

CITY PROVIDES FREE PICTURES FOR EVERYBODY

High-Class Films on Varied
Subjects are Exhibited at Parks.

OUR SHOWS A WEEK

"Lamb from Range to Market," "Fishing a Boy to His Job," "Fishing," "A Trip Through the Canadian Rockies," "Selecting a Laying Hen"—these are titles of moving pictures which Indianapolis folk can see free.

The recreation department of the city parks and playgrounds is providing some very excellent pictures this summer.

The city has four powerful projecting machines and all the necessary to give a real picture show in any of the public parks.

While the weather has been rather cool and considerable rain has interfered with the shows, the summer program is going apace.

The pictures are selected by the Association of Municipal Purchasing Agents who have recreation departments to deal with.

The films are provided free because most of them are put forth for the publicity they contain.

This does not mean that they are "advertising" films.

FILM WORK FOR RAILWAY.
A Trip Through the Rockies, for example, was filmed for the Canadian Pacific railway and is one of the choicest examples of scenic pictures.

"Selecting a Laying Hen," holds vital interest to the back-yard poultry raiser, besides being of unique interest to the smallest child who likes chickens.

The film was made by one of the biggest producing companies for the United States department of agriculture and is authentic in every respect.

The Indianapolis recreation department has a film of several reels from the war risk insurance department of the government that is said to be unusual in many respects besides carrying a vital lesson to all ex-service men and their relatives on the subject of insurance protection.

This film will be shown on the next program.

In addition, the extension division of Indiana university has a number of educational films which will supply to Indianapolis, giving the boys and girls an idea of what any purposeful American youngster can do in the matter of obtaining an education and what to do with after he gets it.

In addition to being instructive, these films are intensely interesting and always carry a story or at least continuity.

The bureau of commercial economics of the United States co-operate in making films of industrial interest.

"Making a Magazine," issued by the Curtis Publishing Company some time ago, is an example of this.

TAKE POINTS OF INTEREST.
A number of larger cities of the country, through their civic organizations, have made pictures of their points of interest.

A plan is on foot now in Indianapolis to have the Chamber of Commerce arrange for the taking of considerable footage of film showing Indianapolis and its interesting places.

Such a film would be sent all over the country—similar pictures are sent here—and exhibited for the benefit of the city.

Its advertising value is apparent.

The Indianapolis recreation department can supply various educational pictures to churches and lodges who desire to give an entertainment, although this fact is not generally known.

No charge is made for the use of these films.

The department, for example, shows picture programs on the south side in some of the congested districts in the neighborhood of Ringgold and Greer streets, and have audiences made up of entire families, from the aged grandmother to the babe in arms.

Even at five cents admission it would take more money than such families could afford to spend to attend a "pay" show, so it can be seen how these pictures are appreciated.

FOUR SHOWS EACH WEEK.
Under the board's plan at least four shows a week are given in the park districts where recreation grounds are maintained.

As many as fourteen shows have been given in a single week, said Dwight Ritter, city purchasing agent, who has charge of obtaining the pictures.

The films were first tried last year and met with marked appreciation.

This year, while not as many programs have been given as was anticipated, owing to the cool weather, the films have been shown whenever it was possible to do so.

The park department has trucks used especially to cart the projecting machines, screens, etc., to any point where a picture is to be shown, and skilled men to operate the machines.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

A New Serial of Young Married Life

By ANN LISLE.

CHAPTER CT.
Evvy practically ordered the dinner. She made the seating arrangements. Jim was at the head of the table—I at the foot, and stretching between us were Betty, Terry, Virginia, Sheldon at one side and on the other Evvy, Neal, Phoebe and Tom. It looked natural enough, but as I sat between Sheldon Blake and Tom Mason I wondered why Evvy had put her old friend Sheldon so far from her as possible and had chosen to place Neal on her right.

There was dancing in the big dining room behind us, and without even waiting for their clams, Neal and Phoebe ran in at the first note of a fox-trot and circled the room happily in each other's arms. I saw a quick flash of glances between Betty and Terry, and then the handsome English captain leaned down the table and said coaxingly:

"Mrs. Jimmie—first a toast to our bride and groom—and then this very dance with the bride herself, please."

Tom Mason replied for me, lifting his glass high:

"We'll rise to your toast, Capt. Winston—but the dance is mine."

Terry bowed gravely, and stood up for the toast to Jim and me.

Then there began a contest between Terry and Tom Mason for the "honor" of my society.

One side of me seemed to be standing off and wondering why the other side of me didn't enjoy this half-laughing, half-serious competition for my dances. But all of me was a-tingle with awareness of the situation of which I was part.

Neal was leaning over Phoebe so intently that he seemed almost like a tragic young Romeo—but a Romeo with all his boyishness gone.

Evvy, half turning her back to Neal and bending toward Jim with an almost audible call in her wide blue eyes; Betty, grave and quiet—musing, perhaps, Terry's usual devotion.

Virginia, cold and aloof, watching Phoebe and Neal intently, almost unaware of Sheldon's nearness, his impudent glances, his ardor.

There was a tension in the air like the stillness before a summer storm. Then, up spoke Betty:

"Anne, you two honeymooners have bluffed long enough. Now I'm coming down to get acquainted with Mr. Mason, and you are going to stop being the belle of the ball and come up here like a sweet, little old-fashioned wife and give us one more beautiful glimpse of the Jimmies as they are."

There shot through my brain this question: "Can Betty be jealous of Terry?"

But the thought went again, as Evvy lifted her eyes from Jim's face, and set them on Betty's composed features with a long look of undisguised hatred.

Jim rose to greet me, a smile on his lips. He took my hand in his and made a little laughing speech that gave me my first moment of happiness in twenty-four hours.

"Friends, behold the happy Jimmies married. And now to the one dance this game ankle of mine dares venture in an evening—with my Princess Anne!"

Quickly Evvy darted about and fung her command to Neal:

"And as Neal stood up, manful if reluctant—I saw Phoebe's sweet little face cloud over mistily like a rose in a shower.—Copyright, 1920.

SUMMER TASTY THAT APPEALS

Mrs. Edgar A. Perkins' Recipe for Fruit Salad Is a Tip.

"Fruit salad is one of my husband's favorite summer dishes," said Mrs. Edgar A. Perkins of 337 Downey avenue.

"We make it all the time at home, and he can't get too much of it."

"It is very simple in comparison to the intricate and laborious processes of many popular salads."

"Any fruits that are in season can be used very nicely."

"At the present time you can get oranges, bananas, pineapples, cherries and blackberries."

"Dice the fruit into small cubes, and mix thoroughly."

"Then sugar plentifully with powdered sugar."

"Place in the refrigerator for an hour or two before the meal and allow to become thoroughly chilled."

Mrs. Perkins said that the amateur cannot possibly make a mistake in preparing fruit salad, and the resulting concoction is very palatable.

Tried to Teach Kids to Dress With Whip

KANSAS CITY, Kas., July 28.—It cost Mrs. J. O. Broyles a hundred dollar fine to beat her two small stepchildren with a razor strap "because they failed to learn to dress themselves."

The boy's legs were a mass of bruises. The little girl was cut over one eye.

Mrs. Broyles was arrested by a welfare officer on complaint of neighbors.
