

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

A New Series of Young Married Life

By ANN LITTLE

CHAPTER LX (Continued.)

In angry resentment I waited the coming of my guests—and I felt a sign of my feelings flaming in my cheeks when I opened the door at three and found Terry Winston standing there with a strange man—but not Betty.

Terry presented Anthony Norreys, and then began nervously to explain that Mrs. Dalton had thought it best for Betty not to come.

"Because we—three would probably get on better without another—er woman," he brought out jerkily.

Mrs. Dalton, I'm all set for seeing the lady—may I trot right in?"

Almost on the word he popped out of the room, leaving me to face the man so strangely brought to my house. Anthony Norreys was slightly over medium height and thin almost to emaciation. He looked actually ill, but for all this he suggested strength—not weakness. The sweetness of his mouth was belied by a chin so rugged and dominant that it made me a bit afraid until the one illuminating feature of his almost homely face caught and held my eyes. And then I was conscious of nothing but his eyes—ice-blue, keen and penetrating, but, above all, honest—unflinchingly uncompromisingly honest. Strength, sweetness and honesty—they repeated themselves in Anthony Norreys' voice when he spoke.

"Mrs. Harrison, I've come to ask a favor of you. I can use a man over at my place—a confidential assistant. Winston and my friend Betty Brown say Jim Harrison is the man I'm looking for, they say it's his chance, but that I'll never be able to persuade him to take it unless I make him feel I'm in need of a favor—not doing one. In a way that's not quite true. I've a wonderful man in the place I'm offering your husband. He understands"—

"Are you asking me to persuade my husband to—er—this man's job?" I interrupted both.

"Have Betty and Terry made you think I'm so selfish that I'd be a party to this scheme? Must I force Jim to accept charity and take the bread and butter out of another man's mouth?"

"Neither," replied Anthony Norreys quite without resentment. "Dear child, I too am proud. But I'm going to confide in you. See this glove I wear? Well, it covers wood. They got the good old right hand back in the days when Terry and I were together at Verdun. Your husband's ankle rather lays him off real service, also. So if we two can release an able-bodied young American like my assistant, it would make up a bit. The government says I'm welcome to my helper—and he'll stick. I'm buying for England—and some chap with a right fist has to keep the accounts, you see? Don't often get about my troubles like this. But I trust you. Some folks shrink from a man who's maimed."

I laid both my hands on the arm above that bit of wood which was a monument to what he had done for his country. Virginia had been right—it was better that Anthony Norreys' and I had talked alone.

"Thank you for just what you've said. I'm proud you knew you could say it. I won't gush, but I don't feel as if that Hun bullet—maimed you. Instead it may have given you something. * * * I trust you, too, Mr. Norreys, and I promise that my pride won't come between you and anything you and my husband can do to help each other—and our country."—Copyright, 1920.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Samuel M. Roosevelt, 68, artist and sportsman and cousin of the late president, died of hemorrhage of the brain last night at a hotel here.

HOROSCOPE

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

SATURDAY, AUG. 21.

Although Neptune rules strongly for good this day, it is not a fortunate time for most human enterprises, according to astrology.

During this planetary government the mind is likely to be extremely disturbed, clear vision of one's shortcomings being depressing while Neptune is in benefic aspect.

Those who seek to know the future by calm analysis of existing conditions will be confused in all probability, for none can prophesy wisely except those who possess psychic powers and they declare that what is most unexpected to mortal mind will come to pass.

Women are warned against criticism of one another, since stars that are unfriendly to their highest ambitions become strong in their power over human destiny at this time.

During the war the power of thought was strongly recognized, but in the reaction toward materialism it has been so far forgotten that a sensational event will cause astonishment, although its cause might have been removed, the seeds declare.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of travel and change that may not be satisfactory. Danger of money loss is menacing.

Children born on this day may be often involved in difficulties unless trained to habits of exactitude. They are often very artistic.—Copyright, 1920.

The CAR Whose Worth You Know

When you buy an Overland you don't have to take any unproved claim that the car is remarkably easy-riding or that it will stand up under the hardest service conditions for ten thousands of miles or that it is economical to a surpassing degree.

All these points have been proved overwhelmingly and the evidence is open to all.

Before the Overland 4 was presented it was subjected to 250,000 miles of gruelling travel in wild country.

At Houston, Texas, the car was run 25,000 miles with practically no mechanical expense.

Here in Indiana, in zero weather, we ran an Overland 5.452 miles in ONE WEEK, averaging over 20 miles to each gallon of gasoline.

In the Cross-America Economy Run just completed—3,442 miles—the average fuel consumption was less than a gallon for each 27 miles traveled.

We have other evidence, almost without end, showing the same economy and the same durability, while a ride of a few blocks will convince anyone that the New Triplex Springs make this Overland-ride as comfortably as cars of twenty inches longer wheelbase.

This is the car you can buy, in either touring or roadster models, for an initial cash payment of $295—balance on the Gibson Plan.

Investigate—satisfy yourself that no car, no purchase plan, can give you nearly so much.

SAYS HUSBAND HAD RHEUMATISM BAD

Indianapolis lady declares he could not lay on one side from pains and no one could touch him, it hurt so bad.

Muscles in back and shoulders very sore, bowels bound up. Drecto has brought grand relief.

"Many a night the pains have been so bad that my husband couldn't lay on his side, and to touch him gave great pain," said Mrs. Margaret Brown, of 915 Rathbone street, Indianapolis. Mr. Brown has a responsible position with Kingan & Co., packers.

"Rheumatism had him so bad that his muscles in his back, arms, shoulders and legs were very painful. He had terrible headaches and his bowels were bound up all the time, he was in a bad way, suffering day and night."

"We kept hearing about Drecto and what it was doing for a lot of people, so we talked it over together and he decided to get a bottle. That has proven to be the best thing he ever did, after a few days his constipation was gone and his bowels were regular as a clock. He is now taking on his second bottle and is feeling fine, most all the pains are gone and his side never bothers him. Sleeps sound all night long and goes to work feeling fresh and full of energy. Drecto sure has done him a lot of good."

Drecto acts on a sluggish liver and puts new life into it; overcomes stubborn constipation; strengthens weak kidneys; aids the stomach to digest the food and purifies the blood thereby banishing catarrh and rheumatism.

All good druggists now sell Drecto and it is being especially introduced in Indianapolis by Clark & Cade's Clapgood Hotel Drug Store—Advertisement.
