

TENNESSEE TO FACE SUFFRAGE VOTE TOMORROW

State's Greatest Orators Prepare for Spectacular Battle.

SIDES PICK SPEAKERS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 12.—A second attempt to prevent action on the ratification of the federal woman's suffrage amendment in the legislature was defeated today when a resolution which would have deferred action on the amendment until the regular session of the legislature in January, 1921, was tabled without a record vote.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 12.—The suffrage amendment to the federal constitution is scheduled to be voted on by both houses of the Tennessee general assembly tomorrow, according to plans of leaders in the fight for ratification.

Tonight will be featured by a grim battle between eminent constitutional authorities on both sides before a hearing of the Senate committee on constitutional amendments of the legislature.

One result of the hearing is to postpone until some undetermined date the huge mass meeting suffrage opponents had arranged for at the Ryman auditorium.

A display of legal acumen and forensic brilliance unequalled in the annals of the batches is expected when the legal luminaries of the suffragists and antisuffragists unliver their heavy artillery.

It will bark late to the days of Henry Clay and Daniel Webster in the United States senate when constitutional problems occupied the minds of congress.

The result of the bitter struggle to debate on the constitutionality of ratification by an extra session of the Tennessee legislature has prevented the argument of many other subjects which anti-suffragists had expected to use with telling effect, and is considered a suffrage victory.

Both sides already have made tentative states of their speakers.

The suffrage cause will be presented by Frank M. Thompson, attorney general of the state, upon whose official ruling Gov. Roberts decided to call a special session of the United States Senate.

James A. Sessions, of Marion, attorney general of the state, will preside over the fourth session.

James A. Conner, of the Marion county criminal court, will lead the discussion at the fifth session.

Only applicants recommended to the committee by the board of directors will be selected for membership.
