

WAR MEMORIAL FOR STATE FAR AWAY AS EVER

Refusal of House to Act on
Two Bills Leaves Senate
Measure Unfinished.

APPEALS MADE IN VAIN

The failure of the house of representatives to carry out the "gentlemen's agreement" to pass county and city memorial bills enabling Indianapolis and Marion county to definitely assume their part of the responsibilities in the erection of the Indiana world war memorial in Indianapolis, today results in the probable failure of the erection of a war memorial as desired by the American legion and other organizations.

The senate, acting through committees, attempted to ascertain, shortly before the final adjournment of the special session of the legislature, if the house would suspend constitutional rules and advance the bills for passage.

The senate committee was informed that the house had failed to suspend rules to advance the bills to third reading.

The senators then informed Lieut. Gov. Bush that it would be impossible to pass the county and city memorial bills at the special session of the legislature.

The senate, blocked by the antagonistic action of the lower house, then was forced to abandon its announced plan of passing the two bills prior to adjournment.

Senators stated that the work of the special session would not and could not be satisfactorily completed unless these two measures should pass.

As the situation stands today there are no acts under which Marion county and the city of Indianapolis can provide for bond issues to raise approximately $50,000,000 as their proposed shares of the expense of the war memorial.

The only legislation enacted by the special session is a so-called Indiana world war memorial bill, which provides for a tax levy sufficient to yield at least $2,000,000 to be used for building the memorial, in addition to setting aside of the present sites of the Indiana School for the Blind and of the state park as the location for this memorial.

WHAT SENATE BILL MAKES POSSIBLE.

This bill makes it possible for the city of Indianapolis to acquire ever acquire lands adjoining the memorial site, to improve them to conform with general architectural plans adopted by the board of trustees of the Indiana world war memorial.

As the world war memorial bill now stands there is not a single clause which compels Marion county and the city of Indianapolis to provide any funds, except the levy which is required of all counties and cities alike.

Although the bill as passed requires the governor to appoint a board of trustees within a limited time, there is nothing which compels the trustees to begin the actual erection of the memorial at a specified time, nor does it make any provisions for supplying funds for the removal and re-establishing of the state school for the blind.

It is feared that no positive steps will be taken in the near future for the actual carrying out of the provisions of the act as applied to the state.

The unsatisfactory status of the memorial project was called to the attention of Lieut. Gov. Bush after a committee from the house waited upon the senate and informed that body that the house was ready to adjourn sine die if the senate had no further business to transact.

It was then that Senator Elmer inquired as to what had become of the county and city memorial bills.

Senator English demanded that a committee be appointed to investigate the cause of the failure of the house to bring the bills up for consideration.

Lieut. Gov. Bush appointed Senators McKinley and Decker to confer with Speaker Eckbach.

It was generally understood in the senate that the county and city memorial measures were to be introduced and passed as compromise bills following the passage of the state memorial bill.

"Are Indianapolis and Marion county trying to dodge the responsibility of paying taxes to erect this memorial?" queried one of the senators, to which Senator Elmer replied:

"That might have some meaning now."

MOTION PICTURE.

Shortly after the conference of the two senators with Speaker Eckbach a motion picture was made by Representative Givan that the constitutional rules be suspended, in order that the city bill, No. 549, could be brought to a passage vote before adjournment.

Representative Givan made a short speech in defense of the bill, asking the question, "Will you permit Indianapolis to honor the men who fought in the recent war?"

The roll was taken and the constitutional rules failed to be suspended at the second attempt to bring it to a point where passage could be voted on.

The vote was 62 ayes to 5 noes.
