

HUNDREDS SIGN FOR UNIVERSITY NIGHT COURSES

Extension Offices Besieged With Applicants for Information.

MANY SUBJECTS TAUGHT

To pass an hour in the offices of the Indiana University extension division in the Merchants Bank building and listen to the eager persons who come in to find out about the courses being conducted at night, is to be convinced that there are many aspiring men and women who aren't afraid of work hard for an education.

What was that? Too old—school days over—no such thing?

Among the constant stream of students were several whose hair was tinged with gray.

"What if I do work all day," remarked one "student," "it isn't going to hurt me to spare a couple of hours twice a week instead of going to a movie show."

COURSES DESIGNED TO MEET MODERN DEMANDS.

In these days when every one is a specialist in his own field, there is need to have more than a general knowledge of English and arithmetic, but the best positions go to those who have both special and general education.

To meet these demands of present day business, the courses in night schools are being arranged.

The American Institute of Banking, recognizing the importance of higher education in organizing four classes of students under the auspices of the Extension Division, namely, accounting and bookkeeping, public speaking, and two in banking.

Last year seventy students were enrolled in similar courses and the Credit Men's Association had eighty-six students attending the course, given by Asst. Prof. J. E. Moffat.

Four years ago last month the Extension Center at Indianapolis opened its first classes with an enrollment of 400 students.

Each year it has grown and last year almost 1,000 persons were enrolled in the late afternoon and early evening classes.

A surprisingly large number of persons this year are preparing to take up the new three-year courses, which offer a certificate in accounting, insurance, advertising or secretarial work.

Thus, these people studying from six to eight hours a week in the evening classes will gain an education not only in the subject in which they have specialized, but also in business English, law, psychology, geography and history.

SALESMANSHIP COURSES ARE ATTRACTING MANY.

The three-year courses are not limited to three-year students, but are open to those who desire only individual subjects.

Stenographers, accountants, salesmen, and even heads of departments are inquiring in large numbers, recognizing the fact that trained salespeople make fewer mistakes and a knowledge of the fundamentals of their business means more confidence in their institution.

"It Pays to Advertise" has become the slogan of the hour, judging from the large number of enrollments in advertising courses this fall.

While many indicate a desire for only general knowledge applicable to their particular line of business, many say they intend to take up advertising work generally.

The former courses will cover such important subjects as the kinds of advertising, mediums, purchasing power of readers, position of advertisements, illustrations, rates, ways of securing attention, display types, size of advertisements, emphasis, and use of color.

Closely allied to these courses are those in the psychology of advertising and selling, the psychological problems of employment, management, elementary psychology, business psychology and personal efficiency.

Spanish and French courses are proving as popular as they are among the resident students at Bloomington, and there is considerable demand for such advanced courses as labor problems, public and corporation finance.

CULTURAL CLASSES ALWAYS LEAD OTHERS.

But Hoosiers are interested in something else besides the psychology of advertising and selling, the psychological problems of employment, management, elementary psychology, business psychology and personal efficiency.

There are courses in types of English literature, English composition, story telling and dramatic art.

There is a fine arts course in which illustrated lectures in medieval art, including a study of the cathedrals, churches and halls of the middle ages, both from the standpoint of art and of their significance from the historic, social and economic points.

Then, there are courses for the teachers in the educational department.

The development of the Constitution and the origin of political parties, the Monroe Doctrine and the great sectional issues of the past decade before the Civil War will be taken up in a new course in American history.

Find Girl's Refusal to Eat Not Insanity

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 6.—Bessie Florence Morris, 16-year-old daughter of Marshall Morris, was released from the "Hippocampus" County farm Tuesday morning and was declared to be sane on a writ of habeas corpus.

The girl, whose mother died when she was 5 years old, told Judge Vinton that, under the influence of eight stepbrothers, she lost her temper and refused to eat.

The girl says she always knew what was going on, but had no one to whom she could appeal.

Arrangements are being made to send her to White's Institute at Wabash.

New Instructor in Extension Course

Lander McClintock, who recently came to Indiana University as assistant professor of French, will teach the Indiana University extension courses in French this fall.

Dr. McClintock is author of "Sainte-Berthe's Critical Theory and Practice" and "The Contemporary Drama of Italy," and has contributed to the North American Review and the The Drama magazine.

He will teach courses in elementary French, French composition and conversation, survey of French literature and modern French drama.

FRANKLIN QUILTS; CITY FORCE AGOG

Mystery of Demotion Deepens—Many Rumors Heard.

That the Jewett "good government" political machine and the police department are not working smoothly is evident from the fact that Harry M. Franklin resigned from the police department last night after he had been reduced to the rank of patrolman.

The demotion came from "high up" is about all that can be learned. Franklin has always been a Republican.

It is presumed that Franklin has in some way displeased "some one." A few months ago he was reduced from captain to the rank of sergeant and yesterday from sergeant to patrolman, which brought about his resignation.

What has Franklin done? That question has been asked a hundred times around police headquarters and the only answer seems to be "he's in hot water with the city hall gang."

"ARGUING POLITICS" MAY BE CHARGE, IS REPORT.

It was unofficially reported that Franklin had "argued politics" in public and for that reason, although a Republican, was reduced to the rank of patrolman by a Republican board of safety.

Franklin, years ago was made a drillmaster at police headquarters by a Republican board of safety.

But policemen don't like to drill and Franklin was promoted to the job of helping keep records around police headquarters and later made a captain.

When Samuel W. Perrot became chief of police he knew only too well of the political power and activity of Captain Franklin and reduced him to the rank of patrolman. "Perrot said he might have to patrol in the 'ragweeds,'" Franklin resigned.

For a time Franklin was a juvenile court probation officer, but when the Republican "good government" ring came into power he again became a police official.

"INSPECTOR FRANKLIN" MISSED CONNECTIONS.

That the plans of the "good government" gang were not perfected at that time was evident from the fact that on the cards accompanying a number of floral offerings sent to George V. Coffin, who was made chief of police, were congratulations for "Chief Coffin, Inspector of Franklin" and three capitals.

However, Streit was made inspector and Franklin a captain and that was really the first slip that was experienced by the "men behind Franklin."

Then last May, after Coffin had lost his power as police chief, Franklin was reduced to sergeant, and the end of his police career came yesterday.

The board of public safety is keeping mum, and Franklin has no comment to make.

No wonder that the wise ones are saying the "Jewett machine can't put over everything it wants to do and still keep peace in the Republican family."

Some are wondering if the reported attempt to lift the jid just before election for the favored few Republican machine men has had any bearing on the Franklin case.

The grand lodge voted to devote money to be received from the Pythian war relief fund to the relief of disabled K. of P. soldiers.

All grand lodges of the order are to have refunded money contributed by them to the war relief fund which was not used during the war.

The Indiana lodge contributed $27,000. Grand Chancellor Neal, Grand Master of the Exchequer Morris and Grand Keeper of Records and Seal Brown will have charge of the fund.

JAPAN WISHED CABLE CONTROL

Pacific Line Proposal May Come Up Again.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Efforts by Japan to control a cable across the Pacific ocean between the United States and Japan came to light here today.

A proposal was made some time ago with the approval of the Mikado government that the United States and Japan cooperate in building a cable across the Pacific.

The plan was rejected because of the insistence of Japan that the cable be controlled by a Japanese company.

This proposal was regarded significant here because of the possibility of the Japanese delegation bringing up the plan again at the preliminary meeting here Friday of the five great powers in connection with the international communication conference.

Should the proposal again be broached it is believed Japan will modify the plan with a view of meeting the objection of the United States.
