

Life of Champion Middle Thinks Her Hubby King of All

Johnny Wilson Says He's Greatest Boxer in Ring.

BOSTON, July 23.—Mrs. Johnny Wilson, wife of the world's middleweight champion, regretted the fact that Mrs. Georges Carpentier didn't visit Boston recently with her famous husband.

Mrs. Wilson had a little surprise all prepared for Mrs. Carpentier. She wanted to take her to dinner at one of the fashionable Back Bay hotels and then ask the French boxer's wife if her husband believed he could defeat the Charlestown champion.

"You know I believe Johnny is the greatest boxer in the world," said Mrs. Wilson.

"Of course, he only won the world's middleweight title when he defeated Mike O'Dowd, but I feel sure he can defeat most of the heavyweights. Carpentier would be easy for him."

When Mrs. Wilson learned that Mrs. Carpentier had failed to come to Boston she wrote her a letter, which was given to the French champion to present to his wife. The letter follows:

"My Dear Mrs. Carpentier—Accept my best wishes for yourself. I was very sorry you were unable to come to Boston. I hope you will be able to visit our city before you return to France. I would dearly love to greet you personally."

"It is only natural that you should be enthusiastic over the wonderful boxing ability of your husband. Any man who has a record like that of your illustrious husband is certainly deserving of praise."

"I think, though, that my husband would be able to score more points than your husband in a boxing match. It would be America against France in an international athletic event. I have enough confidence in my husband's ability as a boxer to feel sure he would successfully uphold the honor of America. With kind wishes to yourself."

(Signed) "MRS. JOHNNY WILSON."
"No. 6 Cordis street, Charlestown, Mass."

IT ALWAYS HAPPENS.
Eddie Roush, quiet-mannered gentleman when he was just one of the rank and file with the Giants, has joined the list of temperamental babies since helping bring the baseball millennium to Cincinnati. Funny how they get that way, isn't it?

BARTFIELD VISITS HOME.
Soldier Bartfield, one of the leading middleweight scrappers, recently returned from a visit to his old home in Poland.

"Things are tough back there," is Bartfield's expressive comment on the situation.

Knitting Needle Supplanted by Driver

By MABEL WHEELER.
"Fore," a feminine voice called.
Zip! The little white missile slapped the turf way down the farway yards.

It was some drive for a girl, far over the bunker; two skilled strokes would take it in the hole.

the green, I decided that I might as well quit, and gathered up my bag.
At the second hole, teeing off, was a trio of young matrons, who are devotees to the art, who play almost daily, always together.
They wore sport outfits.

Mrs. Kent Morgan and Miss Hazel Wann.

I had lost a ball, and having nothing to do but look for it, I decided to wait for the fair lady with the tremendous wallop arm and look her over.

When she strode up to play her second stroke, I knew her for one of the best women players on the course.

She looked like a picture out of a fashion magazine; snappy black belted coat, knickerbockers, soft white shirt, a roll brimmed black sailor shading her eyes and gray knitted hose formed her attire.

And she surely sets the pace for feminine sportswomen.
When her second stroke took her on

One, blackeyed, brown-armed and petite, in a two-piece frock of yellow linen topped off with a rakish little silk hat of the same shade, looked decidedly smart.

Caps are favored by some of the fair sex.
A slender blond in a bright blue sweater and white skirt, had a checked cap pulled down over her curly hair, giving her a singularly boyish look.

Smocks in brilliant hues are a favorite garb and make effective splashes against the velvety green of the fairway.

Here and there I glimpsed a white proves much, but I do love being out here."

Continuing on the backward path, I met a slim young woman, jangling along at a high rate of speed.

She looked decidedly golfish, a plaid bag thrown over her shoulder, green flannel middie and soft felt hat tilted over one eye.

"Fine day," she assented to my idle query, "I don't care for weather, though. I play in rain or shine, cold or hot. Crazy about it."

"I am putting on weight. My shots don't improve much, but my appetite does."

"I come in the morning and bring my lunch quite frequently.
They are all out, the fat, the thin, the old, the young!"

They have ruthlessly thrown aside their knitting needles, crochet hooks, for the most fascinating driver and masher.

"Bridge" is relegated to the discard and the golf foursome, followed by ginger ale and ham sandwiches, is substituted for the "bridge tea party."

In the feminine world, golf is the thing!

Harvard Leads Yale
in Major Sports; Eli
Tops in Minor Field

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 23.—While Yale has had the big edge on Harvard in minor sports this season, the Crimson, by virtue of its crew and baseball victories, jumps well to the fore in the big pastimes.

Harvard annexed the football matinee last fall and added the hockey title during the winter. Yale pounced on the track title for the first and last of its major sport wins.

Both the lawn tennis and golf matches went to Yale a few weeks ago, but Harvard won the lacrosse game by one goal. Yale's cross-country runners were also successful. In the fencing meet, Harvard won one more match than Yale.

Following is the list of athletic competitions between these great rivals for the season 1919-20:

Football—Harvard won, 10 to 3. Varsity crew—Harvard, 28:11; Yale, 23:16. Baseball—Harvard, 4 to 1; Yale, 4 to 2; Harvard, 6 to 3. Track—Yale, 8:44; Harvard, 8:24. Hockey—Harvard, 5 to 4; Harvard, 3 to 0. Cross-country—Yale, 16 to 62. Swimming—Yale, 11 to 9. Tennis—Yale, 7 to 2. Golf—Yale, 6 to 3. Soccer—tie. Fencing—Harvard, 5 to 4. Lacrosse—Harvard, 4 to 3. Gymnastics—Yale, 37 to 17. Wrestling—Yale, 16 to 9. Rifle shooting—Harvard, 975 to 963. B. A. A. relay—Yale, 7:17 3-5. Squash—Yale, 6 to 0.

OLSON TAKES BRIDE.
WELLSBURGH, W. Va., July 23.—Ivan M. Olson, shortstop of the Brooklyn National league baseball club, and Miss Mabel Irie of Webb, Mo., were married Thursday by the Rev. A. M. Miller of the First Baptist church.
