A Description of What Has Happened to the "DEMON OF HIGH PRICES"

Over his mutilated form stand scores and scores of mourners, who tear at their hair and bite their finger nails while they yearn for the days when the "DEMON OF HIGH PRICES" ruled with an iron grip on the hungry throats of the consumer, who took from him who had to sell, a small portion for his money, whether or not he should have received from him a larger one.

Mourners of the dead, dry away your tears and be happy that the consumer will now have a show and will henceforth from his throne at the Piggly Wiggly wield his sceptre in the interest of his own stomach and his own pocket-book.

That which is good and better than the old, no man should try to spill mud in its pathway. This time, though, mud or no mud, opposition or no opposition, the better thing is going to travel along its way providing for the consumer cleaner and lower-priced groceries of the same kind that have been and are now selling at higher prices in those stores still operating along old lines.

Every item is plainly marked. No clerks to argue with you, trying to persuade you into buying what you don't want to buy. You can wait on yourself in a hurry, or you can be as slow as you desire to be.

A basket is loaned FREE in which you may collect the different articles you desire to purchase—all packages wrapped FREE at the bundle wrapper's desk.

If you want to visit the Piggly Wiggly just to look through and see the system without buying anything, you will be welcome to call, and nobody will ask you why you didn't buy anything.
