Association of Credit Men, in an address on the subject of "Trade Group Conferences" at the weekly luncheon of the association at the Claypool hotel.

"This, undoubtedly," he continued, "is one of the most important factors in the steady growth of the United States to a place of first importance in the commerce of the world."

Several of the local associations throughout the country, he added, have adopted the group conference idea, which originated at the convention of the national association, and the officers of the national association were so impressed by the success of these conferences that they have decided to recommend to the local associations throughout the country that some such idea be incorporated in the programs for the state conventions.

In outlining methods for organizing group conferences, he suggested that it will probably be advisable to have two or more similar groups unite at first, then gradually recognize in smaller, closer groups.

Stage and Screen

YOU ARE BOUND TO LIKE THIS ONE.

On with the masks.

They are drawn aside for awhile in "The City of Masks," which is to be seen at the Alhambra today and Saturday.

Robert Warwick wears one of them. He is a penniless nobleman, who is masquerading as Tommy Trotter, a chauffeur.

And Lois Wilson wears another one. She is, in reality, a noblewoman, who is reduced to earning her living as a governess.

They are two of a band of threadbare nobles, who preserve some of their traditions and pomp under the most adverse circumstances.

These culms meet every Wednesday night at the house of one of the members.

Their butler, who had followed one of them to America when her fortune was lost, is, unknown to them, the political boss of New York.

He helps Warwick out of some pretty tight positions.

There is a villain, a scion of one of the wealthy families of the city, and he covets the governorship.

His attempts to get rid of Trotter and secure the girl provide a great deal of excitement, and his plots cause some of the adventurous elements of the story.

The play is from the book by George Barr McCutchen, and is full of romance, adventure and realism, with a fine love story that effectually smooths off the rough places.

You will like this picture.

Opinion—A good Warwick production, which reflects competent acting by the star and all his company—an interesting story, well produced.

Girl Firemen Work on Blaze Just Like Real

LONDON, July 2.—Girl "firemen" are credited with their first put-out. The girls' brigade at Princess Mary Village Home, Addison, ran hose up a ladder and extinguished a fire with all neatness and dispatch.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine, as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advertisement.

PUSS IN BOOTS JR.

By DAVID CORY.

One morning as Puss Junior came to the edge of a little winding brook he heard a silvery voice exclaim:

"Who looks within these waters bright That gleam like silver stars, at night Will ever after think of me."

The spirit of these waters free. And then the loveliest little water sprite came out of the brook and waved her silver wand over a yellow buttercup which immediately turned into a golden throne. And after the lovely water sprite had seated herself upon it she turned again to Puss Junior and said:

"Wither goest thou, Sir Cat?"

"I am seeking my fortune," he replied.

"Have you ever searched for the pot of gold that hangs on a rainbow?" she asked.

"I once slid down a rainbow," replied Puss with a grin, "but the only thing I found at the end of it was a big haystack."

"Well, maybe that was better than a pot of gold," said the little water sprite, for no doubt it saved your life."

"Well, the next time I see a rainbow I shall look for the pot of gold," said Puss Junior, and after that he took off his hat and bowed to the fairy water sprite and continued his journey of adventure.

And by and by he came to a little house in the woods, so he peeked into the window to see what was inside, for the door was closed and he thought it better not to knock, for he didn't know who might open the door, you know.

And while he was looking in a little dog ran up and opened the door without even so much as knocking. Now there was a lovely pussy cat sitting by the fire, and Puss was just going to tap on the door when the little dog opened the door.

Pussy sits by the fire, warming all her fur, in comes a little dog, just to worry her.

"So, so, Mistress Pussy, Pray, how do you do?"

"Thank you, thank you, little dog, Much better without you."

But the little dog began to bark, so Puss boldly opened the door and said:

"Don't you dare bark at Mistress Pussy Cat," and then he drew his sword, and he looked so fierce that the little dog ran out of the house and far away, and he never stopped till the end of the day. And in the next story you shall hear some more about Puss Junior and his adventures.—Copyright, 1920.
