

Escaped Prisoner Some Marathoner

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 29.—Robert Morgan, a negro convict, should have entered the Olympic games, so County Warden Charles Collier informed Judge Calhoun, when Morgan was arraigned for escaping from the county convict camp. The warden's suggestion was based on his statement that the convict outran him and a posse of officers for a distance of twenty-five miles.

"That negro is the fastest runner I ever saw—if he had entered the Olympic games he would have been an easy winner," remarked Warden Collier to the court.

Asked by the judge what caused him to escape, Morgan replied:

"The guard had to lay down his gun for a moment, and I thought it was my chance."

He was given an additional six months for his break. He already was serving a term of eighteen months.

King Views Vatican Gardens First Time

ROME, Oct. 29.—King Victor Emmanuel set eyes for the first time upon a portion of his capital when he flew over Rome and the surrounding hills in dirigible 34, according to a description of the flight printed by the Messagero.

Flying low, the newspaper says, the dirigible passed over the Vatican gardens.

Pope Benedict was driving in the garden, it is said, and hearing the dirigible, watched it for several moments.

He was clearly visible from the airship.

BRAND COUNTY BOARD RECORDS NOT ACCURATE

have been done by prison labor, it is then, only, that one begins to be appalled by the magnitude of the cost of repairs of one little stretch of county highway less than three miles in length. This particular road district had on Jan. 1, 1918, approximately twenty-five miles of improved roads, which disclosed a cost of $1,260 per mile for the entire district. The entire mileage in the county at this time, as shown by the records in the office of the county highway superintendent, is 637.4 miles. The total expenditures from the gravel road repair fund for the year 1918 was $317,830.86, making an average cost per mile for the whole county of $499.

(State Board of Accounts Report, May 26, 1919.)

On Aug. 2, 1918, bonds in the sum of $100,000 were sold to pay for the construction of a bridge at Santa Fe, over Fall Creek. In 1918 there was paid on this contract on account of this bridge, $10,413.10, and for the purchase of ground for approaches, $3,100, leaving a balance from the bond issues for construction, Dec. 31, 1918, of $86,486.90. The work of building the bridge was at a standstill for some time on account of litigation, and in the meantime, as shown by another tabulation, the funds have dwindled away on account of the depleted condition of the treasury until at the present time the county commissioners are in an embarrassing position of having spent the money and the greater portion of the cost of the bridge construction is yet to be paid.

Following these excerpts the booklet takes up instances of waste and neglect otherwise exposed as follows:

The commissioners of Marion County

let a contract to the Sheehan Construction Company for the building of a permanent highway on what is known as the Michigan road on the continuation of Northwestern avenue.

The contract included the raising of the bridge over White River to the level of the new road.

Later the commissioners let a contract to W. H. Price, receiver for the A. J. Yawyer Company, for a new bridge over White River at this same point.

Then they attempted to deduct that part of the Sheehan contract that called for the raising of the old bridge and the building of approaches and they entered into an agreement to deduct $25,000 from the Sheehan contract price.

A. L. Donaldson, civil engineer and field examiner of the State Board of Accounts, examined these two contracts and reports that the commissioners released the Sheehan Construction Company from what the county engineer had estimated would be $18,844.98 worth of work in consideration of the contractor deducting $25,000.

Donaldson also estimated that owing to the increases in construction costs the county would lose $25,226 because of the release of the Sheehan Construction Company and he recommended that the county bring suit to save a total of $43,643.88.

Total cost of courthouse employees, 1918, $18,327.03.

An analysis of the payment of the salaries included in the foregoing tabulation discloses the fact that the regular pay roll for janitors was $100 per month until two or three months prior to the primary election, when it was increased to $350 per month, then immediately dropped after said primary to $400, where it remained for the remainder of the year.

The total cost of janitors and other employees as shown above seems to be exceedingly high in proportion to the size and general condition of the building, and if this cost is to remain the standard, certainly the taxpayers of Marion County are entitled to excellent service.

(State Board of Accounts report, May 26, 1919.)

Mr. Shank and Mr. George, in my absence, called in the courthouse janitors and raised their salaries $10 a month and incidentally mentioned that they would be candidates.—Joseph G. Hayes, Republican county commissioner, in published statement Sept. 25, 1919.

Cost of janitor service, Jan. 1 to Aug. 1, 1920, $15,147.44, and the appropriation for 1920 of approximately $20,000 will be expended. (Auditor's record.)

The cost of janitor service for the Board of Trade building, containing 210 rooms, for the year ending May 21, 1920, was $7,900.—Board of directors' report. (Report of State Board of Examiners, May 26, 1919.)

Referring to the primary and election of 1918, the State Board of Accounts reports that the county commissioners paid $837.50 for the work of putting $31.63 worth of paint on election booths and putting $5.31 worth of hardware on the booths.

The cost of repairing and painting the booths and ballot boxes in the sum of $604.93, when added to the cost of the same work preceding the general election of $117.20, makes a total of $1,118.13. In view of the fact that the total cost of all material used was $95.94, this convinces one that the laborers were not greatly overworked.
