 BETTER SCHOOLS
TO BE PLANNED

Effort Will Be Made to Raise

State's Educational Standing.

State committee of the better schools campaign were expected to meet this afternoon in the office of L. N. Hines, superintendent of public instruction.

Among those interested in the movement who have accepted invitations to attend are: Father Ryan of St. Mary's of the Woods; John C. Snyder, Crawfordsville; Mrs. Ella Aehrer, school nurse, Anderson; Frank Jones, Mrs. Ada B. Jones, Terre Haute; and Mrs. Edith H. Edmondson, Bloomington.

A campaign to get Indiana schools from seventeenth to first place on national educational records will be conducted from Nov. 7 to Nov. 16, inclusive, with feature programs.

Suggestions for the drive include the enrollment of the chambers of commerce, Rotary clubs, Kiwanis clubs, women's clubs and similar organizations.

The program in each place will be held under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The campaign will be carried into all school districts.

The program outlined by Mr. Hines for the schools includes:

Music—Pupils ("America").

Openings—Remarks the Purpose of the Campaign—The Chairman.

Music—Pupils.

Why Indiana Is Seventeenth in Education.

What Indiana Needs to Do to Get First Place in Education—Citizen.

Give the Boys and Girls a Chance—Pupil.

What a Model School Ought to Be—Citizen.

What This Community Needs—Citizen.

General discussion and preparation of resolutions, spelling match, ciphering match, athletic games, concert, club work or other activity.

In connection with the better schools campaign a meeting of county superintendents of the State will be held in the Maypool Hotel Wednesday, Oct. 20.

PUSS IN BOOTS JR.

By David Cory.

Now, as soon as the little old man had lit his great, long whistle, as I mention in the story before this, another little old man stepped out of the woods near by and held a lighted torch in his hand. And then the first three little men ran toward him, and so did Puss, for he was curious to know what they were about.

"Go away," said the little old man with the great sack, "or I'll put you in my sack."

"Be gone," cried the next little man, "You have lost it, you clown," cried the little torch man, and he would have burned the little bag man if Puss hadn't thrust his sword between them.

"Maybe I have a key that will fit," said Puss, and he put his paw in his pocket and drew out a golden key, but where he got it he could not tell you. But we don't care for won'ts and such things, that key of Puss Junior's fitted the lock perfectly.

Well, after they had all gone inside, the door closed all by itself, and when Puss looked about him he saw he was in the palace of the Little King of the Mountain, for there he sat, a little Gnome with a crown upon his head, on a throne set with sparkling diamonds and precious stones.

"What's that, my trusty Four?" cried the King, "where have you brought with you?" and he looked curiously, but not unkindly, at brave little Puss Junior.

Who held the six in his hand, "or I will chop off your ears."

"Don't come a step nearer or I will deafen you with the noise of my whistle," said the third little old man, and the little man with the torch said, "I'll burn you up if you come near me."

"I don't want anything from you," said Puss. "But I would like to see what you are going to do." And then the four little men disappeared together, and the King looked over their shoulders at Puss, and after that the little torch man said, "If you'll promise not to tell what you see you shall come with us." So Puss promised and then he followed the little old men into a deep passage that led into the side of the mountain. And if it was a good place to be, he would have been there all day.
